Winners

Ryley won the county's senior boys curling playoffs during a bonspiel which was held in Holden and went on to win regional and zone competitions in Forestburg and Camrose and then gave a good account of themselves in the provincial playdowns. Left to right are Brad Helleksen (skip), Tim Halverson, Steven Staal and Murray Gara.

Around the town

The Golden Club tea was very well attended and Mr. Moser from the Department of Parks and Wildlife presented a cheque for $5,000 to the recreation board. Out of this, the Golden Club will get 50 padded chairs.

4-H Club also gave a cheque for one hundred and forty dollars from their bingo held in November.

Deadline nears

The Department of the Solicitor General, Motor Vehicles Division, is now reminding Albertans that the deadline to mail in motor vehicle licence renewal forms is [illegible].

Owners of motor vehicles are urged to mail in the renewal forms immediately, in order to meet the final deadline of April 30, 1984.

Additionally, the owners of vehicles in the CV, DU, F, PSV and PT truck categories are also reminded that the deadline for renewing those licences has been extended to June 30.

To date, approximately 896,700 (85%) of all Albertan motor vehicles have been registered through the newly introduced staggered vehicle registration system.

The Motor Vehicles Division is receiving an average of 8,000 renewals per day, and expects to renew almost 1.4 million motor vehicle registrations by the final deadline of April 30, 1984.

As Chartered Accountants, we are concerned about your total business needs a healthy agriculture means a better lifestyle

Agriculture generates 65 per cent of Alberta's gross provincial product. Thirty per cent of our workers gain their livelihoods in jobs related to and dependent on agriculture.

Agriculture strengthens our dollar as a leading factor in Canada's balance of trade. Its contribution to our economy benefits us all.

Agriculture keeps us:

warm
with wool sweaters and down filled jackets, stylish
in leather boots, healthy
with insulin, heparin, and artificial heart valves, clean
with egg shampoo and natural bristles, creative with wax crayons, ink and glue, spirited
with beer, wines and liquor, well fed
with an abundant wholesome supply of food.

Ryley Legion active

The Ryley Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion will open a fund-raising campaign next month (April).

The objective of the drive is to raise $15,000 for an addition to the existing Legion Hall.

Raising funds won't be new to members as they recently contributed $977 to the Ryley Sunshine Club to assist with a games room in the seniors facility.

A raffle was held for a VCR which was won by Siegurd Snortheim.

Most of the labour required for construction on the expansion program will be contributed by members and part will be contracted.

Contributions to the building fund are now being accepted and any gift of $50 or more will see the donor's name placed on a plaque.

Ryley Legion will be the site of a Zone Rally on May 26th during which the Ladies Auxiliary will cater to a buffet dinner and a dance has been planned.

Just recently, a team from Ryley travelled to Fort McMurray where they participated in provincial Legion curling playdowns.

The Legion also assists in minor sports in the village and they assist in sponsorship of RCSCC Nootka (sea cadets) and this year, will be sponsoring Cheryl Andrukow for a week-long trip to Ottawa to visit the Terry Fox Youth Centre.

In addition, Legion members will again be responsible for the holding of Ryley's annual Sports Day.

Ryley Legion is open every Saturday (for members and their guests) from eight o'clock in the evening until one o'clock in the morning.

Jevne speaks in Holden

by Joan Murray

Last week was Agriculture Week and Jacquie Jevne, a member of a four generation farm family, was the guest speaker for a presentation made in the Holden Arts Centre last Wednesday evening.

She knows well the intricacies of maintaining and mediating the relationships created when families farm together.

The purpose of her speech was to share her experiences with other farm families who may benefit from them. The only thing she said that would compare to a farm family [illegible] was that all the small businessmen who travel [illegible] the store, working while his wife attended the counter and the kids helped out after school.

She was a city girl who married into a farm family and found the adjustment from urban to rural life overwhelming. Fluctuating income, poor water and sewage problems (or none at all), fear of livestock and "backing up to an auger" were some of the problems she had to adjust to.

She and her husband, Maurice, began farming together on property which was homesteaded by his father in the Round Hill District. Inevitable conflicts that had to be dealt with were ownership issues, differences in needs, values and goals, and lack of trust. These factors were discussed at length and enhanced by the use of cartoons about farm family [illegible].

She did not wish to give a great deal of advice and cautioned the listeners to remember that "Advice is counsel which is asked for," when dealing with one another.

Some important points to remember in multiple family farm life are: work at understanding each other; don't take another person's choices as criticism of one's own; be clear on rules as to who owns what, what can be borrowed and what is shared; respect confidences, try to keep your mouth shut. Limit your advice and above all keep your sense of humor when mistakes are made; risk new behaviour by talking about problems; avoid playing games to get attention; communicate — listen! "God gave us two ears and one mouth. Sometimes we act as though we have two mouths and only one ear," she said.

Tofield Club presented a sketch of three monologues dealing with various points of view re. [illegible] the dilemma of a city girl marrying into a farm family.

The city girl was played by Rosa Siemens, a grade twelve student. The male roles were played by two grade seven students, Wayne Molengraaf as the farm boy and Ted Wood as his father.

These three students from Mrs. Watson's Drama class wrote their own dialogue and researched it with a survey of other high school students' opinions and views.

At the end of the sketch, Mrs. Jevne commented that the monologue of the city girl was very much like her own thoughts when she was considering marrying into a farm family. She then invited the three actors to join her on the stage for a question and answer session with the audience.

The students explained that during their research other issues came up. Pressure felt when the father was injured added to confusion when confronted with the decision as to whether one wanted to be a farmer or not. Females generally felt there was no [illegible] to enable both career and [illegible] who should take over when the parents retired. Many expressed an honest interest in [illegible].

The question "At what age should one consider retirement?" was of considerable interest. Jacquie said it was a matter of personal choice. Passing on a farm is not an easy project. Consult a lawyer and get advice from the Department of Agriculture, develop a plan, then act. One [illegible] decide to [illegible] and then set out a plan of action.

One final question of how one divides a farm between several children was brought up. "It is not an easy decision," she answered, and went on to say that children would have to accept the decision of the parents with no animosity towards one another. It was her observation that often the farm girls were better educated than the boys to better prepare them for a life off the farm.

Recreation discussed

by Joan Murray

At a meeting last week, the Tofield Recreation Board discussed a blanket request from the Minister of Recreation regarding the doing out of grant monies.

One source of funds, the MCR grant, expires this year.

The Department of Parks and Recreation would like recreation departments across the province to consider whether it should be repeated.

[illegible] of all Lotto funds is another source of funds available. The combined total of the two grants amounts to [illegible] province-wide recreation activities.

The Parks and Recreation department is asking for ideas and opinions on how these funds should be used.

Recently $6000 was received from Recreation, Parks and Wildlife for the purchase of chairs to be used by the Arena and the Golden Club. The chairs are on order and should be arriving soon.

The 1984 Tofield Parks and Recreation spring programs have started with dancercise, ladies' afternoon aerobics, and ladies' evening aerobics. Details can be obtained from the Town Office.

July 1st celebrations will take place over a period of two days this year and the Recreation Department is looking for chairmen for this event.

Two Agricultural Society members are to attend the Town council meeting regarding the parks foreman position for this summer.

The planning of the summer parks program was discussed as well as the acquisition of grants for this project.

Ryley debates school issues

by Joan Murray

Much debating between parents and School Board members went on at the public meeting held in Ryley last Tuesday evening.

As a whole, parents in Ryley seemed to feel that the benefits of Mr. Schoeman's K-9, K-6 with grades 10, 11 and 12 proposal were viable but, questioned whether they were enough to change the school. The main alternative that came up was for Ryley to remain K-12 and have the Holden senior students come to Ryley and have a K-9 facility in Holden to accommodate their area.

Mr. Schoeman agreed that the Ryley facilities are good but, his solution offers a concentrate to a higher standard of education "I am firmly convinced this is the way to go," he stated.

Several times the question of when the decision on this change would be made, came up. The Board will decide at the March 19th meeting if everything is in place.

During the question period, a number of community members seemed to be greatly concerned with the economic impact on the two areas. One gentleman stated that he had made a personal study of areas where grades 10, 11 and 12 were removed from the school and concluded that the population drops and does not recover.

It was asked why they had not considered Camrose or Vegreville for the seniors. In answer to that, Schoeman said that they wanted to keep the students in the County of Beaver.

The construction plans for the Holden School will be more closely looked into

Pilon hired

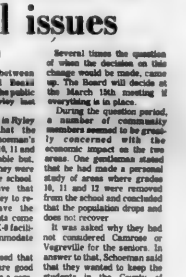
by Joan Murray

Twenty-eight year-old Lori Pilon has succeeded Neil Brodie as Administrator for the Town of Tofield.

Mrs. Pilon completed her studies for this position at NAIT before interning for nine months in Barrhead.

She is presently taking University Courses by correspondence to achieve her certification in Local Government.

She and her husband, Leo moved to Tofield on March 1st. They have a seven year-old daughter, Dawn. Leo is a hockey referee in his spare time when he is not studying for his Radio Broadcasting course or working on the weekends as an announcer in Edmonton.



Lori was born and raised around Hardisty. Her plans now are to settle in Tofield for at least eight or ten years. She has found the people in this community to be very friendly and helpful since she arrived.

A couple of sops

Attorney General Crawford seems to have offered the public a couple of sops in the storm of questions over administration of justice in Alberta.

His deputy, Ross Paisley, has requested a transfer to the Board of Public Utilities, to take some of the attention and the heat off the Attorney General's department, and Edmonton lawyer Howard Irving has been assigned to conduct an inquiry into the way things are done.

Isn't that great! That will take care of all the trouble, won't it? Now we'll show them how honestly we run justice in the province! Now we'll show the public there's nothing to get fussed about . . . at least, not if you don't look too deeply.

In the first place, it seems to us, a really responsible minister would already have tendered his resignation, not simply switched people about. It's only months ago that the British House of Commons upheld the tradition, seemingly with less public demand.

But we can't begin to follow British tradition in this country . . . after all, where would Mr. Lougheed turn if he lost yet another of his trusted patio party? You have to agree, the resources we've given him are slim indeed.

The appointment of Mr. Irving to conduct an inquiry has drawn great criticism from opposition members, essentially Grant Notley, and we can't help believe it may be well founded.

We have the highest respect for Mr. Irving. He is an acknowledged expert in law. But he is also acknowledged a Conservative supporter. As such, it is hard for the public to be certain his viewpoint may not be biased. It is beyond belief that somewhere in this province there is not a lawyer of roughly equal competence, whose political persuasion may be along other lines, who might be relied on to search for trouble, for shortcomings, who might even bring a vindictive attitude to the inquiry.

If there is nothing to hide, why was not such an appointment made? After all, clearance from this kind of inquirer would be infinitely more believeable, infinitely more reassuring.

We come back to the old aphorism about justice being also seen to be done.

Game farming in Alberta

Surveys carried out by the University of Alberta indicate that there is good public support for a revision to The Wildlife Act, scheduled for the spring session of the Alberta Legislature, that will legalize the commercial production of game animals. However, opposition to this practice has been expressed by some [illegible] sportsmen.

Dr. Robert Hudson, associate professor of wildlife productivity and management at the university, says the opposition stems mainly from an incomplete understanding of what game farming is and what it can offer. He points out that commercial game production involves the use of the province's wildlife resources in a way that will benefit farmers, native people and all Albertans.

Concern has been expressed by some that game farming will spell the end of the wilderness in Alberta. "It is true", says Dr. Hudson, "that predators, like the timber wolf, will have to be controlled, that some forage production and winter feeding will have to be provided and that access to public big game hunting will have to be controlled. For this reason I believe that game farming should be carried out on Indian and Metis land; where public access is already limited, and on private land where present agricultural practices have left little wildlife habitat".

He goes on to point out that it is also true that many of the white-tailed deer that are harvested in Alberta each year come from private land, but that it is only sound management to have non-hunted refuges scattered through out the agricultural area to serve as a restocking reservoir for such animals. Both moose and deer are able to move freely over and under conventional game fences. And Dr. Hudson claims that if game farmers were permitted to raise wapiti, this species would again be seen in areas of the province where they have not been seen for more than one hundred years. He also points out that the resultant increase in pasture land from the commercial raising of game animals would mean a better quality of habitat for other wildlife species than is provided by cultivated fields.

Another concern expressed by both wildlife managers and sportsmen is that the commercial production of game animals could lead to widespread illegal dealings in wildlife products. Dr. Hudson says it must be recognized that the economic motive for such dealings already exists and will continue to exist regardless of whether or not a commercial game production industry is developed. Because a legal supply of wildlife products would stabilize prices, it should actually go a long way, in Dr. Hudson's opinion, towards reducing the incentive to deal in illegal products.

Then there are those who would argue that illegal products could be "laundered" through a formal marketing system. However, Dr. Hudson thinks this would be unlikely, at least in the case of venison, even under existing controls. He points out that the federal government's meat inspection regulations require that all animals must be inspected before they are slaughtered, and that problems that could arise from the illegal sale of antlers, for example, and breeding stock, could be avoided by well designed legislation.

Still another misconception that is held by some is that land which is suitable for the commercial production of game animals presently supports a high wildlife population. Although game farming may be viable on marginal lands, which presently provide the least disturbed wildlife habitat, the best areas for this type of farming are those that are classified as good agricultural land. Hence, most game farms will be established in these areas.

P-o-o-r fishermen

Among the 'scandals' hitting the news these days is a confidential report of a 1982 sweep by federal Revenue Canada which audited more than 8,000 Canadian fishermen. The sweep turned up $138 million in unreported income, mostly in the Atlantic region.

A Newfoundland lawyer who assisted with the report, however, hastens to reassure his readers there were only a few cases of major evasion, and that most of the fishermen affected had incomes below the poverty line.

Below the poverty line? We don't know what the level is, but $138 million divided by 8,000 means an average . . . unreported . . . income of $17,250. If most of them were really below the poverty line, that means a few must have had incomes in the hundreds of thousands of dollars . . . all unreported too.

We don't understand the fishing business well enough to know how workers might feel they could 'hide' that much money and not report on it, but it shows clearly at least one thing, that when people who earn any level of income lose confidence in the way their taxes are being spent, when they feel they and the government are not getting value for the tax dollar, when they feel the level of taxation has risen to the realms of confiscation, even normally law-abiding citizens decide to take matters into their own hands as far as they're able.

And evade the tax.

Save money by wintering bees

There is a definite monetary advantage in favor of overwintering bee operations compared with package bee operations, according to a study carried out by Alberta Agriculture in 1982.

Based on a comparison of cost and return data provided by apiarists who were familiar with both types of operation, and on the assumption that the amount of honey produced was the same in both cases, the study showed a positive return on investment of $3.01 per hive for the overwintering group. This situation was in sharp contrast to the package bee group which showed a negative return on investment of $6.79 per hive. Total production costs for the overwintering group were $131.66 per hive compared with $140.41 for the package bee group. Expressed on a per pound of honey sold basis, the cost for the overwintering group was 82c compared with 88c for the package bee group.

The difference in costs between the two groups was mainly due to the price of the package bees, as opposed to overwintering costs; the amount of sugar used; and the cost of labor.

In the 1982 study an average honey yield of 160 pounds per hive and an average wax yield of 1.6 pounds per hive, for a total value of $102.80, were assumed for both types of operation. However, in actual fact, overwintered hives have shown a significant yield advantage in some [illegible] package bee operations. For example, a 1980 study based on actual prod[illegible] a difference of more than 57 pounds per hive in favor of the overwintered hives.

The 1982 study also [illegible] a breakdown of costs for the two types of operation. It shows the cost of queens for the overwintering group averaged $1.68 per hive or 1.5 per cent of their cash costs, while the cost of bees at $25.83 per hive for the package bee operations represented 29.9 per cent of this group's cash [illegible].

Feed, labor and depreciation costs were all higher for the overwintering operations compared with the package bee operations. The difference between the two were $10.20 per hive for feed, $2.50 per hive for labor and $3.33 per hive for depreciation. However, the interest on operating capital was $7.13 per hive for the package bee group compared with only $6.04 per hive for the overwintering group due to the higher cash costs of the [illegible].

The above information comes from a publication entitled "An Economic Comparison of Wintering and Package Bees in the Peace River Region" (Agdex 821-14).

Dear Sir,

I am trying to re-unite twin sisters who have been separated for more than eighty years and would be most grateful if you would make their story public.

Eliza (on whose behalf I am writing) and Harriet Flynn were born August 1, 1901 in Hexham, Northumberland, England to Dorothy Ann, wife of John Flynn, a plasterer. Shortly after birth, Eliza was adopted privately. Harriet and her mother came to Canada round about 1912. Eighty-two year old Eliza, who still lives in Hexham, is very anxious to find her long lost twin sister Harriet or Harriet's children.

[illegible] in the U.K. has [illegible] the last news of Harriet occurred in 1953 when she was reported to be living in Toronto with her husband and three children, two boys and a girl. Unfortunately the name of Harriet's husband is not known. Eliza and Harriet have an older half-brother Billy McGarity who is known to have lived in Canada and to have worked for Canadian Pacific in the early 1930's [illegible] on the North Atlantic [illegible] liners.

If Harriet or her family recognize themselves from this outline, or if anyone else has information about Harriet and/or Billy McGarity or their descendents please write to me at the above address.

Snowbirds gather in Arizona

A picnic was held at the Kiwanis Park in Tempo, Arizona Feb. 13th for 64 Camrose and vicinity folks. A gorgeous day and most enjoyable reunion. A meeting was held before lunch and Helen Myers, convener for 1984 asked for 1985 volunteers to enlarge the interest displayed. Herb Ross and Oscar Malmo were elected. They expect 300 to gather next year.

Dates and places will be announced in October before the snowbirds leave for Arizona.

Manure as fertilizer

When farmers intend to apply manure to their land it is more valuable if incorporated as soon as possible. That is the advice of Alberta Agriculture district agriculturist at Rocky Mountain House.

Phil Dixon, D.A. states 20 per cent of the nitrogen that is available from manure is lost in the manure is not incorporated into the soil for several days after application. If the manure is left sitting on top of the soil for a week or more 50 per cent is lost.

Dixon said, "In view of today's high fertilizer prices it is well worth while to use manure from a feedlot or a manure pit to improve the levels of nutrients in the soil." Solid cattle manure contains an average of 14 pounds of nitrogen, four pounds of phosphorous and nine pounds of potassium per ton. Hence, 15 tons of solid cattle manure per acre would provide 210 pounds of potassium as well as a variety of other nutrients that are beneficial to crops.

Dixon points out that not the full amount of these nutrients will be available to a crop in the year that the manure is applied to the land. He says about 50 per cent of the nitrogen, 40 per cent of the phosphorous and 90 per cent of the potassium in the manure will be available in the year of application.

BETWEEN THE COVERS

On the new book display this week, you will see several biographies:

"Bypass" by Tony Foster is the story of a Canadian adventurer whose life-style made it necessary to undergo a triple-bypass heart operation. "The Book of Canadian Winners and Heroes" salutes Canadians in every field, from the time of Confederation to the present. "Miners and Mountaineers" by Fred J. Peel is his account of mining and surviving all across the northern parts of Canada, from before the first World War.

Nancy Ross has written a story of love and tragedy in her account of her husband's terminal illness. "From This Day Forward" Marian Fowler presents accounts of 'five gentlewomen in Canada' in her book "The Embroidered Tent". stories of pioneering days.

On the fiction side, look for Laura Hobson's "The Tenth Month"; Robert Elegant's "Mandarin" and a collection of mystery stories, in "Top Crime".

As the hockey season nears its end, a book on young superstars in the sport should be interesting "The New Breed", by Stan Fischler.

And finally, for readers interested in endangered species of animals, or in reading about other countries, "Gorillas in the Mist" by Dian Fossey and "Operation White Lion" by Chris McBride will both be good choices.

This month is Nutrition Month, so you may have noticed through various advertising campaigns Tofield Library has a number of good books on this topic, as well as many cookbooks with a variety of ideas for well-balanced meals Tofield Hospital's Dietician will be putting a display in the library for the week of March 18-24, so be sure to come in and take a look.

Library hours are Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-5 and 6-9, Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-4.

Spilstead news items

by M. Fisher

On March 3, 36 Guides and Pathfinders gathered in Hay Lakes for their Craft Fair. In attendance were 14 Pathfinders from New Serepta and Spilstead.

When they arrived in the morning, the girls registered their entries, then off to the School for a morning of music, aerobics and crafts and after lunch, a campfire competition. While the judges were tallying up the points, everyone went skating. Then, off to the church for the prize awarding. The judges stated that their job certainly was difficult due to the calibre of the entries.

All of our Pathfinders did very well, with Diana Winder winning a second place medal.

The Community League held its monthly meeting on March 6 with a number of residents in attendance. It was decided that come spring, a two-day scarod stuff (Basic Horsemanship course would be offered at Spilstead Hall for a nominal fee for anyone who wished to take it. More information will be available at a later date. As well, a western hoedown dance is in the planning stage for April 7.

The Spilstead Ladies Society held a successful pancake and sausage supper on Shrove Tuesday with a number of residents enjoying a good meal.

Our monthly bingo was held on Thursday with a really nice crowd attending. Our last one for the year will be held on April 12.

On Saturday the Pathfinders, Cubs and Scouts held some tea and lunch. The Pathfinders capably served the tea tables, while the Cubs and Scouts manned the craft, bake and white elephant tables. The Scouts did a very nice job of the decorations for the hall and tables using various sizes of Shamrocks. A lot of hard work on the part of the many young and not so young people made the end result well worth it. Thanks to all.

The door prize, which was a lovely afghan, made by our group committee chairman Doreen Ladouceur, was won by Brenda Wall.

Ryley debates ...

when it has been decided who goes where, was the reply to a query on this matter.

"Why not leave it as it is?" was asked of the present situation. Mr. Schoonman replied, "If you continue as you are the classes will get smaller and more teachers would be required." This would result in combined grades, a phenomenon the Superintendent felt was not well accepted in this county in the past.

At this point he was confronted with having mainly economic reasons for this proposal. "It was not my intent," he replied. He has expressed in the past several times that his concept is wholly for the betterment of student education in the Ryley-Holden area.

Active and intense debating went on during the small group discussions. Generally, they were not in favour of moving junior high students. One group concluded that only the educational side was being considered and that extra curricular activities would suffer. Another wanted to stay as is and ride out the next four or five years and then look at it again.

On the positive side for the proposal, one group came up with the conclusion that the existing program is not beneficial to those students who wish to excel and they would end up going to schools with a higher standard of education.

It was generally agreed that the advantages of the proposal were as outlined. The junior high students would have more social contact with their peers and the inter-mural sports program would be better.

The consensus of those in attendance this evening was mostly against, some for and a fair number of abstainers and undecided.

After all the small groups had aired their views, Bob Dasch, president of Ryley School Supporters, asked County school board representative, Mr. Farmer if the proposal would cost more or less money. He replied, "To be completely honest with you, we won't know until we try it, but projecting down the line, it should cost a little less."

At this point, one person was very adament about not wanting staff cuts, and was reassured that the School Board was committed on this point and there would be no staff cuts.

Another question concerned how he could stop all one grade from taking the same option. The proposal contains a section that offers incentives to students and this would seem to solve this dilemma. The question had to be cut off at 10:30 p.m. but, those who wished to question points of personal interest regarding the proposal were invited to approach the Board at another time.

Now it is up to the Board to digest both the Holden and Ryley public meetings and come up with a decision.

Hastings Lake

by Lois Fenna

This winter I made a trip to Australia, and it was a surprise to find, on my first visit since leaving 15 years ago, that most of the eastern half of the country was had record rains and, indeed, for a period in January, several towns in the interior were cut off by widespread floods. One train was marooned for long enough for the passengers to whittle a cricket bat out of a piece of wood and challenge the residents of the local station to a game!

The wet followed three or four years of severe drought, and consequently when my husband and I were able to travel into these areas we received a most unusual impression. The desert had been transformed by green growth and was alive with parrots, ground pigeons, hawks and many other birds. I wish I could identify. The air was clear and fresh, and the limitless view from the top of the famous Ayer's Rock has to be seen to be believed.

The burning redness of the sand is one of the most remarkable features — in roadside cuttings and dirt roads it is glowing, fiery, incandescent or deepening, depending on the angle of the sun.

The Outback resembles a huge prairie, quite flat for enormous distances, but normally supporting only drought-resistant plans such as spinifex and scrubby acacias; however, this year grasses and wildflowers soften the harsh surfaces of the stony ground. Huge cattle stations drink the fertility from the soil, but stock numbers have been reduced in recent years, and the small mobs of red-brown, rangy shorthorns that we observed appear to be unlikely to have a great impact on the recent growth of forage. Kangaroos were not in the least visible, with the exception of a few roadkills, and one cannot help wondering about the graziers' policy of destruction, and the wisdom of the official limit on the kill for this year of two million head.

The 2000 kilometres from Alice Springs in the Centre to Townsville on the Queensland coast can be driven on a paved road, which is a great achievement considering the sparseness of the settlements along the way. As we approached the coast, we noticed the Shorthorn cattle giving way to the strange-looking Brahmans — pale, humped and flop-eared, like oversize goats crossed with water buffalos. These are favoured in tropical zones, and inter-bred with Hereford to produce a new breed known as the Barford.

The Pacific Highway running down the coast of Queensland takes you through fascinating tropical places with access to the islands and also to the Great Barrier Reef; this looks, through your glass-bottomed boat, like a mighty fishbowl decorated with multi-coloured coral and occupied by amazing schools of bright, graceful fish.

Along the highway the gardens and campgrounds abound with parrots, rosellas and cockatoos among the many flowering shrubs and trees. They wheel and scream and chase each other at breakneck speed, making the very idea of caging them seem a travesty.

Driving south the changes in agriculture unfold before your eyes — sugar cane, mangoes, pineapples, pawpaws, rice and even ginger. You can spend a long time just discovering how these exotic crops are grown and harvested. Place names roll off the tongue — Narrabri, Gunnerdah, Coonabarabran — it sounds like poetry but is really only the stuff the Aboriginal language is made of.

Now that we are home to a reality of snow and ice, the memory of golden sandy beaches, rolling surf and warm tropical air is something to cherish; but there is no doubt that the humid atmosphere saps one's energy!

The discontinuation of the Income Averaging Annuity Contract a few years ago caused a number of headaches for estate planners and retiring farmers. The recently announced Federal budget may provide some relief when it comes to capital gains tax obligations. The following article is from the February 27 issue of Agri-News. Please note that these are proposed changes and will not be in effect until legislated into law by the Federal Government.

Budget Offers "Roll-Aid" Relief for Farmers

Marc Lalonde's latest budget provides for a few changes for today, and a lot of "maybe's" for tomorrow, but there are some very important proposals in it that could affect farmers' estate planning.

Mr. Lalonde has, for example, proposed a special tax rollover provision that would allow farmers to contribute to an RRSP up to a maximum of $120,000 of taxable capital gains obtained from a farm-related sale. The actual amount that could be contributed would be arrived at by multiplying by $10,000 the number of years that the individual had farmed between 1972 and 1983. The age limit of 71 years for contributing to an RRSP would be waived for this rollover. However, regular RRSP contributions that are made for 1984 and 1985 will reduce the total amount of the rollover.

The rollover would apply to full-time farmers who owned their land on December 31, 1983 and who had a capital gain from the sale of land, buildings, farm corporation shares or a farm partnership interest after that period.

Mr. Lalonde's budget also proposes legislation that would allow the transfer of farm property to a child to be treated in the same way from a tax point of view upon a parent's death as it would be treated if the parent were still alive. In other words, a parent could stipulate in his will that the child should pay into the parent's estate any amount up to the fair market value of the property. The estate would receive the stated value from the child, and depending upon its amount, the estate could be liable for a capital gains tax.

Existing tax rules allow a rollover of the tax on capital gains to a child upon the death of a parent only if the property was transferred as a gift. Int his context the term property includes land, buildings, machinery and shares in a family farm corporation or an interest in a farm partnership.

Another proposal in the budget would allow the estate of a child who had received a transfer of property from his or her parents, and who had subsequently died, to return it to the parents at a value varying anywhere from zero to its true market value. This means that if the property's value was put at zero, it could be returned to the parents tax-free upon the child's death. In this context property is defined as land and buildings and shares in a farm corporation an an interest in a farm partnership.

The budget also proposed that a tax rollover of property should be permitted when land owned by a parent or child is farmed by a corporation in which the parent or child has shares or by a partnership in which they have an interest. Present tax rules do not allow a rollover of farm property to a child when the property is being farmed by a company or nonqualifying partnership.

Under the proposals, contained in the new budget, the tax rollover of farm property to a child will be extended to include anyone who, at any time before he or she reached the age of 21, was wholly dependent upon the parent for support. At the present time the definition of a child includes sons and daughters and sons-in-law and daughters-in-law, grandchildren, adopted children, etc.

The budget also proposed changes to pensions and RRSP's as well as the initiation of homeowner insurance, small business tax simplifications and company profit sharing plans, but since these proposals are still only in the study phase, it is likely to be some time before they are actually legislated into law.

Dan Hilsenteger of Alberta Agriculture's farm business management branch, says in light of the proposed tax rollover changes, it is extremely important that farmers review their wills and estate plans. "It would appear", he says, "that insurance requirements may change, that custom farming arrangements may no longer be necessary and that some clauses in wills may soon be outdated. Although these changes are not yet in effect, they are likely to be passed into law in the near future and they will all be retroactive to the beginning of 1984.

Mr Hilsenteger also strongly advises farmers to check with a professional tax advisor to see exactly how the new budget could affect their individual situations.

Successful shoot held

The Skunk Hollow Muzzle Loaders hosted a highly successful March Hare shoot at the outdoor range located south of the city

Nine communities sent representatives to the two-day shoot and they included Gibbons, Tofield, Rocky Mountain House, Edmonton, Drayton Valley, Pincher Creek, Swan Hills, Sylvan Lake and the [illegible]

It was a democratic competition with no shooter being a dominant factor as only two managed to win more than one event

Paul Christianson of Camrose and John Hutchinson of Rocky Mountain House each managed two victories.

Because of a lack of snow, the blanket event saw the competitors run rather than snowshoe

Following are results from the different events

Pistol duel 1. John Ross (G) 2 Sylvia Perry (T) 3. John Hutchinson (R).

Shoot the spook. 1 John Hutchinson (R) 2. Don McRae (E) 3. Carl Gustafson (E).

Grouse picking: 1. Mike Bott (E) 2. Carl Gustafson (E) 3. Tom Bodnar (T).

Card cutting: 1 Paul Christianson (C) 2. Gorden Jorgensen (C) 3. Don Johnston (P).

Traditional: 1. Tom Bodnar (T) 2. Don McRae (E) 3 Geoff Fletcher (D).

Skunk Shoot: 1. Gorden Jorgensen (C) 2 John Hutchinson (R) 3. Del Durstling (S)

Let's play crib: 1. Paul Christianson (C) 2 Barb Christianson (C) 3 Mike Bott (E)

Blanket shoot 1. John Hutchinson (R) 2 Mike Bott (E) 3. Del Durstling (S)

Warbles rob farmers

Although the number of warble infested slaughter cattle in Alberta dropped to only 4 per cent in 1983 from 14 per cent in 1980, warbles are still robbing Alberta farmers of $2 million a year. And they are costing the packing industry another million dollars in lost time, devalued hides and devalued carcasses.

It is for this reason that warble inspections are being continued again this spring in all cattle markets and terminal stockyards as part of the province's total warble infestation monitoring system.

Alberta Agriculture's livestock pest control specialist, Dr. Ali Khan, reminds cattlemen that the Agricultureal Pest Act requires every cattle producer in Alberta to take the necessary measures to destroy warble grubs in their cattle every year. He says that all counties, municipal districts, improvement districts and special areas in the province are officially warble control areas. He also says that agricultural service board fieldmen and their appointed inspectors will be visiting farms that have a history of warble infestations towards the end of March and in April to advise and help their owners to organize a better warble control program.

The monitoring of warble infested carcasses will also continue at packing plants so that sources of infested cattle can be identified. The information that is collected will be used to help local agricultural service boards with their extension education programs and to enforce the Warble Control Program in Alberta.

Provincial convention set

... for horticulturists

The Camrose and District Horticultural Society will be hosting the 1984 Alberta Horticultural Association (AHA) convention here next month

The annual convention, a two-day event, will take place in the Norsemen Inn on April 7 and 8 and is one of the major activities of the AHA

The theme of this year's convention is "Bloomin' Bulbs and Perky Perennials".

The annual convention provides members the opportunity to share ideas and learn about new varieties of plants and seeds.

Dr. Ed Toop, professor at the University of Alberta, Duncan Himmelman, instructor from Olds Agriculture College, along with Jon Lowry, Landscape Designer and Consultant from Calgary, will be speaking on the various kinds of bulbs and perennials, care, fertilizing, insect control, winter storage, landscaping with bulbs and perennials and forcing bulbs

This will be followed with a banquet, award presentations, and an international costume revue, featuring costumes and music representing 12 countries.

The convention concludes with the annual meeting on the second day.

Along with the convention there will be a horticultural home garden show. More details on the home garden show will be available next week.

The AHA was incorporated on Nov 28, 1951 under the Societies Act Much of the original work of organization was done by P.D. (Dunc) Hargrave of Brooks, Alta., in 1948. By 1950 a committee of D.V. Hicks, P.D. Hargrave and P D McCalla was formed to prepare bylaws and a constitution. On Jan 1, 1977 the AHA attained status as a registered charitable organization. Then, in 1978, the AHA Horticultural Grants to affiliate societies for special projects was implemented. The over-all objective of the association is The Advancement and Promotion of Horticulture in Alberta

There are presently 45 affiliate societies operating in various areas across Alberta. This affiliation with the AHA makes them part of a horticultural network that reaches from the Peace River Country to the Lethbridge area. Individual membership is open to everyone.

The Camrose and District Horticultural Society has invited everyone to attend the Alberta Horticultural Association's convention.

Toros in real battle

After a dismal opening game, Tofield Toros and Nursette are waging a real battle in County Senior Hockey League semi-finals.

As reported in last week's edition of The Mercury, Nursette won the opening game by a 13-3 count.

Two games were played on the past weekend and both [illegible] 5-4 [illegible]

A game in Tofield on Friday night resulted in the Toros picking up a win after playing two overtime periods while Nursette managed a win in Camrose the next night.

The fourth game in this series will be played in the Wildrose Arena (Camrose) on Sunday night and a date for a fifth game (if needed) had not been set at presstime.

The winner of this series will advance to meet the Camrose Blackhawks in a best of five championship series.

Blackhawks advanced to the finals when they eliminated Rosalind in three straight games in the other semi-final match-up.

In Friday's contest in Tofield, Toros raced into an early 4-0 lead and saw that disappear as Nursette roared back to deadlock the contest and send it into overtime.

It took one full overtime period and seven minutes of a second session before Loshack notched the winner to square the series. [illegible] cause with two goals and the singles came from Knox and [illegible]

The third game was played in Camrose on Saturday night with the home team taking the early 4-1 lead and then had to scramble to hold a one goal edge at the final buzzer.

Tofield got two goals from Jenkinson and singles from G. [illegible]

D. Olson of the Toros was sensational in goal in both contests as he blocked a total of ninety-four shots.

Gibson wins crown

Carol Gibson

Carol Gibson of Camrose is the Canadian junior women's cross-country championship title holder.

Gibson, 19, earned the title after winning three gold medals at the Canadian cross-country ski championships at the Lac Le Jeune ski resort, 25 km south of Kamloops, last week.

Gibson's title was gained when she won gold medals in the junior women's 5 km sprint, 10 km and 15 km events, defeating rival Jean McAllister of Otawa who won silver medals in each competition.

A national team member, Gibson had been sick with the 'flu for about two months when she came back to win the national title.

She will now leave for Sweden for a month of racing which will include the Polar Cup series in northern Scandinavia, prestigious circuit of the world's best skiers in late-season competition.

In her last year as a junior, Gibson won the 5 km junior women's sprint by beating Ottawa's Jean McAllister for the gold.

In the 10 km event Gibson, who is coached by her father, Dr. Garry Gibson, the Camrose Lutheran College ski team coach, again defeated McAllister.

Gibson won her third gold medal in as many events during the week-long competition in the 15 km event. She led from the start of the event, defeating McAllister by three minutes and 43 seconds and her victory was good for a perfect 300-point score and the overall junior women's aggregate title.

Kim Grattidge of Camrose placed 10th in her debut in the 15 km long-distance event for women at the junior championships.

Grattidge also placed 14th in the junior women's 10 km event, and placed 13th in the 5 km sprint.

Application forms are now available to provide funding for Canada Day celebrations which must be publicly designated as Canada Day activities. Normally, Canada Day events take place on July 1st, however because July 1st will be on Sunday this year, consideration will be given to projects which will take place on June 30 or July 2. Official symbol of the activity must be the Canadian flag.

Projects must be non-profit with no financial benefit going to individual organizers or to the organization. Fund raising activities are not eligible for financial support.

Further information and applications are to be submitted to the Provincial Canada Day Committee as soon as possible. All applications will receive a response as soon as possible and no later than May 15th. Applications received after May 1st cannot be guaranteed consideration.

A limited nubmer of applications for the program are available from my Vegreville Office, 632-2866. Requests may also be submitted to: Alberta Canada Day Committee, Room 706—Harley Court, 10045-111 Street, EDMONTON, Alberta T5K 1K4. Telephone: 420-4584 or [illegible].

Golf course future debated

by [illegible]

The future of the Tofield Golf Course was discussed at the Town Council meeting on Monday night.

Charlie Kallel requested that taxes on a small portion of the property to be used for the construction of a new golf course be assessed as farmland like it was last year. His plans are to build a golf course with nine holes, grass greens and a modern clubhouse.

Council made a motion to assess this piece as farmland if possible, and if not, then to rebate his taxes to that level.

Yvonne Brown represented the Farmers Market regarding a by-law that states that no unpasteurized dairy products be sold within the town limits. She told Council that presently the Health Dept. issues a certificate to sell such products at Farmers Markets if health standards have been met. The solution would be to include in the by-law, that those who post this certificate be allowed to carry on selling their products at the Farmer's Market.

A motion was passed to write a letter to the Vegreville Health Dept. with a copy to the Provincial Health Inspector regarding this matter.

Ken Stauffer from the Agricultural Society reported on their last meeting. He proposed that the agreement of them paying part of the recreation director's salary continue because this situation has been so successful in the past. The Society proposed to raise their contribution by $1000 over the next two years, with the understanding that they could come to the town for financial assistance in the future, if necessary. Council approved this proposal to continue the agreement, for the next two years.

Henry Nachtigal approached the council members regarding the cost of paving the street in front of the Gospel Church. The original estimate for this work was $2,922.30 less than the final bill. He felt it was because a portion of the existing pavement had broken up when trucks drove over it during construction, but that this break up occured on account of the moisture under the existing street and not because the equipment driving over it was overloaded.

It was suggested that he pay the original estimated amount and the remaining balance would be considered once the engineers had investigated the situation and given council a full report.

A Fire Department committee made up of Wayne Lysons and John Bauman presented the minutes of the January '84 TFD meeting for discussion. They propose to expand fire hose lengths and upgrade the quality of Fire Department staff. New uniforms have been ordered to better identify staff doing inspections. They are looking into improving the building security by re-keying some locks and buying one new lock which can be re-coded at any time at no extra cost. This would help to prevent theft and vandalism.

Other topics of concern were [illegible] policies for fire-fighters, and the question of acquiring maintenance supplies and other minor incidentals. Council will have the fire committee take care of approval of maintenance costs and supplies and will look into researching the upgrading of insurance policies as soon as possible.

A by-law was passed and Lori Pilon was officially sworn in as the Town Administrator.

In response to concerns voiced to him by community members, councilman Ed Regher brought up the possibility of changing the curve sign at the end of 51st street to an "S" curve sign. This would indicate to motorists that there was more than just a single curve here.

Court of Revision date has been set for March 26th and the budget meeting will be held on March 19th.

A request by Fritz Van Der Kley to use his lots on Main Street for parking, in lieu of taxes, was denied.

A by-law was passed which changes the truck route from Main Street to Highway 834 to better regulate and control vehicles within the Town of Tofield.

Lori Pilon, Cindy Neufeld and Jack Lampitt will attend the March 10th seminar in Daysland which is sponsored by the Municipal Services Branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

A motion made to accept the proposed agreement for the Beaver Regional Waste Management Authority was passed unanimously.

In regards to the trees in Belvedere Park, it was agreed that the Lions could have them cut down and add fill if everything met with the utility company's approval and there was no extra cost to the town.

There's a lot going on for young people in Alberta.

Find out

Young people in Alberta can take advantage of a number of excellent programs and services offered by the Government of Canada. If you're interested in any of the ones described here or in knowing more about others that are available, just use the coupon below to find out.

Youth Opportunity Fund

The continuing strength and vitality of our nation rests with its young people. That's why the Government of Canada has attached such great importance to creating jobs for Canadian youth.

In the last federal budget, $150 million was added to the $1 billion Youth Opportunity Fund. The purpose of this fund is to help young people, including students, to learn new skills and find jobs in private industry and the voluntary and public sectors.

Training for Youth

Haven't found the right job yet? On the job training is one of the most practical ways to gain valuable work experience. The Government of Canada's General Industrial Training program allows you to earn while you learn. Many employers have already used this program to help give young people a start in life.

Your employer may be reimbursed for nearly all of the training costs. As well, the Government of Canada will, in most cases, pay the employer half of your wages during the training period. Training may last from a few weeks to a year. To learn more, use the coupon below.

Career-Access could open doors for you

A lot of young people know what kind of career they want and may even have prepared for it by studying at high school, university or training at vocational schools or community colleges. Even so, once they start looking for jobs in those fields, they may not be able to find what they want. That's when the Career Access Program can help. It was designed to encourage employers to hire these people so they can gain valuable experience in their chosen careers. The encouragement for employers is that the Government of Canada pays part of the wages while the person is gaining needed experience.

Specialized Services

Because they have no job training or trade, lots of young people find it difficult to get jobs. So there are special programs designed just for them. For example, Specialized Youth Units (SYUS) are staffed with people who cooperate with community agencies and Outreach projects to place these young people in suitable and rewarding jobs where they can increase their skills.

Planning now for future job security

Modern technology keeps changing the ways we work and the jobs we do. Canada's new National Training Program includes a plan that will make sure people are trained now for the kinds of skills that will be very much in demand in the eighties and after. The Skills Growth Fund encourages public training institutions and private non-profit organizations to teach modern technical and related skills and to develop the facilities for this work. The easiest way to find out more about training is to ask at your local Canada Employment Centre.

Get involved in Katimavik

Katimavik is a popular and successful national youth program for single people from 17 to 21. If you participate you will be involved for nine months, travelling in groups to different regions in Canada and working on community projects. The work is rewarding and varied from the restoration of cultural artifacts to the cleaning of trails and waterways in municipal parks. While you don't get paid as you work, there is a $1,000 honorarium at the end of the nine months.

Some projects have involved a companionship and home care program for seniors, establishing day care centres for single mothers and a drop-in centre for teens.

Or, you could find yourself building a fishermen's wharf on Cape Breton Island or staffing a community cablevision station in British Columbia.

This year, 5,184 participants will be needed for over 400 projects in cities and communities across Canada. It could be a great way for you to develop new skills, meet new people and learn a lot about yourself and your country. Interested? Find out!

Canada Works

Canada Works is a job creation program that provides funds to community organizations, municipalities and businesses, helping them to hire staff for special work projects and activities. If you have been unemployed for eight weeks, you could be eligible to work on a Canada Works project. The jobs last from six to 52 weeks and give you experience and contacts that might help you find a long term job. Your Canada Employment Centre has information on the Canada Works jobs available in your community.

PRODUCT SAFETY

Paper towel and microwave ovens may not mix. A recent microwave oven fire began when the paper towel being used as a cooking utensil ignited. The paper towel manufacturer reported that a metallic impurity in the towel probably sparked the fire Tiny metallic particles sometimes make their way into the pulp-paper mixture during the manufacturing process and cannot always be removed. The greatest danger occurs in towels manufactured from recycled paper products.

If you have been using a particular brand of paper towel in your microwave oven with no problem, there is likely no cause for alarm The towels are probably not made from recycled products. Always use caution when working with a new brand of paper towels, or a brand you are not familiar with.

Propane Tanks – A spokesman for Alberta Labour's plumbing and gas safety branch warns that people are keeping a potential bomb in the house if they store propane tanks in the basement. Propane is under pressure in cylinders, and a rise of a few degrees can cause an extremely dangerous explosion. Propane tanks should be stored outdoors, never in a heated area. Neither should they be stored in a garage, even if it is unheated, because in the event of a fire, the propane tank could become a bomb. Every ten years, a propane-filled cylinder must be examined by a certified inspector who checks for rust, dents and gouges and replaces the relief valve Consumers often object to this provincial law as an inspection can cost up to $30 while a new cylinder runs around $26. More information about propane tank safety can be obtained from the plumbing and gas safety services branch of Alberta Labour

Tree wounds a problem

The use of tree wound dressings has become a controversial subject in recent years with some arborists recommending their use and others arguing that they are ineffective.

Tree wound dressings are supposed to act as a temporary barrier against decay-causing organisms until a callus has had time to form over a pruning wound. Some tree dressings have been shown to encourage normal and even greater than normal callus growth, but evidence that they actually prevent decay has been contradictory, according to Dr. Ronald Howard, plant pathologist at the Alberta Horticultural Research Center in Brooks.

He says much of the scientific research on tree wound dressings has been carried out on fruit trees where it has been found that wounds that are older than one month are no longer susceptible to invasion by silverleaf, which is the prevalent wound parasite. Hence, in the case of fruit trees, the use of a short-term dressing may well prevent silverleaf infection.

However, the beneficial effect of wound dressings on other trees is less clear. Dr. Howard reports that some North American research has shown that bitumen, glue and cycloheximide prevent decay in hardwood trees, but that other research has shown that bitumen, polyurethane and shellac do little to prevent decay, and that, in some cases, they actually stimulate decay.

Dr. Howard also reports that a recently published report from England indicates that the use of a sealant in combination with a fungicide had the greatest inhibiting effect against decay in wounds on poplar and beech trees. However, the authors pointed out that the beneficial or harmful effects of wound dressings varied greatly among the compounds they tested, and that no single product could be considered ideal. They felt that, at best, the most effective wound dressing provided only short-term protection.

"In the case of fruit trees", says Dr Howard, "it can be concluded that a wound dressing can confer short-term protection against silverleaf, providing that the product is not harmful to the tree, but that the usefulness of wound dressings for other trees is questionable."

He also says that if a particular wound dressing appears to have prevented decay in the past or to have provided a beneficial cosmetic effect on a particular tree species, its use can be safely continued.

However, because different tree species may respond differently to a particular wound dressing, he advises using a new product on a trial basis rather than for large-scale treatment.

Ryley loses plant

A hazardous waste disposal plant will not be constructed in the Village of Ryley.

That announcement was made recently by Environment Minister Fred Bradley who stated that the plant would be built in Swan Hills.

Almost complete support for the plant had been generated by the residents of Swan Hills and the immediate surrounding area.

The plant will take three to four years to build and upon completion, will employ thirty-five workers.

Ryley had made a strong pitch to be the site chosen for the plant after receiving support of eighty percent of the village's residents when a plebiscite was called on the issue.

Prior to that, a location in the County of Beaver had been considered but, a plebiscite on the matter had resulted in a majority of county residents voting in opposition.

Schools' plans to start in fall

... for Holden and Ryley

by Joan Mowry

At the Beaver Board of Education meeting last Thursday, a motion was formally passed that the instructional organization for Ryley and Holden Schools be K-6 for one and K-6 with 10, 11 and 12 for the other and this be implemented September 1, 1984.

The location of each school has not yet been designated in order that the Superintendent of Schools may discuss this matter further with the principals of these two schools. Mr Schoeman expects to be able to answer this question at the next County Board of Education meeting on April 10th.

After the decision to make his proposal fact, Mr. [illegible] could have lived with it", if the decision had gone the other way but in view of the outcome said, "I'll do everything in my power to make it work."

In his opinion it was unfortunate that the public meetings held in the two communities were so polarized, but to have made no decision today would have been very detrimental. He held fast his conviction that this proposal was the best thing for the future educational needs of the students in the area concerned.

Having observed at these meetings, an apparent transportation problem for the people in the fringe areas, he conducted a telephone survey. There are 20 families involved with a total of 34 students. Of these, 24 would go to Ryley or Holden, 2 to Viking, 3 to Tofield, 3 were undecided and 2 were a definite No (to the proposal). From these results he was satisfied that there was no major problem in this area after all.

During the vocal interaction between trustees regarding this controversial subject, it was observed that many people in the community were ill-informed as to what the issues of the proposal really were. Full support of both schools would help to alleviate the situation, and perhaps an orientation before the new term could be part of a plan for students to more easily complete the transition of changing schools. Also brought up was the possibility of sending a [illegible]ons letter to every household within the County of Beaver that would, perhaps, clear up any misunderstandings anyone might have.

County Reeve Warner, made the remark that if the present situation were to continue, not only would the Ryley and Holden students be deprived of a full program, but those attending Viking and Tofield Schools would also suffer. Funds would be spent maintaining two small K-12 facilities that could possibly be used to improve educational standards at these other two schools.

The March 13th budget meeting resulted in action being taken towards the construction of several major projects before December 31. This move is necessary in order to maintain the funding which has already been approved. Expenditures will include the purchase of [illegible] new buses (one of which has already been purchased), the Holden Design Study, the Tofield Home Ec. and Shop construction, and the repairing of roofs on Tofield, Viking and Ryley schools. No provision was made for wage increases at this time.

In new business a letter from Ryley School Supporters President, Bob Dueck asking that the Board answer six questions in regards to the proposals was introduced and discussed. An answering letter will be drafted up by Mr. Schoeman and sent out.

The meal policy whereby the County pays for employees meals will be discontinued. It had become obvious that the County was paying for meals when it was not necessary. A majority of counties do not cover meals for their [illegible].

A letter requesting permission to use Tofield School for church purposes was received from the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints. They would like to use six rooms including the library for 3 hours on Sundays, for the next 24 month period while plans are made and completed for the construction of a permanent church.

Although policy states that if other similar facilities are available in the community it [illegible] not be used for political, religious or commercial purposes, a precedent had been set in the past for the Alliance Church during it's construction period.

Considering these facts, the Board passed a motion which granted them use of the necessary classrooms in Tofield School for the period of one year with the stipulation that in addition to the $75 rental fee they be responsible for all extra costs such as caretaker or janitorial fees. At the end of this time they could re-apply to the Board for an extension of this agreement.

A request from the Town of Tofield asking the County to relinquish their 50% ownership of the Belvedere Park property was tabled pending further discussion between the two bodies.

The annual meeting for the County of Beaver has been set for March 30th in the Ryley Legion for discussion of the affairs of the county.

Community aids firemen

Pledges of support have been made to assist the Tofield Fire Department in purchasing rescue equipment.

Because the Tofield and surrounding community lacked trained personnel and proper equipment to assist victims of farm, auto and industrial accidents, the local fire department offered to provide this service if community groups assisted in raising funds to aid in the purchase of equipment.

John Bauman, Assistant Chief in charge of the program, says that he is pleased with the response to date. Donations have been received from the Tofield Ministerial [illegible] and the Alliance Church.

Other groups promising support are Beta Sigma Phi, the Tofield Lions, the Legion and the Hospital Auxiliary.

An Easter bingo is to be held on April 17 sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi, and on April 28 the Lions are sponsoring a dance.

A couple of options are open to the fire department with regard to equipment purchases.

According to Bauman, "We need $3700 to obtain a basic package. With the ingenuity of some of our members and [illegible] munity who understand hydraulics, we can design and assemble a more sophisticated system for $7,000." He has noticed that some equipment manufacturers have capitalized on the sale of rescue gear. "An air chisel sold for rescue purposes sells for $500; the same chisel used for mechanical work costs $100."

Meanwhile, fire department members continue to take training. "We have to be prepared to cope with incidents ranging from assisting severely injured victims of an auto accident to aiding a farmer who gets caught in machinery. Without properly trained and well equipped personnel we have had to rely on neighbouring fire departments. The time it takes to get assistance from outside of our community may mean that the victim will be beyond help when that help finally arrives" says Bauman.

Some members are completing training in CPR while others are scheduled to take a one-week Advanced Rescue course through Disaster Services in April.

"We are incorporating a rescue component into our regular fire training," says Bauman. "If one life can be saved then the efforts of our department and this community will be rewarded."

Licked before starting

Political parties in Canada, if they are not Liberal, are licked before they start, largely because of the years and years of infusion of Liberal appointments into the policy and hiring processes of the CBC.

It can't simply be a matter of chance. It happens all too often.

Any listener to CBC radio, or viewer of CBC television, has only to compare reports of the same events that come from other sources to realize how completely one-sided, how utterly biased, are the reports from that oracle. No matter how appealing they may be, no matter how well dressed they are.

Latest in the register of complaints was the bell-ringing affair in the House of Commons only on Monday of this week. When several Liberal members took the opportunity to visit various centers in the eastern provinces, and then were fog-bound so they couldn't make it back to the Commons for Monday, a hastily called vote found the government embarassed, and the Commons bells rang for over five hours Monday afternoon, till the Speaker summarily adjourned the House until Tuesday morning.

When the bells were caused to ring several months ago by the Tories, fighting the principle of a highly objectionable Omnibus Bill the CBC documented almost every peel of the bells as they blamed the Tories for 'obstructing' the business of the House.

So logically they gave the same sort of treatment to the bell ringing caused by the absence of government members? Like fun they did. They buried it way down in the late night news, far behind the news that Mr. Mulroney was being confronted over the 'French' for Manitoba argument by the deputy leader of the Manitoba Conservatives, Bud Sherman. And another story to embarass the Tories. Both of these were also dredged up in the wind-up summary of the news, but not the bells. The absent Liberals and the bells barely came in ahead of El Salvador.

Tories . . . like Joe Clark . . . lose luggage. Liberals . . . like Pierre Trudeau . . . never do, even though he manages to show up without his, equally misplaced by the airline.

Thank goodness there are still alternative sources of information in this country. Sources able and willing to present the news objectively, news as it is, rather than under the domination of a grey eminence. All we need in Canada is a government-controlled press review board, controlling newspaper, magazine, radio and television, such as envisioned by Jim Fleming and Keith Davey, and the CBC will look good.

Loose Ends

CAN THIS BE SPRING?

It is March 21st, the first day of spring. Regardless of the weather, spring must be waiting in the wings. The signs are everywhere. Boys are replacing the hockey sticks with bicycles. I see them doing wheelies and chasing squealing girls down the streets. Barn swallows have been trying to build a nest under our eaves, blatantly disregarding the eviction notices of last year. I've heard that the gophers are out and so are the pussy willows. Can spring be far behind?

Spring is the time of year when everything comes back to life, including me. I like spring a lot, mainly because it means an end to winter's cold weather and snow that melts as it seeps through the hole in my boot. I like seeing green things and buds on the trees and a few minutes of daylight after the kids get home from [illegible] scheduled on television besides hockey -- football, for instance. And I like being able to send my children outdoors to play without fear of reprisals from Social Services or the SPCA.

Of course, just because the calendar says it's spring doesn't mean that it has sprung and the grass is riz. Old Ma Nature has been known to fool the swallows and gophers, but never Man. March can [illegible] like a lion or a lamb but we'll just live one day at a time, waiting for the other snowboot to fall. We've learned to stay on the alert and trust no one until around July 15th. By then we'll know if it's drifts or daffodils, bikes or bobsleds, mufflers or muscle shirts. By then we'll know for sure whether the sap has risen or if we should return to our burrows for another six weeks.

The one consolation is knowing that spring has to show up sooner or later. Past performances is proof of that, isn't it? Well . . . isn't it?

Maybe I'll order those new snowboots and get my heavy coat out of the cleaners, just in case.

Mulroney splits Tories

Joe Clark made a couple of serious errors while campaigning in the federal election he won. One was the suggestion of moving the Canadian Embassy in Jerusalem to Tel Aviv, the other to sell off Petro Canada. Both hurt him badly, to the point he slowly backed off on both.

Surprisingly, Brian Mulroney seems not to have learned from such mistakes. Indeed, he recently was cornered into a far more incendiary platform when he chose to side with Prime Minister Trudeau over the question of language rights in Manitoba . . . something about which he seems to know very little, but over which he becomes so emotional that support is a pre-requisite to belonging to his team. Unconditional support.

Manitobans trying to show Mr. Mulroney there is more to the discussion than meets the eye have gotten nowhere.

The whole discussion (argument, that is; there is no discussion) on Mr. Mulroney's part centers on the need to keep Quebec within Canada, and providing additional support for the Tories. He even went so far as to take a cheap shot at John Turner, candidate for the Liberal leadership, after Mr. Turner described the Manitoba problem as a provincial affair needing a provincial solution by provincial politicians, rather than by the courts.

And Mr. Mulroney labelled that a policy of deserting Liberal principles because of "political greed".

It was Trudeau, not the Liberal party, who wanted the Manitoba question referred to the courts. Mr. Mulroney himself is lawyer enough, or should be, to know that no law can be imposed without the consent of the governed.

Unless, of course, we turn Canada into Russia. Faster than we've been going under Trudeau.

Publicly acknowledging his respect for Mulroney when he spoke in Camrose a month or so ago, Joe Clark had the grace and the integrity to say he had full confidence in Mr. Mulroney, while urging his hearers to support the new leader.

Mr. Clark has been through the mill. He knows the hurdles, the pitfalls, the devious-minded, the turncoats, the opportunists. Yet we wonder if he did not do more to cement Canada and its regions than Brian Mulroney who seems to be telling the West there is no place for it in the Conservative Party, or in Canada, for that matter, if it does not support him, and Trudeau, and Quebec, in their drive for French across the country.

AADAC opposes wines in grocery stores

Red Deer, Alberta
[illegible]

Dear Sir:

Mr. Brian Lee, M.L.A. for Calgary Buffalo has introduced a Bill in the Alberta Legislature which would allow the sale of wine, beer and cider in grocery stores. The passage of this Bill would make possible 1700 new outlets in Alberta.

If this Bill passes we can expect alcohol consumption to increase. The following shows what happened in four American States. One year after the sale of wine became legal in grocery stores consumption had increased in Idaho 175%, in Maine 306%, in Washington 130%, and in Virginia 120%. We have had a continuing increase in liquor outlets in Alberta for many years with a corresponding increase in consumption.

Dr. H. David Archibald, founder of the Alcohol Research Foundation in Toronto, had this to say about increasing outlets: "More liberalization means greater use of alcohol, and greater prevalence of disease and death as a consequence."

The World Health Organization has made a study of a number of research projects on drinking in several countries of the world. They report that there is an increase in alcohol consumption and also an increase in the adverse consequences of drinking. They recommend that governments clamp down on the number of outlets.

Putting wine and beer in grocery stores would include supermarkets, convenience stores, and the corner grocery. It would actually put it with-in walking distance for many Albertans. It would be a hazard to young people who congregate at convenience stores, and an easy shopping item for every housewife.

An article published by the Alcohol Research Information Service in Lansing, Michigan, states that a leading liquor industry sales newsletter claims two-thirds of alcoholic beverages bought in supermarkets is a result of "impulse buying". So here we have the liquor industry telling us what we have believed all the time, that increasing availability increases consumption.

Surely with our record we don't need more alcohol. Alcohol consumption for Albertans 15 years and older averages the equivalent of 800 bottles of beer annually. In 1980 there were 25,741 convictions for impaired driving. Over 200 people a year are killed in alcohol-related car accidents. In 1978 more than 10,000 Albertans were hospitalized for health problems related to alcohol use. [illegible] result of drinking. It is estimated by next year we will have 82,000 alcoholics and 267,000 problem drinkers in Alberta. In other words, alcoholics and problem drinkers will number more than half the population of either Edmonton or Calgary.

No, Mr. Lee, and other members of the Legislature, we really do not need wine and beer in grocery stores.

Will the sale of wine and beer in grocery stores stimulate the economy? No doubt it will make money for the brewers, wine makers, and grocers, but the rest of us will be worse off. No society can drink its way to prosperity. Studies show that for every dollar governments make on liquor they spend about $4.41 on health care, law enforcement, welfare and other alcohol-related costs. This means that in Alberta the use of alcohol is costing the taxpayers nearly a billion dollars annually above all government "profits", or on the average $400 for every man, woman, and child in this province. Moreover, money spent for beer cannot be spent for shoes, or refrigerators, or new cars.

Someone is sure to raise the question of Quebec where they have had wine and beer in grocery stores for several years. Hospital admissions for alcoholism are higher in Alberta than in Quebec, but their rate of cirrohsis of the liver is higher than ours, and their rate of alcohol psychosis is nearly double ours. This may mean that we have more binge drinking than they do, but it may also points out that regular sipping is hard on livers and brains.

We have carefully checked the statements made in this letter and believe they can all be substantiated from reliable sources.

Yours truly,
Douglas H. Russell, President
Alcohol-Drug Education Association of Alberta

Beaver buses may enter

The County of Camrose Board of Education has decided to allow the County of Beaver buses to come into the county to pick up students.

For the last few years, some children in the north east part of the county have been transported to the border line and picked up by County of Beaver buses.

Some students have been attending other schools because the Round Hill School had been closed at one time and the high school is still in question on whether it will stay open.

The County of Beaver is deciding on schools in the Holden and Ryley areas. They want to have one school a kindergarten to Grade 6 and high school. The other school would then become kindergarten to grade 9. If Ryley gets the nod for the high school, students from the Holden or Round Hill area would go to Round Hill if they had a high school. If Holden gets the high school, then Round Hill might have trouble attracting students.

A survey was done to determine the number of students there would be in Round Hill. Staffing needs at the school will be determined after the County of Beaver makes a decision.

Truckers seek policy change

by Jean Murray

A delegation consisting of Roger Foster, [illegible], President of Alberta Gravel Truck Association and local truck owner/operators Reinholdt Grinde and Clifford Hammer went before County Council on March 19th to discuss the policy of tendering work done within the county.

Foster, on behalf of the truckers, said the policy is a threat to their livelihood and would like the council to consider the possibility of negotiating hauling rates and setting up a fair rate base.

John Warner said he realized their concern but, told them that this policy was the alternative found to be the fairest to everyone concerned, i.e. truckers and ratepayers. It had been discussed at considerable length before a decision was made. He suggested they get together as a group and submit a tender that way.

The truckers felt that their chances of a successful bid were slim when vying against big outfits that have "cut their throats in the past". They would prefer to sit down as gentlemen and set up a reasonable rate.

Schoppler presented some background for this proposition. In his estimation, the severe economic pressures have forced people to leave their locality to obtain work. He said that several people in this county already belong to his organization and considered setting up a branch in this area. This group would endeavor to re-create good will for truckers which seems to have deteriorated over the years and suggested expenses could be brought down by belonging to a professional organization. He urged the council to "make history and put their own local people to work first which would create employment for county employees and local people."

Warner said their proposal would be discussed at length. However, he wanted them to know that one reason the tendering process was brought into effect was because the other users of gravel in this county were being charged a lower rate (approx. 30% lower) than the county.

For two days last month the county fire truck in Ryley was out of service for repairs. It was discovered that some of the pipes had rotted away and the tank had developed leaks. Repairs were made and the truck should last for at least another two years.

The architect for the Tofield Hospital project indicated that the construction is proceeding ahead of schedule. The costs are coming in at slightly under estimation due in part, to an $18,000 savings on heating because of the mild weather over the winter months.

Tenders for the supply of an articulating motor grader with V-plow, wing and air-conditioning were opened and discussed with each of the suppliers present. It was decided to go with the Champion grader not only because of the lower initial cost but, also because they can use their plow from the old machine (which was used as a trade-in) at a savings of $6000, plus they already have Champion machinery thus enabling them to make use of parts and materials already on hand.

Public Works equipment to be purchased will include two sander boxes, one truck with six yard box (a good used one), a salt shed, cement pad for storage shed and miscellaneous shop equipment.

Pacific Industrial Scale Co. was chosen to supply a scale with printer and scale shack.

Ministik and district news

by Catherine Reddick

The whist drives at the Crafts Centre are getting better with more players coming each drive.

Prize winners at the last one were gents first — Sandy Scott, second — George Lee and consolation Bob Berrecloth.

Ladies first — Gladys Gill, second — Edna Seines and consolation Margaret Peterson.

Lunch was served by the ladies and another drive announced for March 16th.

Evelyn (Rowland) Lepine passed away last week. Evelyn was the youngest sister of Russell Rowland of Ministik. She grew up and took her schooling in the Hastings Lake District. Funeral services were held on March 19th in the Church of the Assumption with interment in Holy Cross Cemetery.

The series of paper tole classes concluded on Monday evening, with each person who took it hoping there would be other classes in the near future.

The March Community League meeting was held at the hall on Monday evening with a good attendance.

The auction sale that was mentioned some time ago will be going ahead on May 5th. Any information needed can be obtained from John Vandermeer, Joyce Bowerman, Margaret Peterson or Grant Wilson. Half the proceeds from this sale will go to the Youth Emergency Shelter in Edmonton.

There will be a flea market at the same time, and a concession all day for those hungry and thirsty.

The Ministik Ladies Club held their March meeting at the home of Margaret Peterson.

After all the old business was cleared away, the annual financial report was given by treasurer, Betty Williams. It showed that the club had donated to so many charities through the year, it ended the year of 1983 with a deficit. Jean Ferguson gave her annual sick committee report.

This year was election year as officers had been in for their two-year term.

Gladys Swabey will be president; Lil Leach, vice-president; Laurie Swabey, secretary; Betty Williams, treasurer; Jean Ferguson, sick committee and Barbara Horricks, lunch committee.

The strawberry tea will be on June 2nd and Jean Ferguson will once again be convener.

HOME COMPUTERS – PART I

Christmas time – jingle bells, HO! HO! HO!, and beep! beep! beep! The sound of electronic games is drowning out the Christmas carols this season, and the popularity of pocket-sized hockey rinks and space battles seems unbounded. But consumers also are turning toward a larger, more sophisticated version – the home computer, capable of recording your personal finances and tutoring your children, as well as entertaining your family with a variety of games.

What makes the microcomputer a realistic option for many households is its rapidly decreasing size and cost. Today's desk-top models that cost under $1,000 perform the same functions, faster, than the million dollar machines of only ten years ago. The heart of the units is a tiny "chip" of silicon and metal, which packs into a square inch the circuitry that once filled entire rooms. But even this condensed "brainpower" needs the human touch to make it work; and buying a home computer entails an investment in time as well as money.

A home computer consists of three basic parts: A Central Processing Unit (CPU), input-output (I/O) devices, and memory. All the processing of data and instructions is done in the CPU. The CPU retrieves works stored in the memory of the computer, determines what the words want it to do, and then carries out the instructions.

I/O devices are the channels of communication between the computer and you, allowing information to be entered and results to be returned. Examples of I/O devices are a typewriter-like key-board, cassette recorder, video display (or provisions to convert your television screen into the video display), a printer, and a floppy disk (a device resembling a phonograph [illegible] on which data can be stored).

The ability of a computer to store information and recall it on demand is called memory. Two basic kinds of memory exist: Random Access Memory (RAM) and Read Only Memory (ROM). RAM allows you to enter data into a memory and to receive instructions from memory. RAM would be used when you are entering a program into your computer or for playing video games. Information in RAM, however, is lost when you turn off a computer's power.

ROM is used to permanently store frequently used information such as the computer's basic operating instructions. This normally is pre-programmed by the manufacturer. A program in RAM can be erased to make room for another program, but a program in ROM is permanent.

Memories are organized in terms of bytes. One byte can store a single letter or digit. The storage capacity of a memory chip is expressed in K (Kilobytes), which is approximately 1,000 bytes. Therefore a 4K computer memory can store approximately 4,000 pieces of information. The amount of memory you get will depend on what type of I/O devices you are buying, and what you want to use your computer for. However, as you acquire more I/O devices, you can buy more memory at the same time. 4K or 8K should be adequate for a beginner.

Because a computer can only hold so much material at one time, ways have been devised for supplementing its memory. One is with tape cassettes, which feed programs (through a player) into the computer's temporary memory (RAM). Another method is the floppy disk, which is much faster than tapes, but also is more expensive. If you intend to write a program to be used in business you will probably require a floppy disk for file storage.

Special "languages" allow you to communicate with the computer in recognizable symbols and works, which the computer translates into its own internal language. Most home computers are programmed in BASIC, Beginners All-Purpose Symbolic Instruction Code.

BASIC compresses a large number of elementary instructions into every statement, and includes many English words. It is one of the simplest computer languages to learn and can be used for a wide variety of applications.

Next week we will look briefly at programming and buying tips.

Province will help with debenture debts

Julian Koziak, Alberta Municipal [illegible] has announced that, effective immediately, Alberta municipalities will be eligible to receive financial assistance to offset the penalty for prepaying their debentures early.

Municipalities which prepay loans from the Alberta Municipal Finance Corporation (AMFC) will be reimbursed either the full amount of the penalty or, the present value of the remaining interest subsidies they would have received under the Interest Stabilization Program, whichever is less," said Mr. Koziak.

This direction is undertaken to ensure that those municipal councils who have provided efficient administration of their affairs are not penalized.

Alberta Municipal Affairs will initially pay to the municipalities the amount of interest subsidy budgeted for the year the loan was repaid and will provide the remaining amount the following fiscal year.

The Interest Stabilization Program, a unique program in Canada, shielded Alberta municipalities from extremely high interest charges on capital debentures issued by the AMFC for projects approved before March 30, 1982.

The program is funded by the substantial sum of $[illegible] for the current fiscal year of 1983-84.

Grow Continuous Barley to Manage Saline Soils

I have adapted the following [illegible] the Swift Current Research Station. Every year I see more and more acres affected in the County of Beaver with saline problems.

Barley is more salt tolerant than either wheat or canola. As such, it is more suited to be grown on moderately saline soils. Barley roots withdraw saline soil water more effectively than wheat and even most weeds. Continuous cropping of barley, results in limited control over the accumulation of salts in the upper soil horizons.

The variety, Bonanza, has [illegible] effective for moderately to severely saline soils in southwestern Saskatchewan. Other varieties, including Melvin, Johnson and Klondike have also shown some salt tolerance.

The agronomy of barley production in saline soils does not differ appreciably from that practiced on land low in offending salts. Once an economic size of the field containing the salinized soil has been blocked, weed removal should draw first consideration. This may require chemical applications as well as tillage. The crop grows best if nitrogen and phosphorus are maintained to the levels recommended by soil tests. Place or incorporate commercial fertilizers below the surface, those containing P, with the seed, and those with N, in side bands or broadcast followed by pre-seed cultivation. Additions of manure have been especially [illegible].

The cropping of barley in moderately saline soils provides a salinity control at limited expense with the promise of profitable returns. Barley can be grown either for grain or for forage. Continuous cropping is strongly recommended to maximize water withdrawal and control the distribution of salts in root zones. This practice will demand a high level of management. It is also classed as a technique for the control of saline conditions rather than as a means for reclaiming saline lands.

Golden Club report

The Golden Club are holding a whist drive in the Drop-in Centre, tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m.

All interested are invited to attend.

Recently, an orchestra from the Kingman area entertained members. The music was so danceable that an impromptu dance was soon underway; and enjoyed by many of those present.

The new chairs have arrived!

Fifty were donated from a cheque provided by the Department [illegible] and the extra forty were paid for from the Golden Club's New [illegible].

On Friday, a group of club ladies enjoyed a trip to the city to shop, eat and just look.

These trips are not exclusively for club members providing there are spare seats on the bus. Myrtle Nerland is in charge.

Coffee is served at the Drop-in Centre each morning, Monday through Friday. There are no restrictions as to age or membership. All are welcome.

A representative of Casual Tours came from Edmonton last week and showed films of a projected Alaska trip.

Anyone who is willing to admit to being fifty years is invited to join the club.

There is pool, shuffleboard, scrabble, cards and bingo.

District news from Ryley

by Lone Bell

Robert Lysle of Tofield treated his Uncle Ezra to his first hockey game in Edmonton on Sunday evening to see the Buffalo Sabres and Edmonton Oilers play in the Edmonton Coliseum.

Several motored to Edmonton to attend the program of music in Danny Hooper's Corral on Sunday night.

Jack and Robin Murray of Edmonton were visitors in Ryley over the weekend with family.

Members of the Senior Citizens Centre and friends enjoyed pool, cards, shuffleboard, etc. on Saturday evening in the Centre.

Elder Herb Larsen of Red Deer, the president of the Alberta Seventh-day Adventist Church, will be speaking in Ryley on Saturday.

He and his wife will be guests at a fellowship dinner following the church service.

Arthur Hohn of Round Hill informs me that his mother, Gwen Hohn enjoyed her 80th birthday on March 3, with some of the Round Hill Women's Institute members, Doris Powell, Edith Blades, Alice Kushnerick and Louise Undin. They brought a cake with candles on it; other visitors were Ada Hostetler and Lowell, Mrs. Iva Olson, Mr. Afton Olson and his two children and Mrs. Joe Starie.

Derrick Mason of Calgary visited Ryley and area with relatives and friends last weekend.

Anne Goodall, John Kozack and Mr. Hapf are patients in Tofield Hospital, also Elmer Anderson.

The Ryley Curling Club dance turned out to be a huge affair Saturday night in the Community Hall.

Hayride held

On Saturday a moonlight combination hay ride and trail ride was held by the Kalchemut Creek Family Horse Club.

There were two teams and wagons and six horse-back riders.

At the halfway point, a halt was called, the food and some people were unloaded and the rest carried on further while the ones left behind built a fire and got the coffee and hot chocolate started.

When the wagon returned, hot dogs were roasted on the fire and a sing-song and visiting were enjoyed by everyone.

Everyone is reminded of the meeting coming up on Sunday at 2 p.m. in Beaverhill Family Centre.

There will be a guest speaker and everyone is welcome.

Council hears facts

by Jean Murray

In regards to the Ryley-Holden school issue, Bobbie Schweitzer, school representative, advised Holden council members of the Board of Education decision made March 15th to accept the proposal of having a kindergarten to grade nine facility in one area and a kindergarten to grade six with grades 10, 11 and 12 in another.

The administration is putting together information to make a decision as to where each will be located.

Christine Mackay, Village Administrator, recently wrote to three law firms (one in Vegreville and two in Camrose) in regards to coming to Holden one day per week. Only one reply was received and it was from a Vegreville firm suggesting his firm be available Tuesdays from 1-5 p.m. starting March 27th for a three-month trial period. A letter will be written accepting this proposal.

Contract work for curb, gutter and sidwalks on 51st Avenue from 48th to 50th Streets will be re-tendered. All tenders received last year when this work was tendered came in at $10,000 over budget.

A request by the Holden and District Agricultural Society to have June 9th declared a civic holiday was denied. Farmer's Day on June 8th was declared a civic holiday.

After numerous complaints from different people, about dogs running loose within the village, council passed a motion to more strongly enforce the existing dog by-law. If the situation does not clear up, they will advertise for a dog-catcher.

In the near future, a scale model of the new Tofield Hospital will be on display at the Royal Bank in Holden for approximately 30 days, to give the public in Ward 5, as well as others a chance to view this model.

Council went "in camera" for the rest of the meeting to discuss the sewage lagoon — re land for ditch right of way and also a letter from Alberta Environment Water Resources regarding the drainage course.

TOFIELD

Toros even series

Tofield Toros just won't quit!

After being blown away by Nursette in the opening game of their County Senior Hockey League semi-finals, Tofield has rebounded to win two out of three games.

As a result, a fifth and deciding game is being played tonight (Tuesday) in Camrose.

The winner of tonight's contest will advance to the league finals against Camrose Blackhawks in a best of five series.

That series will open tomorrow (Wednesday) night in Camrose and the other games will depend on who wins between Nursette and Tofield.

In Nursette wins, the second game will go on Sunday evening.

If Tofield emerged as a finalist, the second game goes in Tofield on Friday night and the third game will be in Camrose on Sunday.

Toros evened their series with Nursette on Sunday night when they earned a hard-fought 7-6 decision over the Camrose squad.

Tofield notched the first two goals of the game only to see Nursette score the next five and seemingly, had the game under control.

Tofield came back with two goals late in the second period, tied the game late in the third and then scored the winner with less than a minute to go and clinched the contest with an empty-net tally.

G Olson led the winner when he notched two goals and added three assists while Friesen struck for a hat-trick and the singles came from King and Jenkinson.

Nursette goals were netted by Gaume, Shotheim with a pair, Asperes and Dixon.

Each team had forty-two shots on goal in the penalty-studded contest which saw Nursette called for 21 rule infractions while Tofield was assessed 20 penalties.

An exhibition game involving a league team was played in Camrose on Sunday afternoon.

The Blackhawks met the Maroons of the Commercial Hockey League which resulted in a 6-6 stalemate.

The game was held to raise funds for the CMSA's 'silent sponsor' program and organizers were disappointed with the small turnout of fans.

Walsh led the Maroons when he picked up a hat-trick while Friesen struck for a hat-trick and the singles came from King and Jenkinson.

Nursette goals were netted by Gaume, Shotheim with a pair, Asperes and Dixon.

BETWEEN THE COVERS

The first week of May will be the National Book Festival. A number of exciting events are planned to celebrate this week in the Tofield Library. Please mark your calendars now for Friday, May 4, when Mrs. Peggy Hallman, Edmonton author of "It Could Have Been Worse", will visit the Library. Watch this column for further news of the festival.

On the new book table this week, there is a selection of books to help you manage your money more effectively: "Your Money and How to Keep It" by Brian Costello; "Efficient Accounting and Record Keeping" by Dennis Doyle, and "Get Smart: Make Your Money Count" by Lynnea MacInnis, all provide information on this vital topic.

On the fiction side, there is rumour, science fiction and history. P.G. Wodehouse is the author of a collection of five stories, together in one book, including "Spring Fever", "The Butler Did It" and others. Isaac Asimov, that most prolific of writers, has published a new novel, "The Robots of Dawn", a murder mystery with a difference: the victim was a robot.

Zoe Fairbairns has produced a most enjoyable and readable "feminist saga" with her book "Stand We At Last". It covers four generations and 120 years, moving from England to Australia, the U.S. and back again.

We have not neglected our younger readers either. Look for the following new titles on the display shelf: award-winning "Dicey's Song", by Cynthia Voigt and "Hunter in the Dark" by Monica Hughes. Other Canadian authors' works include "Billy Higgins Rides the Freights" (Gloria Montero), "River Race" (Tony Germaa), "One Proud Summer" (Marsha Hewitt) and "Could Dracula Live in Woodford?" (Mary Howarth).

Medically Speaking

by Dr. Bob Young

I must have been between shampoos the day a young lady of eight came to the office with a cold. While I was carefully examining her chest and heart with my stethoscope, she was examining me.

"Mommy", she said, in a startled, bell-like tone, "Doctor Young has dandruff!"

Lover-rode the mother's embarrassed gasp by telling the girl that I had been up all night delivering a baby (which might have been true), and that I was too tired to wash my hair that morning.

While the T.V. ads suggest that dandruff is right up there with heart disease as a health problem, it really isn't. The white flakes in your hair and on the dark suit you wear when you visit your banker may be normal, or may be the symptom of a skin disease.

Our skin consists of seven distinct layers. The outer layer consists of "used up" cells which lose their stickiness as they mature. They have to go somewhere, so they flake off and disappear, either down the shower drain or on to your shoulders. Body skin, as well as scalp skin, does this.

In a disease called seborrheic dermatitis, inflamed skin is present on the scalp and frequently over the bridge of the nose, on the eyebrows and eyelid margins, and in the ear canals. In babies the condition is known as cradle-cap.

In most cases the disease is mild. Often enough, though, the skin is thickened, red, itchy, and produces an endless number of scales. These cases require more than a drug store shampoo.

Social dandruff can be controlled (not cured) by most advertised shampoos. They work by softening away the flakes that come loose once the last wash, and by prematurely loosening the flakes that are due to come off in the next two or three days. After that time the skin has matured enough to start shedding again, and the process must be repeated.

Seborrhoeic dermatitis requires treatment such as petrolatum-based cortisone-containing ointments.

Dr. Young treated his problem by going to the office sample cupboard for a suitable shampoo as soon as the young girl left the office!

Kingman district notes

by Sharon Sandy

Mr. Bob Bewick returned home after spending two weeks in an Edmonton hospital where he had surgery. Jodie Bewick went to Edmonton for a week during this time.

Dick, Sharon and Rick Sandy visited with Larry and Ann Kozack of Duffield on the weekend of March 19 and 11.

John and Nellie Kozack and Joe and Rosie Kozack visited with Mike Cusnick of the Tofield Lodge on March 9. They also went to the Tofield Farmer's Market where Rosie won a cushion when her name was drawn.

Nancy and John Vantoheff and boys have moved to their new home in Camrose last week. On Wednesday, Henry, Michael and Peter brought a cake to school and treated their teachers and classmates.

In the past week there are three new babies added to the community. A son, Derek, was born to Diane and Ronnie Oleneerg on March 14. On March 14, Lorraine and Desiree Simonson had an 8 pound boy, Luke Merlin. Also on March 14, a baby girl, Jennifer Lynn, weighing 7 pounds and 5 ounces, was born to Larry and Lynn Flemming.

Kingman Recreation Association held their annual ham bingo on March 18 with a good crowd participating. Mrs. Huebner of Tofield was a double winner and the Kwasnowski family had lucky in that Sharon and Cory each won a ham. Lunch followed the bingo.

BRTA sets tour

The Battle River Tourist Association has decided to proceed with plans for bus tours of the Battle River area.

That decision was made on Thursday when BRTA delegates held their monthly meeting in Alliance.

The pilot tour has been scheduled for May 9th and if it is, as anticipated, successful, other tours will be quickly arranged.

The prime purpose for arranging the tours is to introduce people to the unique attractions and beauty to be found in the Battle River Area.

The project is being conducted in co-operation with Camrose Community Bus Service and persons interested in participating in the pilot tour have been advised to contact the BRTA office in Camrose.

Forty-five delegates attended last week's meeting and were hosted to a dinner by the Alliance Chamber of Commerce and the County of Flagstaff with words of welcome being extended by Alliance Mayor Smith McLennan, C of C Secretary Enid Neufeld and Flagstaff Representative Rolf Jacobsen.

Members were advised that Jack Chesney, General manager of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, had agreed to be the guest speaker at BRTA's annual meeting, which is scheduled for the fall.

Rolf Jacobsen told delegates that twenty-five people representing various municipalities and government departments had attended a special meeting in Big Knife Provincial Park to discuss the spruce budworm problem.

Flagstaff Agricultural Fieldman Brian Lee gave a detailed report from that meeting and it was agreed that a recommendation should be delated until April to allow time for municipalities to respond to the problem.

In another matter, Bob Brown of Leduc reported that the BRTA's annual cavalcade, scheduled for May 26 and 27, was fully booked.

Brown also reported that the new BRTA van had arrived and was pressed into immediate service.

Members were told that over 6,000 pieces of BRTA promotional material had been handed out during sportsmen's shows in Regina, Calgary and Edmonton.

The next BRTA meeting has been scheduled for April 19, in Sherwood Park.

Awards presented by Joan Bruce

On March 16th, in-house trophies were awarded at the Ryley Junior Sports hockey wind-up luncheon.

Kelly Bancroft received one for Most Improved Player and Richard Bratrud received the Most Valuable Player award. Both boys played for the Ryley Rockets.

Dynette Istace of the Ryley Rebels received an honourable mention for Best Defensive Player.

A new award donated by Tofield Treasury Branch has been brought in to play this year. Usually in-house trophies are returned at the end of a one-year period and the player has no permanent record of his success.

The new award, engraved plaques bearing the winner's name and award title, allows the player to display a permanent symbol of his victory.

Plaques were awarded to Kelly Kowalchuk — Most Valuable Player 83-83, and David McMath — Most Defensive Player 83-83.

Although coaches did not receive trophies, they were thanked for their many hours of hard work and dedication over this past season.

Holden and district news

by Mrs. G.H. Taylor

Mrs. Ethel Brekstad had a pleasant surprise Tuesday afternoon of last week, when her son and family, Major and Mrs. Leslie Brekstad and two granddaughters of Inuvik, N.W.T. visited in the afternoon, stopping off in Edmonton between plane flights on their way home from a holiday trip in the U.S.

Thursday of last week members of the Holden and District historical book committee spent the day at the Drop-in Centre on a revision of the history book which is now prepared for the printing.

On March 11th, the Holden United Church congregation attended the church service in Ryley and enjoyed a pot-luck dinner after the service.

Holden Lodge Order of the Royal Purple held a regular meeting March 13th with HRL Mary Semotiuk in the chair. The meeting was an open meeting with members from Irma, Kinsella and Viking Lodges attending.

It was also a membership night with several ladies from Holden being invited to attend as guests.

The date for the teachers' banquet had been changed to April 11th. HRL Semotiuk reported on the Elks and Royal Purple bingo held March 2nd.

A nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers for the 1984-85 term was appointed. The Lodge was advised by the District Deputy of the work to be exemplified by the Lodge at the District meeting on April 28th. Invitations to Wainwright and Kinsella Lodges were received.

District Dep. L. Overbo gave a brief resume of the Order of the Royal Purple and the objective of the Purple Cross Fund and the Program. At the conclusion of the meeting, lunch and a social hour was enjoyed by members and visitors.

Mrs. Kathleen Hurum is a patient in Tofield Hospital. A week ago Sunday, she had an unfortunate accident, slipping on an icy patch on the road and breaking her ankle.

Mr and Mrs. George Taylor were Sunday guests at the home of their son and family, Robert and Merle Taylor of Viking, and granddaughter Saylor of Edmonton was home for the weekend.

Thursday evening the Holden and District Homecoming Committee, with representatives from all the various organizations taking part, held a meeting in the Drop-in Centre making arrangements and plans to be held at the Homecoming on August 4, 5 and 6th.

The Holden Friendship Group will hold their regular meeting on March 21st at the home of Mrs. Ethel Brekstad.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stambaugh are home from a trip to points in the U.S., stopping at Portland and visiting with an old friend, Mrs. Lola Lund.

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor had a phone call Sunday night from their grandson, Ronald of St. Albert who was to leave Wednesday for Sudbury and other points in Eastern Canada, being away for nine months.

SNACK ATTACK

For children and many of us adults, snacking is part of our daily food intake. Growing children need extra food energy between "regular" meals. When feeding little ones, it's hard to know where the snack stops and the meal begins.

Because children rely on snacks to provide part of the day's nutrients, it is essential that preparing nutritious snacks be part of your routine. Carrot sticks, stuffed celery, frozen bananas or cheese and pineapple cubes on a toothpick are all examples of good snacks.

Try to avoid serving cake, sweet cookies or sweetened drinks as between meal snacks. Not only are they bad for the teeth, but they don't provide the vitamins and minerals other snacks might. Even sugar-free pop is not really a good snack choice. While it may be sugar-free it still does not provide any of the nutrients that milk or juice would.

Remember, snack foods should provide a portion of the recommended daily intake of nutrients. For more information about nutrition, or snack ideas ask for the free publications. Nutrition: the ins and outs and Snack Attack.

...often goes unrecognized. Especially excellence in the young

The Alberta Junior Citizens of the Year program recognizes young people between the ages of six and 18 who have achieved excellence

Their achievement can be in any field community service — school activities — family life — personal courage and commitment. The main criteria for receiving the award are that the recipients have tried harder and done more on behalf of people around them than we would ordinarily expect of someone their age

Over the past 23 years, more than 200 individuals and 25 groups of young Albertans have been recognized through the program. So look around you. Surely

Kinsmen plan 13th rodeo

Camrose Kinsmen are in the process of finalizing plans of the holding of their annual indoor rodeo.

This year's production will open on April 13 in the Recreation Centre and continue for three days. Two of the performances will be on Friday and Saturday nights while the third goes on the Sunday afternoon.

All of the usual rodeo attractions have been scheduled and Kinsmen feel they have an extra added attraction with the announcement that a world champion will be among the competitors.

Cody Snyder is a native Albertan having been born in Redcliff and last year, he became the world champion bull rider when he won that crown during the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City.

Two other well known names who will be heard during the Kinsmen Rodeo are Ernie Marshall considered to be one of the best rodeo clowns and announcer Jack Daines will be returning to keep everyone informed.

This year's rodeo has the Duggan Mall as the major sponsor and other sponsors include CFCW, Molson Brewery, Norsemen Motor Inn, Town & Country Drugmart, UFA Farm Supply Centre, Camrose Implements and Carpet Bin.

Advance tickets for all three performances will go on sale April 2nd and will be available at Byers Country & Western Store and the Duggan Mall.

On the first night, senior citizens, 4-H members and children 12 years and under will be admitted for half price.

The rodeo saloon will again operate in the Curling Rink with music being supplied by Wheatstone. On the first night (Friday), all ladies will be admitted free of charge.

Once again there will be a rodeo queen contestant.

Names of the candidate's seeking the queen's crown will be announced next week. The new queen will be crowned on Saturday night.

This is the thirteenth successive year in which the Kinsmen have held a rodeo and among the events will be bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, ladies' barrel racing and boys' steer riding.

Vold Rodeo is again supplying all the stock.

Monies earned by the holding of the rodeo will be used by the Kinsmen for their community projects.

There's a lot going on for women in Alberta

Find out

In Alberta, there are many opportunities for women to get involved in or take advantage of programs, services and benefits offered through the Government of Canada. You owe it to yourself to know about them. A few are listed here and there are many more. Just use the coupon below to get more information.

Need help getting a job?

If you're planning a career or looking for a job, your Canada Employment Centre can help. If you're thinking of going back to work, or changing jobs, or going to work for the first time, you may want to consult the nearest Women's Employment Counselling Centre. The WECC can help you decide what work you are best suited for and would most enjoy. It can teach you job-finding skills, and help you get essential training and on-the-job experience. Counsellors specially trained to help women get ahead in the labour market will provide a variety of job-related assistance. Some Outreach Projects specifically for women offer similar services. Ask at your local Canada Employment Centre for details.

Can't afford to get job training?

Maybe you can. There are many courses available for women in Alberta now. They range from academic upgrading to skill training. Most are offered by community colleges or provincial training centres throughout the province. If your Canada Employment Centre counsellor feels training will improve your marketable skills, you can take an approved course at no cost to you.

If you are eligible for Unemployment Insurance, you will draw your benefits during the training period. Training allowances are available for those not eligible for UI. Enquire at your local Canada Employment Centre, and send in the coupon.

You can earn while you learn

Another option is on-the-job training. Opportunities to be trained in non-traditional jobs can readily be found in Alberta. Many of these jobs are both challenging and high paying. The Government of Canada, through its General Industrial Training and Critical Skills Training programs encourages employers to hire and train women. Generous financial assistance is offered. Interested in working as a systems analyst, computer programmer, chef, machinist? There are lots of possibilities. Find out more by mailing the coupon.

Help with child care

Income tax deductions for child care expense have been doubled – up to $2,000 per child. Send the coupon for more details.

The Women's Program

This program was created to support women's voluntary associations working in fields of particular interest to women. Through it, the Secretary of State Department makes grants and other resources available to women's groups to develop projects that will contribute to community education and action around status of women issues. Program staff are available as resource persons for information and project assistance. They also develop and distribute print material.

Canada Works might help you

Canada Works is a job creation program that provides funds to community organizations, municipalities and businesses, helping them to hire staff for special work projects and activities. If you have been unemployed for eight weeks, you could be eligible to work on a Canada Works project. The jobs last from six to 52 weeks and give you experience and contacts that might help you find a long term job. Your Canada Employment Centre has information on the Canada Works jobs available in your community.

Labour Canada Women's Bureau

The Labour Canada Women's Bureau was established in 1954 to provide leadership and services to women in paid employment. A key role is the development, promotion and support of policies and programs to achieve equality for women in all facets of employment, opportunity, pay, rights and benefits. The Bureau addresses women's concerns through research, policy assessment and education. Send in the coupon to find out more.

IN MEMORIAM

JOSEY — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather Peter, who passed away March 20, 1977.

We who loved you sadly miss you
As it dawns another year

Thoughts of you are ever near
His dear bright eyes and cheerful face
Are pleasant to recall
He had a loving word for each
And died beloved by all —Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Mildred and family

RURKA — Bill J. In loving memory of a husband, father and grandfather who passed away March 26, 1967.

God's Golden Gates stood open
Sixteen years ago today
With farewells left unspoken

May the winds of heaven blow gently
On the quiet and peaceful spot
Where the one we loved is sleeping
And will never be forgot
Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Annie, daughters Olga, Susan & Marilyn 29-6811

Permits are required

. . . for building changes

by Joan Murray

It has come to the attention of Town Council that the public must be made aware of proper procedure regarding permits for renovation changes in a new location, or new business coming into town or new construction within the town limits.

It is required under local land use by-laws that one must first apply for proper permits before starting relocation or construction changes. In this way it can be determined if the projects are acceptable as proposed according to local by-laws.

This allows council to be informed as to what is happening within the town limits and also protects the applicant from breaking any by-laws.

After careful consideration and much discussion, it was passed by council that anyone considering construction, renovation or relocation must apply to the Town of Tofield for a "Building Use Permit".

This permit will then be issued at no charge for projects falling within the permitted usage category. Any such projects which come under the discretionary usage category have to have a "Development Permit". There will be a fee required for this permit to cover the cost of advertising.

A request was received from a local contractor asking the Council to consider rezoning an area of town from urban reserve to R-3, permitting him to build an apartment on a small parcel (approximately 15,000 square feet) of land with Block Y. This land is located southwest of the Gospel Church. In response to this request, a by-law to amend the land use by-law was given first reading and will be publicly advertised before second reading will be considered. April 30th at 7 p.m. was set for a public hearing regarding this matter.

Mayor C.W. Sears declared April 29th to May 5th as National Book Festival Week, in response to a request from Librarian, Elizabeth Hubbard.

Fire sale prices have been tagged on residential lots at $10,000 each, until August 1st. These lots are located west of the Fire Hall.

There have been many inquiries about the kinds that located at the reservoir. Council has stated that it is not for sale and is required for town use.

Property east of town, on the Correction Line, will be investigated as a possible site for a regional landfill transfer site.

The black poplar trees in Lions Park have been cut down and the logs are stacked in the park. The public is welcome and encouraged to remove these for their own use, free of charge.

Ryley hosts Zone rally

. . . for Legion members

by Joan Murray

Representatives from Ryley, Holden, Tofield, Chauvin, Edgerton, Wainwright and Viking Branches attended a Legion Zone Rally in Ryley on Saturday afternoon.

The Tofield Color Party led by Piper, Gordon Kyle, and directed by Sergeant-at-Arms, Laura Wood opended the [illegible].

Owen Jones of Ryley was elected Zone Commander by acclamation and will be formerly installed at the District Rally on April 28th.

Jones addressed the Branch members of his views towards getting younger members actively involved at the executive level. He noted that the Holden Legion president was a younger man and extended a standing invitation for him to call anytime he needed help of any kind and urged other members to give their full support whenever possible.

Guest speaker for the day was Pete Morrison, vice-president of the Alberta Northwest Territorial Command. He noted that there were 5,182 members in District No. 3 and of this amount, 1,347 were from Zone No. 2. This is an increase of 156 over 1982 figures.

1985 is the Legion Golden Jubilee year and will be the "last hurrah" for many veterans. They will be too old to be actively involved in the next important anniversary celebration and because of this, it has become of grave concern to those in command to gain more new younger members to carry on Legion traditions. It was impressed upon the branches present, the need to do something in their communities for this event, that would gain recognition of what the Legion stands for. Plans are also being made to educate the present leaders in presenting to their young successors the aspects of the duties and responsibilities of those in command. There will be a leadership and planning workshop held this fall specifically for this purpose.

The theme of the Golden Anniversary will be "Pride in our Past, Faith in our Future".

The Ladies Auxiliary will celebrate their 30th anniversary in September.

Sonny Barton, second vice-president for Alberta Northwest Territories requested that the individual branches of the Ladies Auxiliaries submit their histories for this event as soon as possible.

The literary and poster contest participation was exceptionally good this year. Mr. Morrison felt that there were two posters in particular that exhibit qualities which should gain them entry to the national level of competition. He said they were the best he has ever seen since he started being involved with the contest.

The awards for the winners were given to Branch leaders to be presented to the students at a later date.

Cadets pass course

by Joan Murray

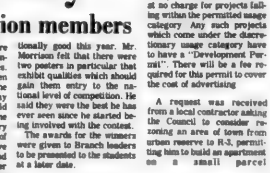
Twenty members of the RCSCC Nootka Sea Cadet Corps from Ryley, Holden and Tofield completed a full emergency first-aid course in issues twenty and 21 minutes on Sunday in the Ryley School Library.

The course concluded testing on mouth to mouth resuscitation, control of bleeding, immobilizing fractures, moving casualties, as well as burns, scalds, hypothermia and heat exhaustion. They were given both practical and written tests on these topics.

Once this course is completed they will receive a badge for their uniforms as well as a certificate for their achievement. They will then be eligible for a standard first aid course to be completed next year.

Dick Moreau, P.W.A (Pacific Western Airlines) Safety Supervisor, instructed the class. All twenty of his students passed the course with two receiving 100%.

They will be presented with certificates at the annual inspection in May.



Runners-up

Trish Longe and Kristin Blades, two of ten runners-up in the Northern Alberta Children's Hospital Foundation poster contest received a letter of recognition and a certificate for their efforts. They attend Mr. Fosler's grade six class in the Tofield School.

Girls enter contest

Both grade 6 classes in Tofield entered the Northern Alberta Children's Hospital Foundation poster contest.

Trish Longe and Kristin Blades are two of the 10 runners-up. They received a letter of recognition and a certificate.

The teachers that had their class participate will be receiving a certificate and a Northern Alberta Children's Hospital Foundation gold pin.

Against employees

Workers in Alberta are protesting decisions of the Workers Compensation Board that the board is "loaded" against the employee, and in favor of the employer. At the same time, employers tend to feel it's just as unreasonable the other way around . . . they're doing all the paying, while the workers are doing all the gaining.

It's just possible the WCB may be doing something right, if both sides feel they're being biased toward the other side.

On the other hand, both sides could possibly be right, and the WCB could be clearly out in left field.

We tend to agree with workers who deplore the action of the board in maintaining workers are fit to go back to work (and draw no more benefits) even when doctors say this is not so. We agree with workers who protest the decision to chop disability pensions, or widows pensions, after only five years, rather than the former lifetime status. We don't really feel that decision is based in logic.

At the same time, we think the Board is being completely unrealistic in trying to maintain payments to disabled workers at ninety percent of their former earnings. Surely Compensation is considered a form of insurance, and while it may be tough trying to adjust, most of us can't afford the kind of insurance that will guarantee ninety percent of income.

Nor can we agree with the maximum, which is $40,000. Which means a worker would be guaranteed $36,000 per year, while disabled, if they were earning at that rate. Now precious few of us earn $40,000, so there can be precious few paying premiums or assessments based on that level. But when they collect, it can go through the contributions of countless smaller wage earners, so that the fund is in trouble.

Obviously, there have to be some limits somewhere, high and low. But we think the Board is being forced to be unreasonably niggardly in the area of workers not yet ready to go back to work, in the area of pensions for widows, and other aspects, while being unreasonably generous in total compensation.

We look at the principle involved in veterans disability pensions, and realize that while it may not be what the worker could otherwise earn, still it's a sensible, defencible and practical basis.

Probably we're looking at a philosophy born of recent years which expects a system to produce more than it can reasonably sustain, drafted by a civil service insulated from the real world and all too ready to impose iron-clad regulations reflecting their view of what should be, rather than the world's proof of what can be.

In this respect, it's too bad Alberta Report Publisher Ted Byfield's view reported last week in this paper, couldn't be required reading for everyone in government. Addressing Rotarians, Mr. Byfield detailed how the system is being charged with paying out more than it can possibly manage, and declared there are only two solutions: Revolution, or bankruptcy.

It was only days ago, speaking in relative terms, that the then chairman of the Alberta Liquor Control Board felt we would never put a man on the moon. That's now part of history. Surely we've learned enough in the interim to realize there can be a middle course between bankruptcy and revolution. A saner course.

Junior Citizens,

The hunt is on again to identify some of Alberta's younger citizens who have made or are making major contributions to their families or their communities.

For years now Alberta's weekly newspapers have joined forces with TransAlta Utilities and Alberta Power to seek and acknowledge performance of an exceptional nature, whether it be a single event such as an heroic life saving, or a continuing effort such as homemaking in the face of illness or death.

If you know someone under the age of 18 who fits this category, we hope you'll take the time to inform either this newspaper or one of the other Alberta weekly newspapers, providing detail so the nominee can be judged against others in the group.

It can be a stimulating experience for the person nominated, especially when they win. And it is definitely a reassuring experience for the community to learn how many highly responsible young people there are about the province, in a day when we seem to hear so much about the other side of life among young people.

It should happen more often.

We aren't the only ones who have been enjoying our mild winter weather. We've been invaded by several varieties of flu bugs, germs, viruses and what-have-you and all are alive and thriving and inflicting themselves on the unhappy population. Everyone you talk to is either just getting over a flu, has it now or will have it in the immediate future.

It's always nice to be given a choice and we certainly have been. Not concerning whether we'll contract the illness, merely which of the many kinds our bodies will submit to. If you haven't been bit yet, beware. When the bug bites you could a) have headaches, stomach pains, nausea and a permanent seat in the bathroom, b) suffer from a sensation of your head being off to one side and your feet 6 inches off the ground, c) tip over in a dead faint — no pun intended, d) feel weak-kneed while the rest of you is a big pain, e) contract such a head and/or chest cold that you will pray for death or a chance to breathe normally, whichever comes first . . . Have I missed any? If so, it has nothing to do with favoritism. I hate them all equally.

The trouble with these nasty little fellows is that they are hangers-on who don't know when they've over-stayed their welcome. We just got our kids back to school and their father off the couch and they are right back, each with the other's complaint. It's at times like this that we wish our children hadn't listened to our talks about sharing. And the supply is never-ending. Just when we thought our local germs depleted, the good news about our weather spread south. There are a lot of things that I like about our neighbour to the south but I don't think sending up their flu bugs does much to cement good international relations, despite what they say about welcoming all tourist trade.

All this immigration is putting Canadian products out of work, and if they won't go out on strike as a protest, then it is left to the consumer. Never let it be said that I haven't done my bit to boost the economy. From now on, all I'm accepting are Canadian-made diseases.

AGT delivers new directories

Delivery of the 1984 Camrose — Wetaskiwin and Area telephone directories is now underway.

AGT expects to have more [illegible] Battle River Country customers by the time it takes effect on April 7.

Customers who haven't received a directory by that date should call the AGT Business Office at 425-8630 (no toll charge).

Three major changes have taken place since last year's edition.

The white pages have a new 'Superbold' listing available, at three times the size of previous bold listings. Yellow Pages have been changed to the standardized column size for Alberta directories, resulting in a four-column format instead of the old three-column style.

A new color appears in the book this time — orange pages have been added to the familiar white and yellow pages.

Wayne Christie, Directory Production Manager explains, "We've added the orange pages to highlight the Yellow Pages index. Last year we had the index, but with it being the same color as the Yellow Pages, some people probably weren't even aware of it."

AGT's province-wide distribution of directories during the coming year is expected to exceed last year's record breaking 2.5 million circulation.

Record high tied

The mild weather that prevailed during the past week hovered in the vicinity of record levels.

A fifty-eight year old record was tied.

The mercury climbed to twelve degrees above zero on Friday and that tied a record high which had been established in 1926.

On three days earlier in the week, temperatures were within two to four degrees of climbing to record high levels.

The highest temperature ever recorded in March took place on the final day of the month in 1942 when it got to eighteen above.

The coolest day in the month was on March 11, 1951 when it was forty-three degrees below zero.

Sunday begins a new month and temperatures can vary greatly.

The coldest day even in that month took place on April 2, 1954 when it dropped to thirty-three degrees below zero.

In contrast, the warmest day of the month took place on April 29, 1939 when it soared to thirty-one above.

BETWEEN THE COVERS

There are a number of new books which are collections of different types of material this week.

"The Best of Modern Humour" edited by Mordecai Richler brings together excerpts from the writings of over 60 North American and British authors, selections of wit and humour of all sorts.

"The Book of Lists 3" is described as "all new from cover to cover", and is sure to be meaty fare for trivia nuts.

"West of Fiction", edited by Aritha van Herk and Rudy Wiebe, is a collection of short stories, all either about the West or written by western authors. Brief biographical notes of the thirty Canadian authors are also included.

"Max: The Best of Braithwaite" includes many items previously published, as well as a few new ones. Here is a collection of the funniest of this writer's works.

"Western Memorabilia: Collections of the Old West" is about collecting, specifically with a western theme. Full of photographs, it is an informative book for antique collectors with this special interest.

There is always room for a new book on animals, especially one of the quality of "Wild Mammals of Canada", by Frederick H Wooding. Beautiful photographs, informative sketches, territorial range maps, and extensive notes on history, habits and behaviour of each species are included.

We have the new book "Blue Highways" by William Least Heat Moon, a powerful and moving picture of America today. He has travelled across his country finding the "little people" and shows us their lives, their dreams and their strengths and weaknesses.

For Donald Jack readers, the fifth volume in the Bandy Papers is now in the library, "Me Too". Volumes 1 through 4 of these Stephen Leacock Humour Award winners are also available.

Regular library hours are Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-5 and 6-9, Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-5.

RE: New Procedure for applying for EXTENDED HEALTH BENEFITS

Beginning April 1, 1984, the procedure for applying for Extended Health Benefits will be changed.

If you are currently receiving medical equipment or supplies under the Extended Health Benefits program, you will not be affected by the change, unless you need additional or new benefits.

The Extended Health Benefits program provides eligible senior citizens of 65 years of age and over and their dependants with medical equipment and supplies such as bathing and toileting aids, walking aids, medical/surgical supplies, hearing aids, respiratory aids or wheelchairs.

After April 1, you need to apply for such benefits through a registered program authorizer. Registered program authorizers are certain registered nurses, occupational therapists, physiotherapists or doctors from any of the following:

- health units
- hospital rehabilitation programs
- nursing homes
- auxiliary hospitals or
- private practices.

A registered program authorizer will complete an application form which you may then take to a medical supplier or pharmacist to obtain benefits.

For more information or for a copy of the brochure explaining the Extended Health Benefits program contact the Health Unit nearest you or

Hay Lakes

by Mrs. A. Arnston

Emil and Joan Beaman have returned from a three-week vacation spent in New Zealand and Australia. They landed at Auckland and spent four days there before going on to Christchurch.

They also spent four days in Sydney, the largest city of Australia. Here they visited the famous Sydney Opera House which is situated on the ocean. The building is shaped like snails on a ship and has 980 different rooms. The pipe organ alone is said to have taken 10 years to build.

On the return flight Emil and Joan spent three days in Hawaii at Waikiki. Temperatures were 85 to 90 degrees daily. They were happy to return to their farm home in sunny Alberta.

Born to Randy and Rhonda Paul a third son, Adam Jonathon Bruce. He was born at St. Mary's Hospital on March 20 and weighed 7 lbs. 6 oz.

The Sunday smorgasbord, sponsored by the Hay Lakes History Book Committee, proved to be most successful with approximately 250 people attending. The profit realized will be used to pay back loans received for publishing costs of the book. The committee is grateful to the community for their support of the project.

Bea Jacobsen and Anna Peters were among the Guide Leaders who attended the annual Provincial Leader Training which was held at Camp Wainwright on the weekend.

Forum scheduled

A public forum on Metric and Imperial measures will be held in Camrose next week.

The forum is to be held on Wednesday (April 4) in the Norsemen Motor Inn starting at 7:30 p.m.

Confirmed speakers for the occasion include Dr. Stan Grywalski, Superintendent of the Camrose Public School District, Bruce Dennell and Gary Popowich of Alberta Education and Sandra Weidner of the Lacombe School District.

Arrangements are underway in an attempt to obtain other speakers from the Federal and Provincial Governments along with representatives of both the City and County of Camrose.

The public has been invited to attend this forum and anyone in attendance may present a brief or address the gathering.

Entitled "Metric-Imperial Reality", the forum has been arranged by Ray Reid and an attempt to organize a group on Metric-Imperial Measures may follow next week's forum.

It is the contention of organizers of the forum that the system of measurement in Canada should either be Imperial or a combination of Imperial and Metric but, not Metric alone.

Williams is winner

Edith Williams of Camrose was a major winner during a contest held in Arizona.

Williams entered a "sew it with cotton" contest which was put on by the Yuma County Cotton Wives.

For her efforts in taking the grand prize, Williams was presented with a Singer sewing machine and cabinet along with a cash award.

The competition attracted a total of sixty entries in six categories.

Why TransAlta is helping your child become a meter reader

At TransAlta Utilities, we believe that knowing how to manage electrical energy is important to Albertans.

Important enough that it should be available to children in the classroom.

That's the reason for the colourful energy management teaching material now being used in many of Alberta's schools.

We designed, produced and distribute it as part of our continuing commitment to the better management of electrical energy in our province.

We're helping your children become meter readers because it could lead to better use of Alberta's energy resources, and that benefits us all.

For a free copy of the children's workbook, or any of our other energy management publications, call or write us indicating your type of electrical consumption (i.e. home, business, etc.). TransAlta Utilities Energy Management, Box 1900, Calgary, Alberta T2P 2M1. Phone 267-7194

As I See It

by Dr. Walt Buck, M.L.A. Clover Bar

The Spring session of the Legislature is now moving through its second week. The major issue, as determined by responses from my constituents, it clearly the unemployment situation. This, of course, relates back to the general economic slump in Alberta. I would be unfair if I attempted to lay all the blame for this situation at the [illegible].

However, let me say that we should all remember that when things go well, the Lougheed government doesn't hesitate to take the credit. Unfortunately, the government now clearly is not prepared to take any responsibility for the downturn in the economy. In fact, about all the government has done is to increase its own revenues at our expense.

Included in the "money-grab" is the 13% increase in personal income tax, effective at the first of this year. I personally voted against that legislation.

I have now introduced Bill 204, which would repeal that tax. I have requested public support to bring this issue before the Legislature in a graphic and realistic way. I wish to thank all who have contacted me indicating support for this proposed legislation. I still believe that the levy of unnecessary taxes on our citizens has a negative effect on our economy. You have supported me in this contention and I thank you for that support.

Congratulations to Mrs. John Henderson of Fort Saskatchewan on her 90th birthday. It was a pleasure for me to be part of the festivities for this long-time resident of Fort Saskatchewan where her many friends and family gathered at the Pioneer Home. We wish to thank Mrs. Henderson for her contribution to our community.

When you have concerns, questions, suggestions or comments, please contact my Legislature office at 427-2231 (collect) or write to Room 214 Legislature Building, Edmonton, Alberta T5K 2B6.

Horsemen have meeting

Katchemut Creek Family Horse Club held its regular monthly meeting on Sunday in Beaverhill Family Center.

A good number of members turned out and a few guests were made welcome.

It was decided to have a special meeting on April 4 at 8 p.m. in the Beaverhill Family Center to make plans for the club's second "Senior Day" which is the first gymkhana event for the club this season.

It was also decided that the club will hold its summer monthly meetings on a Wednesday evening in the middle of the month.

More discussion and plans were finalized for the upcoming slave and general merchandise auction. This event will be held at the club grounds north of town on April 7 at 1 p.m.

Red Hokanson will be the auctioneer, with Walter Krystal in charge of receiving and arranging the merchandise for sale. Anyone is welcome to donate articles for this sale and it is hoped that many will come and buy a slave.

Plans were made for some of the club's summer activities, including an overnight trail ride later into the summer.

The tickets for the club's Camrose Rodeo Queen contestant, Renee King, are not out yet.

After the meeting, some club members busied themselves making posters for the coming auction sale.

Report from Parliament Hill

by Hon. Don Mazankowski P.C., M.P.

VIA PROMISES A SHAM: MAZANKOWSKI

The Liberal government is playing politics rather than making a real commitment to upgrade VIA Rail service, charged Don Mazankowski, P.C. Spokesman on Transportation.

"Despite all their promises, few concrete improvements in service have occurred. The Liberal government continues to back out of its commitments while at the same time making more and more promises."

"In a recent appearance before the Senate Transportation Committee, Transport Minister Axworthy denied that the government had ever made a 'specific commitment' to provide new equipment to Western and Atlantic Canada. Yet in 1981, then Transport Minister Pepin clearly promised that new LRC units 'would be rolling in western Canada and in the Maritimes in the next two or three years'."

"Now, in 1984, these new trains are nowhere in sight" said Mr. Mazankowski. "Passengers must still endure the delays and inconvenience caused by 30-year old equipment and VIA now says the new cars would not be in service until 1989 or 1990."

"The Liberal government is also withdrawing from its recently announced intention to restore the Edmundston-Moncton service in New Brunswick which was cut in 1981. The Minister told the Senate Committee that a 'two-year trail program' will begin in 1986 rather than a permanent reinstatement of the route as had previously been implied."

"The Minister further indicated that he would not necessarily bring forth a VIA Rail Act, despite the promises of his predecessor and the widely acknowledged need to provide VIA with a clear legislative form and mandate."

"Clearly, Canadians cannot believe that this government is serious about improving rail passenger service. The most recent announcements of new facilities, equipment and service are no more than political gestures that repeat the broken promises of the past."

"Meanwhile, Canadians continue to be denied a convenient, reliable rail passenger service that could be provided if Mr. Axworthy lived up to his promises to address the problems facing VIA.

1) [illegible] Book" that we have given out in the past has been updated and will be available from our office around the end of March

2) 2,4-D Amine 500 may state a concentration level of 470g/l. or 480g/l. instead of 500g/l. The amounts used by farmers WILL NOT CHANGE.

3) "Extra-strength" formulations of Pardner and Buctril M may be available this year, with higher concentrations of active ingredients. Be absolutely sure that the rate you are using is the rate specified ON THE LABEL.

4) The same situation exists with an "extra-strength" formulation of Hoegrass.

5) The registration status, as of March 14, 1984, for Lontrel 360 is that is will again be FOR TRIAL USE ONLY. Unless the status changes in the next few weeks, this means that supplies will again be very limited

6) Fusilade, a new product for the control of grassy weeds in broadleaf crops does not have canola listed on the label. Therefore, the herbicide is not yet registered for use on [illegible]

7) The label on Tordon 202C will now have the following statements: Tordon 202 treated fields may be seeded to cereals, flax and rapeseed. Should not be planted to [illegible] 3rd year and beans, lentils and potatoes until the 5th year."

8) The recropping intervals for fields treated with "Glean" are very stringent and can severely restrict what can be grown in that field for 2 or 3 years following application. Please contact your [illegible] the details concerning this herbicide BEFORE YOU APPLY IT

9) Spring application of Treflan QR5 on barley is not recommended for this area

Ryley Pool news

Welcome to another season at the Ryley Pool.

We encountered a few mechanical problems which delayed our opening. But, things are now under control and the pool is open.

Until April 9, when all our programs will get underway we will be open only for recreation swimming and adult swim and exercise.

Coming up events – Water Safety Instructors Level No. 1 April 6-8, 13-15, is a course designed for persons interested in instructing Red Cross color levels, or to learn [illegible] Cross program. The course involves teaching techniques, water orientation, water games, films and lots more. Interested persons should contact the pool as soon as possible.

This spring we will be offering two sets of Red Cross swimming lessons, as well as sets during the summer and fall.

The first set will be April 9 (10 lessons) and the second set will begin on May 22.

The pool is offering a discount to any person who registers in more than one set of Red Cross swim lessons this season

Our pool programs are not subsidized like many larger facilities, but we are trying to make our programs more affordable by offering this incentive.

Moms and Tots and Fun for 5's begin April 9th.

If you have any questions or requests please contact us — we will be happy to accommodate you.

Blackhawks win crown

Camrose Blackhawks are the champions of the County Senior Hockey League.

Blackhawks won the title when they ousted Tofield Toros in three straight games in the best of five finals series.

Earlier, Camrose had eliminated Rosalind in three straight contests in the semi-finals and they completed the entire schedule and the playoffs with only one loss.

After trailing twice in the other semi-final series, Tofield came back with two straight wins to eliminate Camrose Nursette and win the other berth in the finals.

The first game in the finals was played on Wednesday with Camrose piling up a 5-0 lead by early in the third period and they the coasted to an easy 7-2 triumph.

Hawse paced the Blackhawks when he notted two goals and added three assists while single goals came from Campbell, McIntosh, Orachoski, Bateman and Tiffery.

Tofield's goals were scored by Loshack and Gillrie.

Camrose outshot the visitors 57-34 and had three penalties to four for Tofield in the cleanly played contest.

The second contest was played in Tofield on Friday and after a wild first period which saw eight goals scored and Camrose in possession of a narrow 5-3 lead, the Blackhawks scored three [illegible] goals and went on to post an 8-3 decision.

Campbell picked up a hat-trick to lead the Camrose assault while B. Sawchuk and Story each netted a pair and the single was scored by [illegible]

Toro goals were scored by Garner, Jenkinson and G Olson.

Camrose outshot Tofield 50-40 and had nine penalties to only six for the Toros.

The third game in the series went right down to the final buzzer and ended in a close and exciting 6-5 decision for Camrose with the victory giving them the league championship.

Camrose led 3-1 at one stage in the first period only to see Tofield take the lead after scoring three straight goals and then Camrose went in front 6-4 with Tofield scoring with only three minutes left to make for a dramatic and exciting finish to the contest.

Koehli picked up a hat-trick to lead Camrose while the singles were scored by Campbell, B Sawchuk and Bateman with the latter's being the winning marker.

Friesen had a pair for Tofield whose other goals were scored by G. Olson, Loshack and Borten.

Camrose outshot Tofield 80-30 and were assessed ten penalties to seven for Tofield.

Semi-finals

Tofield Toros gained a lot of respect when they rebounded from a thrashing in the first game to earn a hard fought series with Nursette by a three games to two margin.

In the first four games, even though they were split at two wins each, Nursette had the edge in play and only a strong team effort and solid goaltending enabled the Toros to gain that split.

The fifth game saw the Toros enjoy the edge as they finished strong in the final two periods of play to gain a 5-4 decision as they outshot the visitors 36-33.

This contest almost went into overtime after Nursette had taken leads of 1-0, 3-1 and 4-2 before Tofield responded with three straight goals to win the contest.

Loshack emerged as the hero when he notched the winning goal with just nine seconds left in regulation time.

Other Toro marksmen were Doepel, G Olson, Jenkinson and Budinski while Dyck had a hat-trick for the losers whose other goal was notted by Skotheim.

It was a rough game that resulted in Nursette being assessed seventy minutes in penalties while Tofield picked up fifty-one.

Now that the Canada geese have started to return, ideas for spring are surfacing in the community.

The Pleasure Horse Association has had three loads of sand spread in the arena at the Hall, and is planning to hold a horse show there on June 2nd. Outings this winter have been prevented by snow conditions, but will be resumed when the ground is available.

The Pre-School Association is sending six parents to a playground workshop being run by Strathcona County Recreation department this week, and the Association is hopeful that, with County assistance, the playground at the Hall will be developed.

A flea market held on Feb 19 was notable for the success the preschoolers made of their own table, at which they sold toys they had donated for the purpose, and made $40 towards the playground, kids selling to kids, no adults allowed.

PLAN A PARTY

Looking for an event to perk up your spring? Plan an April Fool's Day party for youngsters and not-so-young [illegible].

Try an "everything backwards" party. It will appeal to any child's sense of fun. Tell your guests to dress backwards. Let them in the back door walking backwards (of course). Invite guests by phone, but pass out actual invitations at going-home time. Spell names backwards on place cards.

Schedule the party for late afternoon, but serve nutritious breakfast bars.

BREAKFAST BARS

Try serving Monkey Juice with the bars. Add mashed banana to each glass of milk and stir thoroughly or blend in a blender.

Breakfast bars make a good breakfast for those hard to tempt breakfast eaters. Try them.

Have fun on April 1st!

[illegible] BARS

½ c. light corn syrup
½ c. peanut butter
3 c. granola
optional: 1 carrot, grated

Butter a 9 inch square pan. In a 3 quart saucepan boil corn syrup for 1 minute only, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Stir in peanut butter. Stir in granola and grated carrot, if using. Work fast as mixture hardens quickly. Transfer to pan. Spread and pat in place with spoon or dampened spatula. Cool for an hour before cutting into bars.

Ryley collects trophies

by Joan Murray

Ryley Rebels Senior High boys' basketball team brought home yet another trophy to add to their impressive collection.

Brad Johnson, Wade Arbon, Lonnie Lauber, Chris Clarke, Darryl Holowachuk, Stewart Maaren, Reg Kozoway and Paul Wilde, each received a personal trophy plus a bronze medallion for their performance at the provincial championships held in Rosemary on March [illegible].

They were accompanied by their coach, Brian Lyons.

The Rebels earned their berth in the provincials by defeating Rosalind 40-28 in the Central East Alberta Zone competition on March 10th in Hay Lakes.

In the first round of provincial action, Ryley played well but were defeated by Boyle.

They then advanced to the semi-finals to meet the Acme Redmen in one of the most exciting games of the tournament. The Rebels fought back hard from an 11 point deficit and tied the game but, were finally beaten 43-42. With this loss they advanced to the Bronze Medal game against Vegreville's St. Martins Saints. They conquered the Saints 77-55 capturing the bronze medal for Ryley. The Coalhurst Trojans achieved the gold when they defeated the Acme Redmen who won the silver in the final game.

This victory has capped off one of the most successful basketball season in the history of Ryley High School.

It was their first trip to the provincials since 1976 when they won the consolation trophy.

Their impressive track record of 21 wins and only 4 losses in the 83-84 season will be commemorated by the following trophies: County of Beaver Championships (1st); Four-County League (1st); New Norway and Tofield Invitationals (2nd); Central East Alberta Zone (1st); and Provincial Championships (3rd).

Another feather in their cap was Chris Clarke, a grade 12 student, who won the trophy for scoring the highest total number of points in the Expanded League.

The Ryley Senior High girls [illegible] this season with a second in the Four-County League championships on February [illegible] to capture third place in the Central East [illegible] on March 3rd.

The team consists of Cheryl Andrusko, Colleen Boettger, Luella Lauber, Lynette Pyzik, Tammy Booth, Leanne Reil, Tracy Wickstrom, Tracy Strilchuk and Roseanne Hisey.

They were coached by Mrs. Loretta Convey-Lyons.

Crime Watch names officers

by Joan Murray

Beaverhill Rural Crime Watch elected officers for 1984 on March 22nd.

Members of the new executive are president, John Tiedemann; vice-president, Thom Shaw; secretary, Peter Brown; treasurer, Alberta Watt; and directors, Ray Peterson, Ons Strickus and Jerry Kushnerick.

John Warren, county councillor, gave a speech on the problem with dogs roaming about the county and asked what can be done about it. He said that county council has spent considerable time researching various solutions but no by-law has been passed at this time and there is not much sense to passing a by-law if there is no one to enforce it. They have seriously considered hiring a by-law enforcer on a part-time basis because Leduc and Wetaskiwin have been using this method with considerable success.

RCMP officer, Hugh McKenzie of the Tofield Detachment, said his office has been directing people to the county office, in regards to the dog problem, when complaints are received.

At present there are only two avenues one can take when dealing with this. One is to take the owner to civil court which could become a long and involved process. The other, he does not recommend, is the more drastic measure of shooting an offending animal. This, in his opinion, is most undesirable. The Detachment is in favour of having a dog by-law passed because it would give the police the authority to act immediately on any tips, annoyances or otherwise, which could prevent a more serious problem of an animal actually harming a child or anyone else.

Councilman Warner extended an invitation for Constable McKenzie to attend the next county council meeting to School affairs are debated

by Joan Murray

County Administrator, Garth Bancroft, opened the annual ratepayers' meeting of the County of Beaver in Ryley, March 30th, by calling for nominations for chairman. Lars Rude was elected and before he proceeded with the agenda he noted that the presence of protest placards outside the building could cause this meeting to become contentious. He assured the audience that each person who had something to say would have a chance to voice his opinion but, an orderly meeting is expected.

The superintendent's report was read noting that the enrollment for the County had dropped 53 students since September, 1983. He called for questions from the floor and the controversial subject of the proposal re: kindergarten to grade nine facility and one kingergarten to grade six with grades 10, 11 and 12 in either Holden or Ryley — was immediately brought to attention by Ryley School Supporter president, Bob Dueck. He asked, "With the Ryley-Holden merger, what will the extra 2.2 teachers be used for?"

Schoeman explained that they would be utilized when instating programs which were not previously available and would include an eight-period day. He was not looking at a savings in staff.

Questions regarding dropping enrollment were discussed. County of Beaver enrollment as of February 1984 is 1,825 students, a drop of 12 since January. The present county enrollment picture reads: (excluding kindergarten) C.W. Sears — (Sept.) — 194 to 195 (Feb.); Tofield School — 339 to 301; Ryley — 265 to 254; Holden — 271 to 265 and Viking — 332 to 308. This makes a total drop of 53 students in the county from January to February.

Private schools were of great concern to many present. Don Kondrat, supervisor of instruction, said that the Board of Education has expressed it's concerns.

Schoeman pointed out that some of their schools are

John Moore roasted

by Joan Murray

Local Tofield area resident, John Moore, was honored at a "Roast" by the Tofield Community Hall on Sunday afternoon.

He was previously honored provincially when he was inducted into both the 4-H and the Alberta Polled Hereford Association Halls of Fame.

This event allowed the community to express their thanks and appreciation for the many years of hard work and dedication he has given to the betterment of this community.

John Moore was a leader of the local 4-H Beef Club for 39 years. 4-H premiisest, Don Wood, led members and former members of this organization in reciting the 4-H pledge to him.

Mayor Charlie Sears congratulated him on behalf of the town and Ted Gilk, head of the 4-H for the Province of Alberta, showed slides accompanied by a audio tape depicting Mr. Moore's accomplishments over the years.

Many speakers from a variety of clubs and organizations he had taken part in, stepped up to the podium to "roast" him and all expressed some difficulty in finding something negative to say about him.

Two young 4-H'ers, Daniel Brown and Candace Ray, presented him with a photo album and gave a bouquet basket to his wife, Evelyn.

Liberty Meckie and Vern Peterson joined forces to sing his praises with a song written by Liberty's wife.

He was humourously roasted by his daughters, Judy and Margo, his brother Wayne and of course, his wife, Evelyn.

John closed the ceremony saying that this afternoon was the highlight of all his achievements and likened it to the popular T.V. program "Thrill of a Lifetime". He expressed his thanks to the community and to the roasters "for what they didn't say."

He attributed his success to being at the right places at the right time, to his father for giving him the opportunity to work with cattle at a very early age, to his supportive wife, and to his love of young people which has enabled him to come so far in the 4-H club. He paid special tribute to Peter and Yvonne Brown for suggesting and organizing this day.

Conference planned

. . . by Unifarm women

by Joan Murray

Women of Unifarm have been conducting a survey to determine how farm women are perceived in their communities.

Part of the survey is finished but, a further part will be a topic on the agenda at the annual spring conference on April 10th in the Tofield Legion Hall.

Mrs. Sigrid Hanson, first vice-president, will be leading the study at 10 a.m.

The special guest speaker will be Constable Boudreau of Sherwood Park. He will address the conference on "social issues in relation to the family".

He is a very active counsellor in the Sherwood Park School and community, and specializes in speaking about areas concerning drugs and drug abuse, on how best to prevent experimentation and how to detect and guide those who have become involved.

Maureen Bauman, District Home Economist from Ryley, another guest speaker, will show slides and speak on renovations and decorating the home

The group extends an invitation for everyone to attend.

Registration is at 9:30 a.m. and the fee includes lunch and coffee. You are welcome to bring any handicrafts of your own making which will be displayed on a special handicraft table for everyone to view.

Turner to beat

John Turner seems to be the man to beat in the race to the Liberal leadership crown. He must be, because he's being attacked so roundly from so many sides.

Jean Cretien has been flailing away at him, and even Brian Mulroney singled out Turner for attack. Maureen McTeer, too, wants to see Iona Campagnola run in opposition, but this is more a strident feminist utterance.

Mulroney, however, astonished us with his charge that Turner "let Western Canada go down the tube" during the eight years he was out of Parliament.

According to Mr. Mulroney, "Mr. Turner sat idly on the sidelines and said not a word when the Crow (freight rate bill) was going through, when the economy of Western Canada was being devastated by National Energy Policy; and when Serge Joyal was brutally and thoughtlessly implementing bilingual programs in a way to divide Western Canada."

Tough talk from Mr. Mulroney.

But oddly, we can't recall hearing loud protestations from Mr. Mulroney, either, when the NEP was introduced. Like Mr. Turner, he was not in the House; indeed, he seemed almost to disappear from sight during the interval between being defeated in the race for the Tory leadership (won by Joe Clark) and the time he turned up to defeat the same Joe Clark and win his job. Can anyone recall his staunch defence of the West at the time? Insofar as Serge Joyal brutally dividing the West with his language programs, does Mr. Mulroney not think he had a hand at the same sort of thing only a couple of weeks ago with his utterances on the Manitoba language program? His understanding of the situation may be correct, it may be wrong . . . but in no way was it thoughtless, no matter how divisive it turns out to be.

As far as the Crow legislation was concerned, is memory so short, or do we recall provincial governments in the West beseeching their Tory counterparts in Ottawa for more support than they were getting in asking for changes to the Crow proposals?

In the interest of integrity, for instance, why doesn't Mr. Mulroney point out that Turner was the only one of the candidates with sufficient individual fortitude, sufficient integrity, and sufficient brilliance to be a threat to Trudeau such that he (Trudeau) forced Turner's resignation?

We're not arguing for or against Mr. Turner. We don't want to see a Liberal government again, not for years, but we are keenly interested in seeing the best possible people that party can muster to send to Ottawa. Too often in the past that hasn't been the case.

Boondoggle

Until times got tough, it seemed, Canadians seemed to have become immune to almost every report of government funds invested in pork barrelling. It was accepted very largely across the width and breadth of the country, as part and parcel of the business of politics. Especially, it seems, it has been associated for more than half a century as a master part of the Liberal form of government.

That being the case, it should probably come as no surprise to learn of one of the latest types, that of refurbishing a former school in the province of Quebec.

Yet even by Liberal standards, it seems beyond belief to read the story of a school the government bought for five million dollars only five years ago, which they then turned into a training college for Customs officials, the only such school in the country.

Barely five years later, they are now spending twenty-five million dollars to refurbish it. Five times the purchase price! How many Mirabels do we have to pay for? How many Expo's? How many Montreal Olympics? How many . . .?

How many of these projects ever reach outside the province of Quebec? How many millions of dollars do other Canadians have to pay to ensure that Quebec will keep a Liberal government in Ottawa? Forever.

MOTHERS UNITE!

It is time to take a stand against children — and the way they grow out of their clothes so quickly!

I am tired of putting new socks on a kid and seeing his bare toes waving at me the next, boney-maroney wrists hanging out of month old sleeves and shoes that become open-toed sandals before the tread is worn. And it certainly isn't fair that a pair of cords purchased at 3 p.m. Thursday are classed as 'floods' by noon Monday.

If it's true that a child grows two feet and gains 70 pounds between the ages of 2 and 12, their clothes should grow at least as fast as their wearer. "Don't worry, you'll grow into it" is an alien expression heard only on television. We all know that children only grow out of their clothes.

How many other mothers wish they'd never given their children a 'pinch to grow an inch' every birthday? Give them an inch and they'll take a mile, it seems, walking right out of their new runners in the process. With no cooperation from the clothes or those who thread them together, perhaps it is up to us to grow smaller children, or stunt the growth of those we have. I've considered sending mine on coffee binges or binding their feet with electrical tape (it won't show the dirt like adhesive would). "Growing like a weed", indeed! If only they would, since weeds can be cropped.

Okay, so children have to grow sometime. If they won't put it off until after they've left home, how about body-painting clothes on the only covering that grows with them and doesn't get holes in the knees (gravel rashes not included) — their skin?

We need changes. Sturdier socks, throw-aways that cost a nickel a pair, or duller feet. Cast iron knees in jeans. Elastic shirts and jackets that expand from size 6 to 18, when hopefully they begin buying their own clothes. If they don't, we can snap them across the room like an elastic band.

Perhaps Ann Landers will have a solution. I've written her on the subject. Meanwhile, Mothers unite! Insist on a ban of all children's vitamins! We don't need that kind of help.

We are people first

by [illegible]

When an individual reaches the age of seventeen or eighteen a great deal of thought is given to the world of work. What should I do? Should I choose a career, select a college program, or enroll in university? Should I begin work immediately and have my own money? Many options may exist for a person and the decisions made have a tremendous effect on his/her [illegible].

In our society, a great deal of emphasis is placed on work. Work takes up at least 40 hours of our week and [illegible] thought and explaining our work roles to others. Many people seek and find their identity through work. A homemaker, social worker, janitor, doctor, dietician, or waitress, if asked what they do, will typically respond by giving a description of their work roles. People see themselves making a contribution to society through their work. Work motivates people, provides an outlet to socialize, and also provides a paycheque.

What happens to mentally handicapped members of our society? When they complete their education, unfortunately vast options do not exist. In a competitive society and a competitive work force, to gain entry into the job market is not an easy task. In our community, many young handicapped persons remain at home or become involved as long term trainees at vocational training centres. The intent of vocational training centres is to provide training in basic work skills and work habits, the intent is not to provide employment or long term [illegible].

It is time to look at new options for the mentally handicapped in our community. Certainly, the economic situation and the lack of employment opportunities presents an obstacle at the present time. However, strategies such as apprenticeship, work placements to train and expose the individual to a number of different work settings, and sheltered employment opportunities can provide mentally handicapped individuals with a greater appreciation of the work place. Since people meet many of their needs through work and develop a sense of self-worth, it is important that handicapped individuals also have an opportunity to work and develop their potential.

discuss with them how the RCMP would support a dog by-law, if one was enacted. The invitation was accepted.

Constable McKenzie spoke to the members about what good the Rural Crime Watch is doing in this area and said that it is impossible to compile statistics to back up the fact that major vandalism and theft has been on the downswing since it was incorporated.

Before this group was formed, people were not always aware of their rights and had a lack of confidence in reporting incidents. Now they are more readily apt to phone in to make a complaint.

The objectives of Rural Crime Watch are to foster better relations between police and the public, to act as a crime deterrent, and to improve policing capabilities by making police more aware. The RCMP will be making a better effort in future to be at meetings and hope to foster better relations between the two organizations.

Possible improvements for the new year were discussed.

In order to better compile information on how this organization is affecting the crime rate in this area, it was suggested that drop-boxes be placed outside on the RCMP office door, as well as one at the local grain elevators, if the grain operators have no objection. Because this would be more convenient, it is hoped that more cards will be turned in for evaluation.

Constable McKenzie mentioned the possibility of a C.B. radio communications system being set up with a portable unit in a police car or perhaps even a base station in the local detachment office.

A lot of farmers and rural people have radios in their tractor cabs and other vehicles. If any suspicious actions were observed, this fact could be brought immediately to the attention of local law enforcement and could be acted on at once.

He invited members of the group to take part in a "ride-along" program whereby a civilian is allowed to accompany an officer in the police vehicle during a shift to see first hand what an officer has to deal with on a daily basis.

Another program is a tour of the police station every third Sunday. To take part in either of these activities, it is recommended that one call ahead to make arrangements.

School affairs . . .

authorized and some are not. The board does not make any expenditures to them, although there is an agreement to bus children to authorized schools only. No contributions of any kind are made to unauthorized schools.

John Warner pointed out that increased programming would make the public schools more desirable. The private schools, without government funding, are unlikely to be able to compete at a comparable level of quality instruction.

A concerned parent in the crowd was afraid that they wouldn't warrant a school in Ryley if this proposal were put into effect.

Mr. Warner said, "Both will be kept alive by the increase and improvement of programs for every student in the county." Schoeman added that the area has been reasonable and results indicated that most parents would not send their children elsewhere, but that a further personal survey would be undertaken.

Councillor Don Ronaghan was asked what happened in Bruce when their school closed and how did he feel about this move to change the Ryley and Holden Schools.

He replied, "Bruce school closed, the building sold for a dollar and the community has suffered. Every town should have a school and try to improve education to keep schools open. The proposal is the best way to achieved this — it improves education and keeps a school in both areas. Students will have a better education. If we do nothing, people will eventually go elsewhere."

Many of the same problems and solutions that were discussed at previous public meetings were re-hashed and basically came to the same conclusions as before. Janet Winsnes representing the Ryley School Supporters group, asked that on behalf of the people of Ryley she be allowed to make a motion.

"Because we see no advantage to operating the Ryley and Holden Junior High Schools together and because there are definite advantages to the amalgamation of Ryley and Holden senior high schools and because Ryley currently has sufficient room to house both Ryley and Holden high schools and because

The five-day event, from April 2 to 6, has attracted approximately 700 entries to participate in the various Festival events.

Festival participants will be adjudicated during day and night performances throughout the week with the final grand concert taking place on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Camrose Lutheran College Convocation Centre.

The public will be able to see, at no charge, a good variety of voice, piano, dance, drama and community music entries at this year's Festival.

Events will be held throughout the week at Chester Ronning and Charlie Killam Schools, as well as in the Gardner Bible College music hall, the Camrose Composite High School, the Performing Arts Centre and Grace [redacted].

Festival event programs are available at Don's Stereo, Sound Spectacular, Wilson Electric and Platinum Sound. Programs can also be obtained at the door of every event.

Festival trophies, scholarships and medals will be awarded at Saturday's grand concert, when many of the Festival's award winners and outstanding participants will perform.

The Lions Club of Camrose will also present the Rose Bowl to the soloist or group which, in the opinion of the adjudicators, gives the best performance of the Festival, at the final concert.

DES group forms

DES (diethylstilbestrol) Action has been organized in Alberta.

DES was once termed as a wonder drug and was used for about thirty years by pregnant women to prevent miscarriages.

The synthetic female hormone went on the market in 1941 in pill, injection and suppository form and was taken by millions of women before it was removed in 1971.

The so-called wonder drug has caused many problems for the sons and daughters who were born to women using the miracle medicine.

Risks on contracting cancer increased greatly, fertility problems developed and physical abnormalities increased.

DES mothers are a higher risk for breast cancer while their daughters may experience pregnancy difficulties and develop abnormal cells in the vagina while sons develop benign cysts and a variety of other problems.

An Alberta Chapter of DES Action/Canada has been organized with its address being 7216-33 Avenue, Edmonton, T6K 1K3.

Ratepayers attend annual meeting

by Jean Murray

The annual ratepayers meeting for the County of Beaver attracted over one hundred interested taxpayers.

The annual session was held on Friday in the Ryley Legion hall with elected officials and top administrative staff in attendance to give reports and respond to questions.

A wide range of topics were discussed and numerous questions from the floor were answered.

On going over the financial statement for the municipal section of the county, it was observed that an increase in revenue from taxes was mainly due to an increase in the mill rate.

The possibility of having a county business licence program set up was brought up by a town resident who felt it would be more fair to the town businessmen.

The subject of the regional sanitary landfill came up and it was revealed that 40% of the costs will be paid by the county and 50% by the towns.

Annual costs are estimated at $90,000 for towns and $85,000 for the county. It works out to approximately two dollars per month per person in town and about $1.25 for rural residents.

The method of collection for this project is a pit system with transfer stations to be located in Tofield, Holden, Bruce, Viking and Kinsella areas. Garbage will have to be hauled to the transfer stations where it will then be loaded and taken to the regional landfill site at Ryley, dumped and then buried.

The ambulance service in the County of Beaver was questioned as to it's efficiency when it was brought to light that an area resident had been taken first to Viking Hospital and then to Edmonton before she was finally taken to Daysland where her doctor practiced. The speaker said he felt that the ambulance attendants and the nurse had been less than polite when the patient had originally requested to be taken to Daysland. He had previously brought this matter to the attention of council and council had in turn made the previous Beaver Ambulance representative aware of this situation. He had, as yet, not heard anything back to indicate what proper procedure should have been.

Gordon Maxwell, who is not the Beaver Ambulance representative, assured him that this would definitely be looked into and that it is the policy of the Beaver Ambulance Society to take a patient to the destination of his/her choice, within reason.

Weed control was the main topic of discussion in the Agricultural Fieldman's report. County Administrator, Garth Bancroft, said "There are 2200 miles of road in this county and it is just about impossible to control weed and brush on a year-to-year basis." Council is considering implementation of a by-law which would make the landowner responsible for weed control on road allowances adjacent to his property.

A gentleman from the audience voiced his opinion as "We have the best implements and variety of sprays available and have the worst weed mess we have ever known. What are you doing to correct this?"

Fieldman, Laurie Weatherill attributed this problem to heavy rainfall last year which hampered the spraying of weed killers.

Farmers who show obvious signs of not controlling weeds can be made to spray or the county will take care of it and charge expenses to him only if certain noxious weeds are present. To help identify and control this situation better this year, there will now be two inspectors.

The growing beaver problem was of great concern to the people of the county. Some did not feel they should have to pay a fee to get the beaver dams blown up but, that the "beaver breeders" be taxed to cover this. Mr Warner explained that this fee was charged to partially recover the cost of the beaver trapper. While 60% of his costs are covered by the government, the other 40% has to come from taxes.

The county has tried to put pressure on the Department of Energy and Natural Resources to control beaver population in troublesome areas. They hope to get Alberta Health involved in regards to the bacterial content level in the waters.

Hospital and senior citizen homes reports were read and discussed. Tofield Hospital (the old unit) is running at capacity with 103% occupancy. The new hospital's construction is well underway and it is expected that the basement and sub-floor will be complete by the first week in May. Viking's new hospital is running with a surplus budget.

Tofield and Viking Lodges are fairly full and have a small surplus in their budgets. There are construction and financial problems with the facility in Holden. It has a 44-bed capacity and is only one-half full. The rent was raised for all lodges by $50 as of April 1st. Mr Warner said, "This should help but, unless a facility has close to forty residents it cannot come close to paying its own way."

A call for business from the floor prompted a Ryley resident to question the council on what was being done to bring industry into this county.

Council said they would like to see industrial development in this area. A gentleman from the back of the room said he had been talking with other businessmen in the town and since the hazardous waste plant had been re-located in another area, they felt council had not lived up to its responsibilities to the town. Their feelings were that the council was involved with the Village of Ryley application to get the plant into their town and that council had given them no support in this matter.

Mr. Warner attempted to clarify this misunderstanding by explaining that when the county plebiscite was held the council had no choice but to abide by the decision that was made. A motion was passed at a council meeting to no longer consider the waste plant. They took no position — either for or against — regarding this subject after the plebiscite was held.

Canvass starts

April is here again and its time to canvas for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Last year, donations were down in the Tofield area.

While the economy may have had something to do with this, a lack of canvassers for the rural areas played a large part.

If you would be willing to canvas in your area (either in town or in rural areas) please contact Elaine Porisky at 662-3015.

If a canvasser does not call at your house by the end of April, donations may be mailed to Box 477, Tofield.

Memorial donations may be made at the Bank of Montreal to either Cheryl Good or Lorna [illegible].

Subsidy Ends

Good financial planning means taking charge of your money management. If you are currently receiving a sizeable monthly cheque from the Alberta Heritage Fund Mortgage Interest Reduction Program, remember benefits end in August, 1984. So it makes good sense to begin planning now.

If you haven't considered the renegotiation option, it may be worth looking into... especially if you are carrying a mortgage at a rate considerably higher than 12½%. This option reimburses homeowners for all or part of the costs of renegotiating their mortgages to a lower interest rate.

If you have not applied, benefits are retroactive to September 1, 1982 and applications will be accepted up to August 31, 1984.

Applications are available at all financial institutions or may be obtained by contacting the office of the Alberta Heritage Fund Mortgage Interest Reduction Program at 1-800-642-3822.

Baby Walkers Unsafe

The Canadian Pediatrics Society has been warning parents that baby walkers are unsafe. Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada has recognized several design faults with the walkers, citing too many sharp edges and instability as two of their major flaws. Pediatricians want manufacturers to build a more solid, stable model and to modify the wheels.

Parents whose infants use the walkers should install a door or gate for every set of stairs in the home. Children should never be left alone in a walker, not even for a few seconds.

Medically Speaking

by Dr. Bob Young

Recently, there has been considerable controversy in the media about the provincial Government's building a number of 10-bed hospitals in small, rural Alberta towns. The 3,000-member Alberta Medical Association has added its voice to those opposed to such facilities.

Small hospitals in rural Alberta — which "cannot provide the standard of care to which Albertans are entitled" — should be replaced by larger regional facilities, the A.M.A. said in a brief presented to the Task Force on the Allocation of Health Care Resources.

The A.M.A. also urged the Provincial Government to introduce a provincially-coordinated ground ambulance system as part of regionalizing health care.

"The A.M.A. has long supported regionalization of health services in the province because it makes sense, both in terms of effective use of resources and the quality of health care provided," the Association stated in its brief.

The Alberta Government has recently built six rural "hospitals", five with 10 beds, the other with 15 beds. But "it is unreasonable" to call these facilities hospitals.

"They can provide basic laboratory and X-ray services and deal with some emergency cases, but they cannot provide the standard of service which the public has the right to expect from a hospital."

Terming small rural hospitals "an inappropriate allocation of health care funds," the A.M.A. said:

"Regionalization should occur. Some hospitals should be closed and others could be converted to extended care units. This latter action would address some of the concerns regarding the preservation of small communities and would allow persons requiring long term extended care to be institutionalized closer to home."

The A.M.A., which has been pressing various provincial governments for 20 years to initiate improvements in ground ambulance services, reiterated its position to the Task Force.

Noting that the standard for ambulance operators "is still the St. John Ambulance short first-aid course," the A.M.A. called for "at least basic standards for vehicles, equipment and personnel."

The A.M.A said that hospital regionalization and improved ambulance services could result in a substantial saving. "Earlier and better care in the emergency situation could save lives and reduce costs. Easier movement of patients to secondary and tertiary centres for care of more complicated illness/injury could result in a better overall standard of care in the province."

The A.M.A. also remarked on the difficulty which it is having in persuading the Provincial Government to commit $1.4 million to attract physicians to practise in more remote areas.

"Despite the fact that the Government has the same interest that we have and the monies are essentially 'ours' (from a 1982 allocation), we have had difficulty reaching agreement with Government representatives" even though the A.M.A.'s incentive plan is modelled on one already used in British Columbia.

Medically Speaking is published with the cooperation of this newspaper and the Alberta Medical Association.

RDP holds meeting

by Joan Stacey

At the annual meeting of Rural Development Project on March 20th, chairman, Victor Kowalchuk, of Willingdon, appealed to the organization for help in acquiring a doctor for his town.

They have been without one for some time and have had no results from an advertisement which had been run for a month already.

Mr Kowalchuk said that the possibility of importing medical personnel from a foreign country was a consideration but, as there are already too many doctors in Alberta, the medical society puts "stumbling blocks" in front of them.

It was decided that in addition to contacting other projects for their input regarding this situation, they would also look further into the requirements for an M.D. to practice in this country.

The chairman asked if there were any businesses that a community within the development was in need of at this time. Doug McLennan of Myrnam revealed their lack of a certified pharmacist, although they did have the buildings available.

Project co-ordinator, Mel Warren of Holden, gave his year-end report. The Battle River Trail brochure is ready for publication. Historic sites and campgrounds will be clearly marked along the [illegible].

They hope to form a Cavalcade of tourists to travel the route this fall. Westernization of the towns involved is a definite possibility for a more commercially positive approach. It would follow the Battle River for about 100 miles and include the area where the northwest rebellion of 1885 [illegible] place. An outline will be prepared for the next meeting.

A medical person, either from the Pharmaceutical Association or the College of Physicians and Surgeons will be invited to speak at the next meeting that will be held in Ryley on April 20th.

Pensions increase

Increases in the Old Age Security pension, Guaranteed Income Supplement and Spouse's Allowance take effect this month (April), Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin has announced.

The normal indexing formula (providing a full cost-of-living increase) is being applied to the Old Age Security cheques for April, May and June.

The five per cent annual limit will not have to be applied to the Old Age Security cheques for the second quarter of 1984 because the rate of inflation has been falling in recent months.

As a result, effective April, 1984, the basic Old Age Security pension will be increased to $266.28 monthly from the present $263.78.

The maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement for an individual or a married person whose spouse is receiving neither a pension nor a Spouse's Allowance, will be increased to $267.33 from its current $265.00. Added to the basic pension, this will give a person receiving both OAS and the maximum GIS a monthly total of $533.61.

The maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement for a married couple, both of whom are pensioners, will increase to $206.11 each from $204.86. Added to the basic pension this will give each married pensioner receiving the maximum GIS a total of $472.39 or $944.78 for the couple.

The Guaranteed Income Supplement is paid to pensioners whose income, apart from the Old Age Security pension, is limited and the amount varies in relation to [illegible].

The maximum Spouse's Allowance will increase to $472.39 from $468.64. It is made up of an amount equivalent to the basic Old Age Security pension and the maximum GIS at the married rate. It is paid to persons between 60 and 65 years of age who are married to OAS pensioners and meet residence requirements. Entitlement to a Spouse's Allowance, and the amount paid, is based on yearly income.

Where the pensioner spouse dies, the surviving spouse may be eligible for the continuation of the allowance to age 65 or until remarriage if the person has no income or a limited income.

Budget Freeze Hurts Education

The 1984/85 budget, brought down this week, freezes the basic operating grants to school boards at the 1983 level. As a result of this freeze, education in Alberta will suffer.

In taking this stand, the government has not given education the priority that it requires. Using 1983 dollars in a 1984 budget can only mean cutbacks for schools. The same level of services cannot be provided because of increased costs. Many extra-curricular programs within the school system will probably have to be cut. Class sizes may be increased due to staff reductions.

Because of this freeze, many school boards will have to look at other means of funding. They may have no option but to seek increased property taxes, levy user fees and cut back programming.

Education is an investment in the future of Alberta. By freezing funding, the quality of basic education will indeed suffer and our most valuable heritage, our children, will be the losers.

Your comments on this or any other matter of concern would be most welcome. Please contact my office at the Legislature by phoning collect to 427-2231, or by writing to Room 314, Legislative Building, Edmonton, T5K 2B6.

Health Unit Review

An Infant Restraint Seat Loaner Program has been started in Camrose. It is being provided for through the Alberta East Central Health Unit.

Statistics show that as many as three-quarters of the children age five and under are usually not placed in an infant or child seats when riding in a vehicle. As a result, thousands of children have been seriously injured and disabled or even killed. Car seats have been shown to be 85% effective in preventing death and 65% effective in preventing injuries. At home, parents protect their children from poisonous substances and hot irons or pots. They make sure their children have immunizations and proper medical attention. However, on the road many parents take unnecessary chances. Car collisions are the leading cause of death among children.

Most collisions involving children occur close to home and at low speeds. It's the second collision, when an unrestrained body hits the interior, that is devastating. At 30 km/h a child's second collision has the same impact as a fall from a two storey building. It is futile to try and hold your child, as at 50 km/h, an 11 lb. infant flies through the air with a weight equivalent to 308 lbs.

Children's heads are larger in proportion to their bodies and have softer bone tissue. Their chances of serious or fatal head injuries in a collision are higher than an adults. Therefore conventional seat belt restraint should not be the first choice with a child under 30 lbs.

Car seats not only protect the child in collisions, but also in sudden stops and swerves. They prevent children from falling out windows. Also accidents are often caused by children distracting the driver. These distractions are minimized when children are in restraint seats.

The Alberta East Central Health Unit has purchased 50 infant restraint seats to be distributed throughout the Health Unit based on number of births for the area. These fit a child up to approximately 20 lbs. (6-9 months of age). Many parents do not wish to purchase these seats since they are only needed for a short period of time. Therefore a "loaner" program is an ideal alternative. The cost of an infant seat to rent for 6-9 months is $40.00 with a $15.00 refund when returned in satisfactory condition. This is considerably less expensive than purchasing a seat.

The seats can be rented at Alberta East Central Health Unit in our Camrose office with cheques payable to Alberta East Central Health Unit. Health Unit staff will demonstrate proper use of the seat and a rental agreement will have to be signed. Also, information will be given as to what types of seats are available for your child when he is between 20 and 40 lbs. For further information call [illegible].

BETWEEN THE COVERS

This is the last week for the current sessions of Preschool Story Hour and Booktime for K-3. Both these programs are planned to run for a second 6-week session beginning May 1. Preregistrations will be taken at the library for both programs (662-3838).

On the new book table this week, there are two novels by Winston Graham, "After The Act" and "The Tumbled House", both superb works of characterization and plot. Also look for "Secret Lovers" by Charles McCarry, a cold-war thriller.

We now have the newly-published "New Oxford Book of Canadian Verse in English", selected and introduced by Margaret Atwood. This is a rich anthology of Canadian poetry from the seventeenth century to the present.

Two useful books are Dr. David Imrie's "Goodbye Backache" and David J. Schwartz's "The Magic of Getting What You Want." The latter gives many tips and insights into improving one's life through better use of time, influencing others to help and so on.

Eric Nicol's recent 'patriotic satire' "Canadide" has been added to the library humour collection, a witty look at Canada's last twenty years.

The author of "Living, Loving and Learning," Dr. Leo Buscaglia has also written "Personhood the art of being fully human" and "Love", all of whom are now available in the library.

Finally, a number of new paperbacks of all sorts, as well as various new children's picture books have been put on the display tables.

Remember to reserve the afternoon of May 4 for the author visit by Mrs. Peggy Holmes, author of "It Could Have Been Worse".

Regular library hours are Tuesday 1-6, Thursday 3-6 and 6-9, Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-4.

FRIENDSHIP EVANGELISM

A SEMINAR ABOUT THE NATURAL WAY TO SHARE YOUR FAITH.

Art McPhee, author, radio commentator, seminary instructor, and former pastor, invites you to consider three sessions of insights into Jesus' pattern of evangelism.

Learn why
- your deepest relationship is your greatest witness
- authentic evangelism is never manipulative
- most believers are won to Christ through the influence of a friend or relative

Evangelism is not a technique but a spontaneous expression of love says McPhee. People don't care how much you know until they know how much you care.

Members of the Ladies' Club held their annual dinner out last Friday, and spent a delightful evening sampling all the various dishes of an excellent Chinese meal. Their next meeting will be at Jan Addison's on April 12th at 1 p.m. when there will be a speaker on microwave cookery.

The very active parents' group of the Playschool received some encouragement when they conferred last week with Strathcona County over the design and construction of a family playground outside at the hall. Since then the members have been promoting fund-raising ideas and the first event which will take place is a pancake brunch on Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Hall, where for a moderate price, reduced for children and families, you can have all you can eat, and, for a little extra, a pony ride as well.

Then on April 12th, there will be a recipe-tasting party at the hall, admission for which will be $3 plus a dish of your choice, accompanied by the recipe. From 6:30 p.m. to 8 30 p.m., you will be able to taste the dishes assembled, and afterwards the Playschool committee will arrange for the recipes to be collected, and a copy of the collection will be available for each participant, at no extra charge.

THAILAND

by Beth Vinge

As you know, Prime Minister of Thailand, Prem Tinsulanonda, will be in Canada from April 8-12.

Thailand lies east of India and is bordered by Burma, Laos and Kampuchea; its island tail extends into the Indian Ocean and is shared by Malaysia. One of the Indonesian islands lies off the west coast of Thailand and Malaysia.

49 million, 500 thousand Thais live and share 514 thousand square kilometres making a population density of 96 persons per kilometer. (Compare this to Canada with 4 persons per square kilometer.)

Canada has contributed to Thailand's development for the past 20 years, with assistance initially emphasizing education and manpower training. In 1981 approximately $100 million were approved by the Canadian Government for project assistance over a five-year period. The program focuses on i) rural development in poverty areas of Northeast Thailand, ii) human resource and institutional development, and iii) modern or industrial sector activities directed towards natural resource management, high technology and energy.

Northeast Thailand has the most difficult development problem in the country: the climate is arid, population growth is high, malnutrition widespread and health services are poor. Of the 14 million people living below the poverty line in Thailand, more than half live in this part of the country. The standard of living of these villagers is being raised by the introduction of income-generating activities such as agriculture, animal husbandry and home industries.

A Family Planning Project is being carried out with the assistance of the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank, USAID and Norway and the Canadian government through CIDA. $70 million have been contributed to improve health and family planning.

Funds have been contributed for technical assistance training and geological surveys. With the technological skills gained from the Canadian component of the project, the Thai government will be in a position to disseminate data requested for private development of the sector and enact the required legislation frame-work for private sector involvement.

Together with the Philippines, Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia, Thailand is a member of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which deals collectively with common economic and trade concerns. In a joint project with ASEAN, Canada is contributing to a tree seed centre which was opened January, 1983 and is providing advisors, training and equipment to the project. Recent studies indicate that world prices of tropical hardwoods will increase by about 500 per cent within 15 years because of dwindling supplies. Much of Thailand's forest land (which covers approximately half the country) has been destroyed by shifting cultivation, fire and illegal cutting. The tree seed centre will help establish reforestation of valuable tropical hardwoods such as teak and mahogany, before forest reserves become irretrievably depleted.

At present, it is estimated that 20 per cent of fish caught in ASEAN member countries is wasted due to a lack of proper handling. Post-harvest fish technology is being applied to reduce and therefore make available a greater supply of protein in the diet of the local population.

Canada supports many multilateral organizations working in Thailand. Among them are The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), The United Nations Development Program (UNDP), The United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA). Also International Humanitarian Assistance (IHA). These are just a few of the organizations working to improve the life of the Thai people. Together these and other groups provide basic health care, primary education, technical assistance in agriculture, education, industry and development planning.

Emergency relief for refugees along the Thai-Kampuchean border has been provided since 1979. Approximately 50,000 refugees are living in camps operated by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and an additional 200,000 refugees are living along the border. These numbers represent a considerable reduction from the 800,000 refugees living in the same area in 1979. In the period 1979-83, Canada contributed almost $37 million toward relief efforts.

As Canadians we have much to be thankful for, a relatively peaceful nation in which to reside, adequate food and shelter for most of us, and the opportunity to help those less fortunate.

When you see Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda on the news you can be justifiably happy that part of your tax dollar has found its way to the Kingdom of Thailand.

The Builders Supplies 4th event was a match between [illegible] Larry Blatz of Daysland. Blezard won 10-3 in 7 ends. [illegible] squad are Gerald Turnquist, Wayne Harlton and Larry [illegible].

At the general meeting held last month at the curling rink a new president was elected along with six new members of the executive for two years. Archie Grauman is the new president succeeding past president Dave Ragosin. Newly elected members of the executive are Edie Depas, Neil Johnston, Gordon McMurray, Gordon Salyn, Al Rostad and Keith Badry. Members of the executive with one year remaining on their term are Dave Domes, Ray Black, Ray Adamson, Roger Grettum, Reg Enright and Jim Leach. A joint meeting of the new and old executive will meet April 9 to chart a course for the upcoming season.

Street program resumes for towns and villages

Transportation Minister Marvin Moore has announced the initiation of a new five year $50,000,000 Streets Assistance Program for towns [illegible].

The value of the previous five year program was [illegible].

"This new program which commences April 1, 1984 will see $7,500,000 provided in the 1984/85 fiscal year for towns, villages and summer villages for approved projects. Improvements qualifying under the Streets Assistance Program include grading, gravelling, base course and paving, concrete sidewalks, curbs and gutters, storm sewers, bridges, traffic control devices and street lighting. For each of the next three years, $10 million will be [illegible] the fifth and final year to enable all towns and villages to plan and undertake priority projects.

1. Funding eligibility is as follows:

a) Towns, villages and summer villages with populations of 100 or more will receive a base grant of $45,000 and a per capita grant of $[illegible].

b) Summer villages with populations less than 100 will receive a base grant of $15,000 plus $[illegible] per capita.

2. Alberta Transportation will fund 75 percent of the construction costs and 50 percent of the engineering costs of approved projects. The municipalities will be responsible for 25 percent of the construction and 50 percent of the engineering costs.

In keeping with our government's commitment to provide the private sector with improved opportunities for work, all construction must be carried out by private sector construction firms and equipment.

"The five year Streets Assistance Program will prove very beneficial to urban municipalities, enabling priority street improvements to be undertaken. The program will also provide work opportunities for engineering consultants, small local contractors, and the general contracting industry. Street improvements derived from the program will provide lasting benefits to participating communities and enhance the quality of life in Alberta's towns and villages."

The winners in the junior division were first, Deanna Brown and second went to Shannon Rurka.

The senior division winners were first, Rami Hastings and second, Bernadette Zintel

The first place winners continued on in the county competition on March 18 and the junior winners there were first, Judy Magneson, second, Leann Lefsrud while the senior winners were first, Rami Hastings and second, Cathy Brown.

The first place winners in both categories went on to the regional competition on March 25. There, Rami Hastings placed third in the senior division.

We are nearing completion of our second projects which are macrame and ceramics and will be starting crochet soon.

If anyone is interested in joining, our craft meetings are held the first and third Wednesday of the month at 7 p.m. in the Craft Room at the Arena. Our business meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of the month at the same place. Anyone is welcome to come.

Custom Rates

We always get a lot of questions at the office on custom rates. Because of the interest in this area, I've decided to summarize some of the rates from a couple of the books we have in the office. Remember that these rates are based across the whole province and only represent a guideline. Your individual case may require more fine tuning to suit your specific situation. We have worksheets which can assist you with your calculations.

The following rates were the most commonly reported ones for 1983 and should be only used as a guide for 1984 charges. Many of the charges are listed as a range, the lower figure representing the "good neighbour" rate while the higher figure represents the full custom rate charge.

Spilstead district news items

by M. Parker

This past weekend, the Spilstead Cubs and Scouts were joined by the Tofield Cubs and Scouts for their winter campout at the Cuny Park Club.

A number of their activities had to be altered or cancelled altogether due to the spring weather arriving. Some of their activities were handicrafts, an obstacle course, compass work, and camp fires. The weekend concluded with a pot-luck lunch on Sunday for all the families and afterwards tired boys and leaders headed home. From all reports, a great weekend was had by all who attended.

A new member of the community arrived at 5 a.m. on April 1 weighing in at 9 lbs. 5 oz. The proud parents of James Edward are Sue and Bill Larose.

Charlie and Louise Berube (former Spilstead news reporter) and their sons, Wayne and Calvin, have spent the past week visiting with her mother and father, the Perkes of Tofield, and also many friends and neighbours in the area.

The regular monthly church service at the Spilstead Hall has been changed, for this month only, to the second Sunday of the month, April 8 at 2 p.m. The service is followed by a pot-luck supper for anyone who wishes to attend.

The final arrangements for the western round-up dance on April 7 are well on their way. Also, just a little reminder that the yearly memberships to the Spilstead Community League are once more due, so please drop around to Eds Store and get your new cards. Your family membership entitles you to lower admission fees to Community League social functions and children's sports activities.

Don't forget to reserve Thursday evening, April 12, to attend the final bingo for the season at Spilstead Hall. The attendance at this bingo will decide whether or not bingo's will be held again next year.

The Tofield and Spilstead Scouts and Cubs had a joint weekend camp at Hastings Lake on March 30-31 and April 1.

A good time was had by all 29 boys and seven leaders.

Participants had a number of outdoor activities as well as a campfire both Friday and Saturday.

On Sunday there was a church parade and the mothers provided a lunch for all.

The leaders were Dan Kondrat, Laurie Weatherill, Kay Procter, Chuck McBurney, Reg Fairbrother and Larry Winder.

Strong Resistance Against Tooth Decay

In the past few years dental researchers have developed new techniques to make teeth more resistant to decay than ever before Children in particular are benefiting

If you haven't taken a child to the dentist for a while, you might be surprised to see the doctor painting teeth with a fluoride solution or gel and applying a plastic sealant to the biting surfaces Both procedures are pain-free and, according to extensive studies, fight tooth decay

Studies have shown certain fluoride liquids and gels applied to the teeth can bring about as much as a 40 per cent reduction of dental decay A 65 per cent reduction in caries is possible with water fluoridation

Dentists recommend [illegible] about age three to protect children's primary teeth and to be continued for benefit of erupting permanent teeth as well

Fluoride applications make tooth enamel more resistant to decay Sealants, on the other hand, seal tiny cracks and pits on the bitings surfaces of teeth so food and bacteria cannot collect there

Dentists often find people are not aware of pit and fissures which exist on the surface of teeth

As teeth develop, enamel usually forms smoothly on the surfaces of front teeth. The teeth in the back of the mouth, however, have irregularities on their chewing or "occlusal" surfaces. These irregularities and tiny indentations and grooves are called pits and fissures They are actually defects in the teeth and are common to most teeth.

Since the bristles of a toothbrush cannot effectively clean these minute depressions, dental decay often occurs, particularly in children and adolescents

A sealant acts as a coating to the grinding surfaces to seal off the pits and fissures.

Sealant is sold only to dentists. It is a liquid brushed on the teeth. In one procedure, the sealant hardens to a transparent coating under ultra-violet light. A small hand-held ultra-violet lamp is focused on the teeth for less than a minute. The material is not used on the sides of teeth.

Pit and fissure sealants only coat the biting surfaces of teeth and have no value for other areas that are particularly susceptible to decay — for instance, the surface between teeth and gumline.

Pit and fissure sealants and fluorides applied by the dentist are not an alternative to regular oral hygiene. They assist other proven preventative practices which include brushing with an accepted toothpaste, daily use of dental floss, fluoridation of drinking water and regular professional care

Players compete

Tofield's Tom Thumb and Mighty Mite hockey clubs concluded the 1983-84 hockey season this past weekend.

The Badgers and Wolverines, seven and eight year olds, were the first two Tofield Mighty Mite entries to participate in A final games.

The Badgers, coached by Frances Van Engelen and assistant Darrell Lindberg advanced to the A final of the New Sarepta tournament by defeating Ardrossan Astros 5-0 and Fultonvale Thunderbirds 3-2. In a hard fought game marked by excellent goal-tending, New Sarepta won 2-0 to capture the tournament.

The Wolverines, coached by Rick Nelis with assistant Dave Jones travelled to Beaumont where they shut out the Fultonvale Oilers 11-0 in the A final.

The team advanced to the championship by winning earlier games over Sherwood Park Tire (9-0) and Beaumont White (8-2).

Also in Beaumont were the Tom Thumbs with coach Trevor Kristinson and assistant Charlie Ray. In their first game, the tiny competitors lost 6-3 to New Sarepta. They bounced back to a 6-4 triumph over Beaumont Red.

In the B final they were defeated 7-0 by the Sherwood Park Saints.

It has been a fun-filled, successful year for these three young teams and their parents.

Gardeners meet

The Tofield Garden Club held their February meeting in the Anglican Church meeting room.

After the usual business, memberships were paid, some of the fertilizer was sold and the Provincial show was discussed.

The annual Alberta Horticultural Association meeting is to be in Camrose on April 7th and 8th.

Members planned the horticultural classes for this year's fair.

Due to last year's poor growing season, not too many changes were made.

The next meeting will be at Doris Brown's home on April 4th.

IN MEMORIAM

FALEBRENZA In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Janel Lynn who left us suddenly April 7, 77.
Your memory is like the heart of a rose.
The older it gets the sweeter it grows.
Deep in our hearts is the love of the past.
For there it was planted forever to last.
Parting comes and hearts are broken,
Loved ones go with words unspoken.
Death leaves a heartache no one can heal.
Memories are treasures no one can steal.
Life goes on, we know that's true.
But it's not the same since we lost you.
You lived your life for those you loved.
And those you loved remember. We miss you dear Janel!
A lovingly missed dad, mom, Susan and Denis.

Class plans monster truck

by [illegible]

The pre-vocational class of Ryley School, under the supervision of their teacher, Randy Ness, have undertaken the challenging task of constructing a "monster truck" which they hope to finish in time for an entry in the July 1st parade.

After this they plan to sell it for about one thousand dollars.

Mr. Ness said it was most ideal as a hunting or fishing vehicle and will go [illegible] anywhere in the bush that one might want to venture.

This is one of many "hands-on" activities they take part in throughout the school year. Mr. Ness encourages their participation in order for them to apply the basics of mathematics, science, art and reading to practical ventures. These students do not do very well under the regular academic classroom structure. With this program they are able to learn by seeing how the principles are applied to everyday procedures.

Some of his pupils have a natural affinity for mechanics and one of the girls has shown an unusual flair for drawing. He said that every one of them has something they can do well. It is just a matter of evaluating each one in practical situations where their special talents can be recognized.

They all work on the planning, designing, costing and pricing of their projects, as well as doing welding, mechanical work, flame cutting and painting. This class is able to apply basic science principles through the engineering side of these projects. When one of their planned undertakings has been completed they get together with Mr. Ness and discuss cost of materials and other expenses incurred before making a joint decision on the final selling price.

One of their finished projects is a bright cherry red flat-bed trailer with adjustable loading ramps. It can be used for hauling garden tractors, motorcycles, skidoos, ATV's and other small machinery. It was originally designed and built for a businessman who is no longer operating, and now they have to sell it. The entire cost of the project so far is about $500 and they would like to sell it for somewhere in the neighbourhood of $650. These activities are not done for money-making purposes, the profit is part of the total picture of the project.

A set of tractor chains, portable barbeques, cookers and Christmas tree stands are some of their other accomplishments. Some they have in stock and others are made from orders received from the public. Persons interested in acquiring items such as these can call the Ryley School for more information.

There are sixteen students, both girls and boys, in this junior high class and under the work-study program are currently working part-time in local establishments such as the village office, a bakery, a beauty salon, auto body shop, industrial machine shop, automotive garage, and a sign painting shop.

When they have completed grade nine of this pre-vocational class they usually go to Vegreville School but can also attend the W.P. Wagner Vocational School in Edmonton.

Here, they will carry on to complete their senior high school education which will prepare them to take their place in the working world.

Six seek rodeo queen's crown

by [illegible]

Six young ladies, Karry Krystal (Tofield), Cathy Brown (Tofield), Sherry Smith (Sherwood Park), Teresa Williams (Tofield) Terrie Reum (Ryley) and Susan Beattie (Bawlf) are in competition for the Sodbuster Rodeo Queen's crown this year.

The girls, their mothers, the judges, sponsors and members of the Rodeo committee recently gathered at the home of [illegible] Tofield for an evening tea.

Teresa Williams

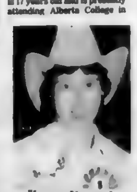
Cyndie Rabbi, last year's Rodeo Queen, was on hand to enlighten them on their duties and let them know what was in store for the successful candidate during her reign.

The contestants will be required to judge entries submitted for the rodeo poster contest as well as sell tickets and buttons at the Farmers Market on May 11th. Judging started with the girls being observed and graded for congeniality.

Susan Beattie

The Agricultural Society will sponsor the winner in the Lakeland Rodeo Queen contest in October, if she wishes to compete.

Teresa Williams of Tofield is sponsored by Katchamut Creek Family Horse Club. She is 17 years old and is presently attending Alberta College in Edmonton for academic upgrading. She enjoys showing horses in what little spare time she has when she is not working in a lawyer's office. She hopes to someday raise, train and breed horses and plans to attend Lakeland College in Vermilion for a course in western horsemanship.



Karry Krystal

Terrie Reum

Susan Beattie from Bawlf is sponsored by Hastings Lake Pleasure Horse Association. She is 15 and is in grade 10. Her hobbies are Western and English riding. She belongs to the Camrose Easy-riders 4-H Club and has aspirations to be a horse trainer or a floral decorator. Susan works in the Duggan Mall on Saturdays and hopes to take a course in horse husbandry at Olds College in the future.

Karry Krystal is 18 years old and attends grade 12 in Tofield School. She is sponsored by Rinkinhope Ranch. Her main interests include gymkhana, drawing and dancing. After graduation this year, she plans to attend a school for a career in cosmetology and hairdressing. She would also like to take the western horsemanship course offered at Lakeland College in Vermilion.

Terrie Reum is sponsored by the Ryley Light Horse Association. She is 16 and is in grade 11 at Ryley School. Terrie studied piano for five years and is interested in horses and 4-H. She hopes that attending Lakeland College for a western horsemanship course will further her career in training and showing horses after she completes her high school education.

Cathy Brown is sponsored by Beaverhill Light Horse Association. She is 16 years old and attends Grade 11 in Tofield School. Last year she was crowned Ice Carnival Queen. Her varied interests include figure skating, school sports, 4-H and riding horses. Her ambition is to attend university and pursue a [illegible].

Cathy Brown

Sherry Smith is from Sherwood park and is sponsored by Stillmeadows Ranch. She is 16 years old, in grade 10 and enjoys riding and showing horses. Her future plans include attending university or college for a career in journalism.

Gym meet is held

by [illegible]

A small but enthusiastic crowd cheered and applauded the gymnasts throughout their routines on the vault, balance beam, uneven bars and mat calesthenics at a competition held in the Tofield School Gym on Saturday.

Club members from Tofield, Viking and Fort Saskatchewan were in competition for medals and ribbons.

The Tofield Gym Club won a plaque for having the highest total points. This plaque was accepted by Cheryl Jeffrey.

Over-all winners of the day were, 12 years and up: 1. Stacey Mattison (Viking), 2. Melanie Jensen (Tofield), and 3. Cheryl Jeffrey (T).

Ten to eleven years: 1. Janet Jost, 2. Tamara Klockner, 3. Renee Goulard, all of Fort Saskatchewan.

Eight and nine years: 1. Patricia Bulger (F.S.), 2. Bonnie Zinkel (T), 3. Stacey Wall (T).

Six and seven years: 1. Lisa Bunney (T), Bobbi Shauffer (F.S.), 3. Shannon Sears (T).

A demonstration of the pre-school gymnasts was led by Kathy Bunney. Special thanks went out to Pete and Hilda Korobko for building a box horse and padding for the balance beams at no charge to the Tofield Gym Club.

The club members expressed their appreciation to their instructor, Mrs. Kathy Bunney, with a gift of a T-shirt which had "Coach" on the back.

This gym meet marked the end of the first session for gymnastic classes. The second one resumed on April 10th.

Free speech

Freedom of speech was mutilated in Canada a few weeks ago, and hardly anyone protested. Indeed, hardly any one even noticed.

The Liberal government, supported both by the Tories and by the NDP in Parliament, all voted to support the infamous Bill C-169, forbidding the publication or public voicing of any opinion not sanctioned by one or another of the official candidates or parties during a federal election.

The move was purportedly taken to restrict the number of dollars spent in election campaigns, to protect some candidates against major spending by opponents. But it was also taken to prevent candidates and parties being subjected to the pressure tactics of certain special groups. Pressure groups such as Ban-the-Cruise, Pro-Life, Greenpeace, environment protectionists and others.

For weeks the Bill has been protested as being directly contrary to the Freedom of Speech provisions of the Bill of Rights, the Charter of Rights, the Constitution and traditional freedoms. Most noisy among the protesters has been the National Citizens Coalition headed by Colin Brown. And lest anyone feel the Coalition is just a bunch of kooks trying to gain attention, it should be pointed out that Ernest Manning, former Premier of Alberta, and [illegible] a Senator, is one of the founding, and continuing members. Hardly anyone thinks of Ernest Manning as a kook.

At long last it seems Brian Mulroney has recognized the error, and says when a Tory government is elected, he will move to rescind the Bill. It's the most he can do, since the Grits and the NDP still support it.

But there's an election not far in the offing. Before this comes about, and before the identity of the contestants is known . . . that is, before the Liberal leadership race is held . . . the Liberals should come to agree that Mulroney, and the National Citizens Coalition, are right, and get rid of the bill.

Free speech is too important to have it curtailed for convenience during an election. If it can be circumscribed for an election, it's only a step till it is forbidden for anyone but a politician to criticize the government, then another step until it is also verboten for politicians. Another step and we won't be able to criticize religion, or politics, or even cheer for the Edmonton Oilers.

Exaggeration? We hope so. But a government which can chop freedom of speech during elections . . . two of our most cherished liberties . . . can chop more than this.

Unions struggle

B.C.'s pulp and paper workers are back at work today, following government orders to get back on the job. Union leaders recommended acceptance of the government order, though it is uncertain how long till they will contest government authority. A foolish move, if they adopt it.

In Vancouver, construction workers very intelligently agreed to accept orders to work alongside non-union workers, but only if all are paid union wages. Which is impossible. When construction in B.C. has hit a low ebb. In Toronto, hotel workers seem bent on strike, pushing for a three year contract guaranteeing thirteen percent yearly increases. At a time when inflation is somewhere around five. And the hotel industry is facing ruinous vacancy rates.

The fascinating thing is that many, if not most, of the workers seem to have recognized that the picture has changed. That money is scarce. That wages are down. That jobs are hard to find. Even if their own costs are rising. They're recognizing that the halcyon days, the days of jobs on every corner, of standards of living rising beyond dreams, of benefits and working conditions improving with every transfer, are probably over. And they'd like to be working . . . even if for less . . . rather than just putting in time. Of relying on temporary Unemployment Insurance. And even more questionable Social Assistance. Of losing ground.

Unions are still important. Still necessary. But at a time when many workers are settling for three percent, zero, ten percent and even twenty percent decreases, demands for forty-five percent increases, over three years, hardly seem realistic.

Trees needed

Dear Sir,

What a treeless place Tofield is!

The Main Street, the whole of the 'educational zone' and all the exhibition grounds are bare of green relief, hot and dusty in summer, cold and windy in winter.

The row of spruces installed by the railway line is a great improvement on the previous condition and serves as a reminder of how much remains to be done.

This is a good time of year to organize some planting, and I appeal to the mayor and council to devote a little financial support to something which could really improve the look of the town.

The exhibition grounds are possibly most in need of a green belt, but the schools badly need an aesthetic lift — expensive conifers are not needed — fast growing poplars would be more practical.

Please do let us have some shade and shelter!

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Urquart have a new son, David Jason. This is another great-grandchild for Mrs. Edna Brewer.

Cory Krezanoski finished his hockey season with a tournament in Tofield on the March 17-18 weekend. They won the "A" Event of the tournament. Trevor Tremblay and Mark Buckingham playing for the Tofield Warriors won the "B" event. Cory has been playing for the Atom Development Team from Camrose, coached by Wilf Eastwood and Gerry Nordstrom this winter. Dinner guests on March 18 between games at the Krezanoski home were Rev. and Mrs. Karol Lunde and Krist of Camrose. Krist plays on the same team as Cory. On March 25 Cory's team played a game in Camrose, had a wind-up party at Dave's Pizza and then went swimming at the Aquatic Centre.

On March 25 the Salem Lutheran Church had Margita Brunger of Edmonton representing Lutheran World Relief as a guest speaker. She gave a brief talk and showed slides of the work done by LWR. She came from Poland about 30 years ago, under the auspices of the Canadian World Relief. A pot luck lunch was served afterwards.

Loose Ends

by Carol Livingstone

Ah, tax time. It comes once a year, whether we like it or not.

You may or may not know (or care) that taxing the poor citizens began as a post-war measure to get the country — I'm not sure which country — back on its feet. Once it caught on and the country was upright once again (while the population was on its knees), the government wasn't about to give up a good thing and soon developed a method of taxing everything a working man does or thinks about doing, except breathing. Someone said that the only sure way to escape taxes is to die, but they've even found a way to get us after we've gone, called the estate tax.

Tax time is well named. It taxes our sanity when we try to read and understand the new and simplified tax forms, written in a language developed especially to confuse anyone not paid to read it. It taxes a marriage since on partner always insists on asking the other where things are. I become very unhappy at this time of year, simply because it is now that I am expected to produce, on command, those minute slips of paper that are so vital to his not having to pay this year. Finding them becomes a matter of life or death — mine — since I'm the one not doing the filing properly all year.

Most of all, it taxes our sense of humor. Taxes just aren't a laughing matter, is it a joke the way we fight for self-control when we discover that after taxes we still owe them? Is there a giggle in the way they keep trying to get blood from a turnip? Is there humor in the way we cringe at the word 'audit'? And we all know what loopholes and charitable deductions are only for those who can afford to pay taxes. Ain't that a hoot?

Let's face it, taxes are a sure thing. We cannot ignore, give away or bury them, and no one in his right mind is going to steal them from us. All we can do is dream of escape. So if you hear of a place, preferably above ground, warm all year round and inexpensive. I'm not fussy, but [illegible] ticket will you? I'll repay you when I get my tax return.

Kingman district notes

On March 30, the Klentitz family lost their trailer and possessions in a fire. All members of the family escaped without injury. Since then they have been living with Bob and Agnes Patterson, and intend to move into the Phil Bentson home soon. On Friday and Saturday of last week, community members brought any items they wished to give to the family to the Kingman Hall which was open for that purpose.

Fred and Louella Coykendall and Irene and Willie Bjorgum were to Forestburg where they participated in a floor curling tournament. They won the second event but lost the first and third. Kathleen and Wilfred Johnson were on hand to watch the tournament on April 1 and 2 and Amy and Clarence Kringen went to watch on April 2.

The Kingman Stingers ladies fastball club held a spring dance at the hall on March 31 with a good crowd attending. The Foggy River Band providing the music.

Fraser Rutherford's parents from Nova Scotia visited with the Rutherford family for a few days last week.

J.O.B.S. ALBERTA

Helping Alberta business and farm employers provide job opportunities and training for Albertans now.

Alberta J.O.B.S. (Job Opportunities through Business Support) will provide employment and training opportunities for Albertans by giving financial support to business and farm employers.

If you are an employer who could use extra help, financial assistance is now available through these two programs.

The Alberta Wage Subsidy Program will enable you to hire the employees you need. It may also be used to help you retain staff who might otherwise have to be laid off.

The Alberta Training Program can help your present or new employees develop new skills which will help your business or farm operation be more productive.

Hire that new employee you need now, and receive reimbursement of up to $2.50 per hour.

For each new employee you hire, the Alberta Wage Subsidy Program will reimburse your business or farm operation for 50% of the employee's wages, up to a maximum of $2.50 per hour.

The subsidized jobs must provide full time employment of at least 30 hours per week. The jobs must be continuous for at least three months, so seasonal employment is certainly eligible. Funding is available for up to a maximum of six months. Employees subsidized under these programs may not be members of the employer's immediate family.

Receive reimbursement for employee wages up to $7.50 per hour or $300 per week when you provide job training and skill development.

To assist Albertans in upgrading and developing new skills, the Alberta Training Program is to provide financial support to your business.

The program will subsidize the cost of wages for your new or current employees when you provide them with the opportunity to develop the new skills they need to help you in your operations.

The training projects must provide your employees with the opportunity to develop new skills in medium and high skill occupations on a full time basis. The length of training can vary depending on the occupation and the training needs.

Consultants at Alberta Manpower Employment Development offices will assist you in developing a training plan.

Applications are now being accepted.

Both the Wage Subsidy and the Training Programs are effective immediately and end March 31, 1985.

Application forms and further information on the Alberta Wage Subsidy Program and the Alberta Training Program as well as other Alberta Manpower programs may be obtained from:

All went smoothly, thanks to the eagerness of all volunteer helpers and support of the community. Several choices in the menu enabled the kitchen helpers to enjoy their [illegible].

Thanks also goes to the Legion for the use of the hall and lovely new kitchen facilities.

At the perogy supper, a cheque worth $80 was presented by members of the Tofield 1st Brownie Pack, Girl Guides and Pathfinders to the Hospital Auxiliaries. This most thoughtful donation was collected at their recently held St. Patrick's Day tea.

The THA will be present at the Farmer's Market this Friday. Fresh, frozen perogies will be available as well as the usual assortment of [illegible].

Tofield Hospital Auxiliaries wish to improve their hospital visitation program and to become more accessible to patients. Anyone who may require some help in this area or have suggestions may contact any member or leave a note in the drop box at Owl Value Drug Mart.

Once again the THA is initiating its plans and preparations for Heritage Day on August 6. Some changes in the program format will hopefully make a more enjoyable day.

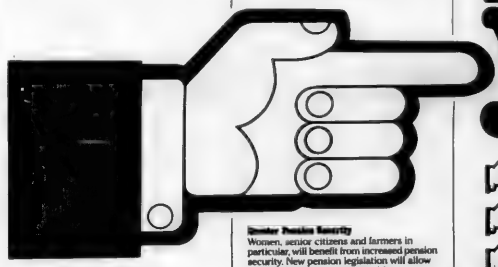
Budget 84 involves you



The Government of Canada recognizes the fact that all Canadians must work together in partnership if Canada is to grow and prosper. This is particularly important now, at a time when the economy is recovering and new opportunities are presenting themselves.

Budget 84 is designed to allow us to capitalize on this climate and to provide the economic opportunity and security all Canadians seek.

A Fair Tax System
Taxpayers' rights are being strengthened, particularly with regard to assessments, penalties and interest charges. And, quarterly payments are being eliminated for some 550,000 individual Canadians.

Greater Pension Security
Women, senior citizens and farmers in particular, will benefit from increased pension security. New pension legislation will allow all Canadians better opportunities to save for their retirement.

Farm Debt — Tax Savings
In order to encourage the continuation of family farms, new legislation will be introduced that will help farmers to provide for their retirement adequately.

The Mortgage Rate Protection Program
This program will be introduced to enable homebuyers and homeowners to buy protection against extraordinary increases in mortgage rates.

Risk Reduction Incentives for Small Business
The net result of simplification of small business tax laws, as well as new initiatives and provisions for growing small businesses, will mean a t... saving for small and medium sized businesses of some $150 million.

Profit Participation
Employee Profit Participation Plans will assist Canadian workers and managers to build a more productive and competitive economy. The budget proposes to encourage gain sharing with a special tax credit that would be shared between employers and employees.

These are just a few of the important provisions of Budget 84 that benefit us all.

The Government of Canada needs your participation to help build for the future. Get involved.

Plan will be updated

by Jean Murray

Mark Lawrence, from the Planning Department of Alberta Municipal Affairs, was present at the council meeting in Tofield on Monday night to discuss the proposed re-zoning of urban reserve property, and how this change would fit in with the existing land use outline that had been made up by Municipal Affairs in earlier years.

A motion was made and passed by council to have the General Municipal Plan updated.

A request from the Mennonite Church delegation to have vacant lots exempted from assessment was tabled pending further investigation of the feasibility of having this group of lots put under one title.

The Tofield Gun Club sent a representative to inquire as to whether Council had any objections to their building a pistol range on to the existing clubhouse.

Council felt that they had no objections to this construction providing the plans met with building standards and a building permit was obtained.

Approval was given to the Tofield Fire Department to close off 56 Avenue south of the fire hall, between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. on June 3rd for demonstrations by approximately 50 firefighters from across the country. They plan to offer displays, demonstrations and tours of the fire hall and its apparatus.

A representative from the Fairgrounds Advisory Board approached Council asking that they not freeze reserve monies that had been set aside in the past for proposed fairground projects.

This request was discussed thoroughly and after giving it careful consideration, it was decided to table any decision until the budget had been made to see how much money could be set aside for this purpose.

Tofield Legion's request for additional space in the cemetery was approved. This will accommodate the centralization of the cenotaph which will be made larger.

A resolution was passed to change the date of the council meeting scheduled for April 23rd to the next day.

AUCTION SALES A SPECIALTY — HONESTY OUR POLICY

Fishing season's open, but there are a few new angles.

Lanny McDonald, like any good sportsman, knows that before a new season starts it's important to check for rule changes. This year is no exception.

IMPORTANT REGULATION CHANGES FOR 1984
- The daily catch and possession limit for bull trout has been reduced to two per day and two in possession
- All angling closures on the tributary streams of the Upper and Lower Kananaskis lakes have been removed Lanny also knows that one important rule is always in force in Alberta: have a licence and carry it with you. They're available now along with the 1984 Guide to Sportfishing Regulations at your local Fish and Wildlife office and regular outlets. Pick up yours. When you do, you'll automatically contribute two dollars to the Buck For Wildlife Fund.

WARNING
Mercury levels in some species of fish in Alberta river systems are above the safe levels of consumption recommended by Health & Welfare Canada. It is therefore advised that pregnant [illegible] river-caught pike, wall eye, goldeye or sauger, and no one should eat more than one meal per week of these species.

As I See It

by Dr. Walt Buck, M.L.A. Clover Bar

Just prior to the start of this session of the Legislature, I sent out a brochure with a number of questions which were intended to reflect the opinions of my constituents.

I am grateful for the response which has come into my office. As soon as the tabulations are made regarding the issues contained in the brochure, I will be publishing the results of your opinions.

I have always respected the opinions expressed by my constituents, and have attempted to carry forward the wishes of the majority of you during my discussions on issues in the Legislature. One opinion which has been expressed by these responses is the fact that your major concern is in the area of unemployment and job creation. A majority of you have expressed considerable concern about the unsatisfactory manner in which our government has been dealing with priority items.

I am concerned that this government continues to prove that it can spend money, but still has not learned how to manage the fiscal resources with which we have been blessed.

I will continue the practice of asking my constituents for ideas on how we can get Alberta back "on track". I'm convinced that the people of this province are sufficiently resourceful to come up with answers to this question.

If you have any questions or concerns, please contact my office by phoning 427-2321 collect, or write to Room 214, Legislative Building, Edmonton T5K 2B6.

Hall growth needed

by Jean Storey

Thirty years ago the Lindbrook Hall was nearly closed down and sold due to lack of interest by the community.

Somehow it was saved and carried on as a centre for community activities. The interest has grown steadily ever since and now the hall is too small to accommodate the large crowds.

Elsie Olson and Marilyn Berg, two members of the social committee for the Lindbrook Community League, said that the League is open to new members and new ideas, but they have been limited by the lack of space, and lack of funds has prevented any expansion.

Now, they are going to "get out and get at it!" Mrs. Berg says, and the first thing they plan to do is raise funds with a giant garage sale which they have scheduled for May 5th in the Lindbrook Hall which is located about one mile north of the Lindbrook turnoff sign on Highway 14, west of Tofield about six miles.

They are expecting a large amount of miscellaneous household goods as well as furniture and appliances. The public is welcome to sell anything they no longer need on a 10% commission basis.

The proceeds will go towards constructing an extension with kitchen and seating area, to the old hall.

Mrs. Berg felt that many of the people in the [illegible] do not know the League exists. She has expressed some difficulty in contacting the many acreage residents.

The purpose of this organization was originally limited to socializing with neighbours but now has grown to include activities such as aerobic classes, baseball clubs, "great" dances, family picnics and Christmas parties. Most of these events are open to the public except for the July picnic which is for members and family only.

They are hoping this giant sale event will bring community members together as well as raise funds for the extension of the hall.

Around the town

Baseball was a major topic of discussion at the Tofield Fairgrounds Advisory Board meeting held upstairs in the Town Office on April 3rd.

The Lahara baseball team will be putting up a new outfield fence at the Fairgrounds. The ladies ball team are putting an extension to their ball diamond.

Landscaping of the grounds is well underway, black dirt and gravel are being hauled to the site. If all goes as scheduled, the committee will be seeding grass until fall.

The proceeds will go towards constructing an extension with kitchen and seating area, to the old hall.

Mrs. Berg felt that many of the people in the [illegible] do not know the League exists. She has expressed some difficulty in contacting the many acreage residents.

STRESS SIGNS

Stress is simply the body's response to any demand made on it. We all need some stress — it's the spice of life. But too much stress is dangerous to our health and potentially fatal.

In the past twenty years, research has produced increasing evidence of how chronic stress can alter the body's chemical balance and weaken the immune system. Thus, stress can contribute to a host of ailments.

Some common warning signals of over-stress:
— Losing your zest for life; dropping activities you once enjoyed.
— A change in your sleeping pattern: insomnia, waking in the middle of the night, not feeling rested in the morning.
— Irritability — getting unreasonably upset over little things.
— Frequent headaches.
— Indecisiveness, forgetfulness or tearfulness for no apparent reason.
— Colds and flu that last for a prolonged period.
— Neck, shoulder or back pain.
— Loss of interest in family, friends or work.

If you can identify yourself through some of these symptoms, the time to act is now. Start by taking time for yourself and using that time to relax. Learn to set priorities and say no to or postpone those activities low on the list. Try to include a form of exercise in your weekly schedule. Take up cycling, swimming, tennis or walking.

A healthy lifestyle can go a long way towards preventing serious illness.

Keep Canada Beautiful

From the Ground Up

RUDY J. WARAWA
CHIEF BLAZE LIE

Blackleg has spread across Saskatchewan from east to west since 1974. It was found in one Rimbey field in Alberta. With the commercial of canola seed into our area, more infestations are quite possible in Alberta.

A Blacking infection can be present as early as mid July with plants starting to fall over. The early symptoms (June) are plants with yellowish portions of the leaf with black fungus fruiting bodies growing on these portions. Later symptoms include the plant falling over. Cancerous lumps and deterioration of the lower stems with black fruiting bodies are then present.

Because the second year after canola is the time of greatest spore spread from canola stubble, the importance of rotation length is vital. Short rotation periods between canola crops will encourage the disease building. A producer should wait at least four years between canola crops as some spores are still present even up till the fourth year.

Two things can be done to control Blacking. Number 1 — treat you canola seed. Number 3 — keep your rotations between canola crops at least four years.

Canadian Farmers Hunger Crisis

Are you aware that you as a producer can given grain to help combat hunger in underdeveloped countries? A number of churches are involved in this worthwhile endeavor. Further information can be obtained from the World Foodgrains Bank office in Winnipeg, phone 946-1984. Or you can drop in at the Ryley office and look at our information on the foodbank. for broadleaf weed control in wheat and barley now, and rotation to canola next year.
TORDON 202C brand herbicide provides both broadleaf weed protection in wheat and barley crops, and the flexibility of doing side-to-side rotation to canola the following year. That's because TORDON® 202C leaves the soil sufficiently clean to give you the choice of canola, even though it has been active against many broadleaf weeds, including those resistant to certain other herbicides. Broadleaf weeds such as Canada Thistle and even tall-growing Wild Buckwheat. TORDON® 202C also controls Wild Mustard, Stinkweed, Tartary Buckwheat, Shepherd's-purse, Sow Thistle, Cocklebur, Green Smartweed, Stinkweed and Dandelion.
Trust TORDON® 202C for wheat, barley and canola today, tomorrow and for generations to come. Order through your local dealer or co-op or independent grain

Counties may combine for road programming

...on S.R. 617

[redacted] Camrose may co-operate in the construction of a four-mile stretch of road bordering the two counties.

Reeve Bob Prestage and Councillor Mike Marlowe of Camrose County Council attended a meeting of Beaver County Council on Thursday to discuss th[redacted].

The County of Camrose is seeking to reconstruct a four-mile stretch of Secondary Road 617 and informed their Beaver counterparts that the province has agreed to pay the [redacted].

However, the two counties would have to purchase any right-of-way land that was required as well as paying for the removal and replacing of any fencing.

Spokesmen for the County of Camrose indicated that the County of Beaver share in the project could amount to about $20,000 for land purchases along with any fencing costs.

The delegation was assured that the proposal would be given careful consideration by the County of Beaver.

Councillors were told that the proposed 1984 budget called for municipal expenditures of $4,206,916 with school requisitions amounting to [redacted] there could be a surplus at the end of the fiscal year.

It was agreed that June 1st would be set aside for a meeting with the Municipal Planner for discussions on the General Municipal Plan.

The sum of $20,000 was approved for the use of the Beaver Regional Waste Management Authority to cover costs of preliminary work until this operation gets underway.

Electoral boundaries within the County were discussed at great lengths and it was agreed that the population within the divisions should be equalized as much as is possible.

Councillors agreed to conduct a census within their own divisions and report population figures during a regular meeting in June so that boundaries might be changed in the fall.

Fire Chief Laurie Weatherill suggested that one of the older fire trucks should be sold and the money obtained could be added to reserve funds and used to purchase a new vehicle.

Weatherill was directed to check on what value could be obtained from the sale of the old truck and report back to the next meeting of council.

Councillors agreed to investigate the possibility of setting up a six-year program for improvement and construction of district roads that could be up-dated on an annual basis.

Fire alert issued

by Jean Murray

Fire officials urge caution on the part of the public regarding the burning of leaves and grass. Conditions are hazardous for such undertakings at this time of year

Dry grass and windy conditions make a prime situation for grass fires to rapidly spread out of control. When lighting fires, one should [redacted]ys have plenty of water on hand and enough help to quench a blaze.

County fire chief, Laurie Weatherill said "Watch garbage barrels when burning refuse, as this is the number one source of grass fires." Burning permits are required and can be obtained from the county fire chief, local fire chief, or any county councillor

His report for March included one call on March 30th to a house fire on part of N.W. 7-50-15, by the Holden Fire Department. The fire was advanced and they were unable to save any of the property. The loss was estimated at $100,000. The owners were totally covered by insurance.

Another major call-out was to the grain elevator fire in Viking, on March 2 and was responded to by County fire trucks from Holden, Bruce and Kinsella. The elevator was destroyed, but the firemen were able to control the fire.

School sites decided

Course of education to be offered in schools located in Holden and Ryley were decided last week.

The County of Beaver Board of Education determined the fate of the two schools during a regular meeting held on April 10th.

It was agreed by trustees that the junior high school course of studies would be [redacted] high school students would go to Ryley.

Prior to the decision being made, trustees heard a presentation from the Holden Home and School Association which indicated that the group was pleased that the Board of Education was making concrete plans for the future of education within the county.

In another matter, trustees were informed that students from the county had received marks in departmental examinations had been on a par with schools in other parts of the province.

Resignations were accepted from Floyd Irwin (Tofield), and Earl Kindley and Irene Hafso of Viking Trustees were advised that if approval is forthcoming from Alberta Education, tenders would be called for the construction of a shop and home economics addition to Tofield School.

It was agreed that new tenders would be called for the potential sale of teacherages after earlier tenders had been considered to be inadequate.

A study into the ventilation and dust extraction facilities in Ryley and Viking Schools at a cost of $5,200 was approved. The study is required in order to obtain provincial financial assistance should the project to improve these facilities proceed

A preliminary plan for procedures to be following in the event of a major bus accident was presented for the Board's [redacted]

[redacted] permission had been received from the County of Camrose for Beaver buses to enter that county and pick up students who are attending classes in the County of Beaver.

Donation received

Ken Mueller and Howard Sawers recently presented a $50 donation to the Holden Homecoming '84 Committee from the Holden United Grain Growers Local No 93

[redacted] costs of the Homecoming on August 4, 5 and 6th which has been planned to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Village of Holden.

Dogs cause problems for Ryley residents

Dogs running at large are causing considerable concerns in the Village of Ryley.

At a recent meeting of council, administration was directed to write letters to owners of offending dogs, seeking their co-operation in bringing the problem to an end.

Councillors agreed that more forceful measures would have to be taken if dog owners don't co-operate and keep [redacted]

It was agreed that the Ryley Junior Sports Association should be asked to take part in "Pitch-in Day" to help spruce up the appearance of the village and councillors agreed to host members at a wiener roast when the work has been completed.

Administration was directed to write to TransAlta to see if a street light could be erected on the north side of the swimming pool building.

An invitation was received for attendance at the official opening of Holden Lodge on May 8th.

Good duo

An amateur variety program in Holden attracted a wide range of talented artists to perform before a full house. The two young ladies playing fiddles were a big hit with the crowd.

Opening is held

by Jean Murray

A very large crowd gathered at Judy's Flower Shop and The Trophy Hut for the joint grand opening celebrations on Friday and Saturday

In addition to free roses to the first 50 customers from Judy's, the Trophy Hut was offering 50 complimentary engraved name tags on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Lucky winners of the draws offered were Edna Paege, Edith Donnan and Bernice Powder.

Needed policy

The big noise, and the bright lights, in the federal Liberal leadership campaign, seem to follow the campaigns of John Turner and Jean Chretien. And the public are being played for suckers in following the old shell game, that of harking back to the language question, rather than listening to debates on real [illegible]

Turner is being set up on the language issue. He made an unfortunate reference to the Manitoba-Ottawa-Quebec language problem, and it won't go away. So is McGuigan being set up. Even when both are saying things of more real importance.

So the message seems to come through that Chretien is more afraid of either Turner or McGuigan than of the other candidates. The same message comes from Mulroney, who is attacking no-one else but Turner. But the public doesn't want to think — it's too easy getting wrapped up and sidetracked in the language [illegible]

McGuigan is proposing, even while he still has time in this Parliament, one of the more important measures respecting the day-to-day lives of countless thousands of Canadians . . . he is seeking the support of the provinces in developing legislation by which they would provide a central pool of information tracking divorced husbands who slip from sight or otherwise seek to avoid payment of court-ordered support for their former wives or their children. Today's situation is little short of scandalous . . . a man can elect not to pay, and almost nothing is done to force him. Instead, taxpayers come up with welfare payments, with family support, with all kinds of other allowances, while he cavorts in other areas, spending the money which should support his former family. Or the family struggles on the edge of poverty.

We know that not all men are like that, that blanket criticism is unjustified. But the record indicates that nearly three out of four make few payments. Some families struggle on their own to keep afloat, others turn to welfare . . . which the rest of us pay for.

We're for McGuigan's attempt to keep track of the footloose and the free. He hasn't suggested it, but we think the proper action, given McGuigan's methods of tracking, would be to garnishee their earnings. After all, the payments have been established by a judge who had some idea of the situation. Why should the rest of us, as taxpayers, have to fill in the gap? Why should the wife and children have to suffer the poverty of non-payment?

Pay not the only benefit

Jack Munro's decision to recommend the rank-and-file IWA accept the company's three-year wage and benefits offer is courageous and realistic in this time of unrealistic and fanciful expectations.

As Munro said, a base rate of $13 an hour isn't to be sneezed at, when compared to the minimum rate of $3.75 an hour. People on the lower mainland are beginning to take jobs that pay that rate, now that their U.I.C. has run out and they do not qualify for welfare.

It has always seemed to us that the cash received for work was one of the least important benefits one could achieve from a job. The others include the social aspects of work, and, the most important by far, the experience the benefits learned from being taken into the company or trade or profession and seeing others in it at work. This ad[illegible] to be purchased at one time.

Now we have the [illegible] where equal pay for equal work has virtually shut-out over half a million young people from the work place because their skills and level of productivity cannot be set against the wage rate.

Employers cannot afford them.

Yet, they are, by and large, more enthusiastic about the job, better educated, and with quicker minds and limbs than those employed who in many cases enjoy the job security — with its co sequently lack of inventive and lessened productivity.

The workforce is in a dilemma — reduce wage demands and increase the job security and other benefits and in this way ensure that those who are employed stay employed, or come up with some revolutionary new scheme whereby young people can be brought into the job market. Unless this is addressed now, our pensions will depend on the productivity of a few computers and those aged crones who managed to keep going.

The Throne Speech, expectedly, contained only pablum for the young people who enjoy an unemployment rate of 25-percent and rising.

Drunk drivers kill

Editor's Note: The following two stories are reprinted from the Winnipeg Sun on Sunday, December 4. Sun writer B.J. Del Conte looks at three victims of an impaired driver and the pain they have suffered. One of the families which has suffered is Bill and Jean Shwaluk of Shoal Lake.

Death is the worst luck of [illegible]

Winnipeg teenagers Walter Kerney and Sara Taylor were visiting their friend Lori Shwaluk in Shoal Lake, Man., on September 26, 1980.

They were returning from a drive-in when they were unlucky enough to be on the [illegible]

Three lovely young lives were callously snuffed out that [illegible]

Their families still don't know why.

"Lori is such an intelligent, loving and dependable person," said her mother, Jean [illegible]

"Why do young people have to lose their lives unnecessarily, ruthlessly and without dignity?"

"I didn't go to church for months," said Shwaluk.

"I felt God was punishing me."

"But I realized it had nothing to do with Him," she said. "It was a preventable [illegible] Jenette Goodman, mother of Walter Kerney, said: "I felt like my entire insides were crushed.

"The terrible part was not being able to see him one last time."

The funeral home said I shouldn't come by.

A third mother, Margaret Taylor — who was in England at the time — said she still awakes up hearing her husband's voice breaking the news on the phone.

"I sometimes think I haven't really accepted that I won't see her again," said Taylor.

That's a feeling common to all three mothers.

"The pain is awful," said Goodman. "Even after three years the pain is always near the surface.

"I'd like for drunk drivers to feel my pain for 15 minutes," she adds. "They'd never drink and drive again.

"It was like a part of myself being killed."

"The little girl in me died that night," said Goodman. "Walter's death made me feel middle-aged for the first time."

The trauma of their children's deaths was compounded by the fact that authorities didn't keep the three families informed about trial proceedings.

If not for a telephone call from a concerned Mountie, the families would've been in the dark.

That and the fact the convicted driver was released from jail after six months left a bitter taste in the parents' mouths.

"We weren't treated very well," said Shwaluk. "We were hurt because the law seems to protect the criminal."

As an articling lawyer, Goodman brings a unique perspective to the issue of legal liability and sentencing.

"These aren't accidents," said Goodman. "They're crimes because there's an ele[illegible]"

"It's criminal behaviour if when you're sobre you know you're going to drink and then drive after," she said.

Economy misguided

We were aghast to learn Monday of this week that the Attorney General of Alberta is seeking to save about a million dollars a year in the court system.

Giving the matter consideration, it seems only logical that he should be applauded for trying to cut back on the expenditures of public funds.

But surely his choice of areas for economy in the level of fees paid to civilian witnesses or to civilians summoned, but not empanelled for jury duty, has to be ranked as one demonstrating that he is completely out of touch. It seems to bear out the blinkered vision which seemed to form a part of the Ross Paisley debate, the Dial Mortgage affair, police force instructions to treat 'differently' civil servants or officials in 'delicate' positions, the appointment of senior officials, and more.

It used to be that civilian witnesses were paid an entire $20 a day. So were citizens summoned for jury duty, but who were not included in the actual jury.

A whole $20.00.

As of Monday, their pay, in both instances, is to be cut in half. To $10. (Wouldn't it be nice if we could announce the same sort of thing about the Attorney General's pay?)

We wonder, for one thing, how this rate of pay squares with the minimum wage?

We wonder, for another, if anyone who advanced this suggestion gave a thought to the number of people who will try to be unavailable for jury duty? To get their name off the list. To find some alternative, even to a court appearance of their [illegible]

We wonder, too, how many more potential witnesses suddenly will find "it doesn't pay to become involved". One of the tragedies of our time is that too many of us don't want to become involved with court cases, because it's smarter to stay out, to see nothing, hear nothing, know nothing. We won't even go to the defence of people we see being attacked, because "we don't want to get involved". Now, we can even less afford such a luxury.

Now the attorney general is encouraging that sort of thinking, by cutting witness fees back from $20, which was already too low (notwithstanding the fact it was higher than in many other provinces) to half that level.

If ever there was a place not to be chintzy, this was it.

Reduce Taxes on Farm, Fishing Fuels, Says Mazankowski

"The government should remove the 9% federal sales tax on fuel used in food production", says Don Mazankowski, PC spokesman of Transportation.

"Removing this tax would save Canadian producers over $250 million per year and would provide valuable assistance to food producers who are currently experiencing serious financial difficulties."

"I have received numerous letters from farm and fishing organizations indicating their support for the removal of the sales tax," said Mr. Mazankowski, who introduced a Motion in the House of Commons calling on the government to consider the idea. Following debate on February 17, 1984 the Motion was referred to the Finance Committee for further examination.

"The response to my Motion has been overwhelmingly favourable", continued Mr. Mazankowski. "It has received support from coast to coast and is clearly seen as one step toward breaking the cycle of rising input costs."

"On behalf of producers I have written to the Minister of Finance indicating the wide support for the removal of this tax and urging him to give it every consideration. As well, I am continuing my efforts to have the Finance Committee examine the subject in order to consider ways of implementing and improving the proposal.

"The federal sales tax on fuel is an up-front tax that acts to reduce economic activity further along the food production chain. By taking money out of producers' pockets, it reduces their ability to purchase machinery, equipment, fertilizer and other inputs.

"Sales of the items not only stimulate the economy, they increase the productivity of producers. The fuel tax should be rescinded to encourage the growth of all industries related to food production and to maintain a strong agricultural and fishing sector in Canada," concluded Mr. Mazankowski.

The Powerline Baseball League is planning an organizational meeting in the immediate future

According to league officials, a date for a meeting should be established this week.

Although officials know that a majority of teams will be back for a new season, there are some teams they haven't heard from and as a result, are not certain if all eight teams will be returning or, if any new teams might be applying for admission.

Echoes from Em

Surely the most joyous service of the year is the one held on Easter morning. If there is one day of the year where all Christian's should feel optimistic it is Easter Sunday.

Unfortunately some people are just not made that way.

A minister told me of one Easter Day. It was a beautiful morning, the sun was shining, the birds singing, flowers were peeping through the grass and the trees and hedgerows were clothed in their first delicate green

"What a lovely Easter Day!" he called to one of his congregation as he arrived at the church. "Oh, aye" was the reply. "But I've seen it snow well after Easter Sunday some years".

But why remember the snow when the sun is shining?

In contrast, I recall the story of a woman who had been invited to attend the Harvest Thanksgiving service at a country church. She went rather reluctantly because she wasn't a great churchgoer. In any case it had been a terrible summer — rain, rain, rain

It was raining as she trudged to church and she couldn't help wondering to herself, "What on earth have country folk to be thankful for this year?" Then as she entered the church door there in the porch was the first part of the harvest display, and right in the centre where no one could miss it, a reminder of one of God's greatest gifts — a glass of water!

Pulse crops increase

Alberta's pulse crop (dry beans, dry peas, lentils and faba beans) production has been increasing steadily over the last 10 years.

Most of the dry beans are exported for canning and packaging, while the dry peas are exported or used by the Canadian pea soup industry. The lentils are mostly exported. Although faba beans are valued as a food product in many countries, especially Egypt, they also make excellent silage and protein supplements.

Alberta's pulse crops were worth approximately $9.5 million to the economy in 1982, and they accounted for about 10 per cent of the total value of these crops in Western Canada.

Pulse crops are also excellent for growing in rotation with cereals because the pulses are able to produce their own nitrogen through a process known as nitrogen fixation that takes place in their root nodules.

Alberta's long summer days and moderately dry climate are ideal for the production of high quality pulse crops. Field beans and faba beans are grown in the very productive irrigated areas in the south of the province, while lentils are grown in the brown and dark brown soil zones and in the black soil zones under a higher level of management. Field peas and faba beans are both grown in the black soil zones.

Scientists are continually searching for more efficient ways to plant, cultivate, harvest and use pulse crops. The goal of this research is to develop high-yielding and high quality pulse crops that are suited to local soil and climatic conditions. The scientists are also working on better disease, weed and insect control, pulse storage, the cooking quality of pulses, their chemistry, their uses and so on.

Information on the production and processing of pulse crops, their nutritive value and their uses is contained in a publication entitled "Alberta Pulses — Dry Beans, Dry Peas, Lentils and Faba Beans" Published by the Pulse Growers Association of Alberta in cooperation with Alberta Agriculture, the publication can be obtained from district agriculturists and from the Pulse Growers Association of Alberta, A.D.A. Good management needed

... for beef herds

The economic impact of improving the management of a beef cow herd can be starting'

Census statistics for Alberta suggest that from 75 to 77 calves are weaned in an average year for every 100 cows that were exposed to the bull, representing a 75 to 77 per cent calf crop. The average weaning weight for heifer and steer calves combined was reported to be about 450 pounds until the growthy European breeds and the larger types of British breeds became popular. And there are still many beef herds in Alberta with that kind of weaning performance but there are also many well managed herds that produce as many as 90 weaned calves per 100 cows. The weaning weights in these herds average 550 pounds and more.

Dividing the annual beef herd costs by the average weaning weight and then dividing that figure by the weaning percentage in the herd will give the price per pound of calf that will be required to cover these costs. The most recent cost and return reports on cow-calf operations in Alberta show that total annual costs (including returns to investment in land and equipment) range from $450 to $800 per cow. Annual cash costs are reported to range from $300 to $450 per cow.

So let's examine what would happen if a farmer whose annual costs of $500 per cow raised his weaning percentage from 75 to 90 and his average weaning weight from 450 to 550 pounds.

Before he improved his management, he would have needed $500 divided by 450 divided by 0.75 or $1.48 per pound of calf to cover all his costs out of the sale of these animals. However, under good management, he would need only $500 divided by 550 divided by 0.9 or $1.01 per pound to cover his costs.

If his land and most of his other assets were paid for, he could probably continue with his operation if he only covered his cash costs. Assuming cash costs of $350 per cow and poor management, he would need $360 divided by 400 divided by 0.75 or $1.04 per pound to cover these costs. However under good management, he would only need $350 divided by 550 divided by 0.9 or $.71 per pound to cover his cash costs.

From the point of view of a total profit or loss in the current market of about 80c per pound of calf, a good manager with a 100-cow herd that weaned 90 calves would get 9c per pound above his costs or 550 x 90 x $0.09 or a profit of $4,450, while the poor manager with a 75 per cent calf crop would lose 24c per pound or 450 x 75 x $0.24 which equals $8,100.

Hence the difference in the returns to the good manager and the poor manager would be $12,550. However, we must remember that there is no free lunch! Good management will cost money, but the extra feed required to maintain large crossbred cows, for example, and to buy good bulls would probably not amount to more than from $25 to $35 per cow. So even when the $3,500 is subtracted from the $12,550, the good manager will still be ahead by $9,000 or by just over $90 per cow.

We are people first

Debbie walked hurriedly toward me. "When does night school start again?" she asked. "My goodness," I thought. "We just had our last meeting together and she's already wondering about next year!"

This is just an example of the kind of enthusiasm I have encountered in teaching an evening class for mentally handicapped adults. This class is sponsored by the Camrose Association for the Mentally Handicapped. Twenty young and 'not so young' adults have for the last seven months, faithfully made their way to Room C-102 at Camrose Lutheran College Classroom Building.

If you happened to peek in our classroom on a Tuesday evening you may have seen several young ladies pouring over catalogues, looking for the best buy on a new spring outfit; finding the appropriate sizes, styles and colors and then using calculators to check out total costs. In another corner of the room you may have seen a group of students counting money and learning to make change. You would likely see yet another eager group involved in a discussion and making a chart listing the advantages and disadvantages of having a roommate. Huddled in another corner of the classroom, there might be a group of students filling out application forms or studying the classified ads. Wherever you looked you would probably see smiling faces! Like in any class, some students were more eager to learn than others and teachers and volunteers were needed to keep the activities going and encourage student involvement.

We had our fun times, too. Every week someone would be sure to remind us, "It's time for our coffee break!" The ladies working in the CLC coffeehouse soon became special friends. Several students would be glad to recommend the milkshakes served there.

We celebrated holidays together as well. We had a delicious smorg at the York Cafe just before Christmas break. On Shrove Tuesday we met at Smitty's for pancakes and last week we enjoyed our last meeting together while munching on pizza or lasagna at Boston Pizza.

Night class or 'night school' (as most of the students refer to it) was a special time for all of us involved. Like Debbie, I think we're all looking forward to next year.

Holden district news

According to Teresa Giebelhaus, reporter of the Holden 4-H Beef Club, a meeting was held on April 9. The club decided to clean 10 miles of highway on May 5. A calf tour and grooming demonstration will be held during the Easter holidays. Leonard Kowalchuk and a member of the RCMP gave a talk on Rural Crime Watch. Members of the 4-H Beef Club will be serving lunch at a farm auction sale on April 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Budd of Winipeg spent several days with his brother, Bruce Budd and family, before returning home. They also had spent some time in Yuma, Arizona.

Club plans activities

The Tofield 4-H Beef Club had a regular meeting April 11.

Dean Schacker led the pledge. Minutes and treasurers reports were read. A note of thanks was received from Mr. and Mrs. John Moore thanking the club for their help given towards the "John Moore Roast".

April 28 will be our calf tour. It will start at 10 a.m. at the Eleniak's and will end at Howard Brown's for judging.

On May 5 is highway clean-up. Our club will be cleaning 10 miles.

Carcass night will be held on May 28 at 6:30 p.m. One week later, June 4, is our big event, Achievement Day.

Mr. Wood gave us a quiz on "Select, Show and Judge" calves. This was followed by an excellent set of slides, showing how to prepare and show our calves at achievement day.

Joe Brown brought the clippers that he purchased for the club, with the money our club had received from the south Edmonton local of United Grain Growers.

Our next meeting will be on May 9.

J.O.B.S. ALBERTA
Helping Alberta business and farm employers provide job opportunities and training for Albertans now.

Alberta J.O.B.S. (Job Opportunities through Business Support) will provide employment and training opportunities for Albertans by giving financial support to business and farm employers.

If you are an employer who could use extra help, financial assistance is now available through these two programs.

The Alberta Wage Subsidy Program will enable you to hire the employees you need. It may also be used to help you retain staff who might otherwise have to be laid off.

The Alberta Training Program can help your present or new employees develop new skills which will help your business or farm operation be more productive.

Hire that new employee you need now, and receive reimbursement of up to $2.50 per hour.

For each new employee you hire, the Alberta Wage Subsidy Program will reimburse your business or farm operation for 50% of the employee's wages, up to a maximum of $2.50 per hour.

The subsidized jobs must provide full time employment of at least 32 hours per week. The jobs must be continuous for at least three months, as seasonal employment is certainly eligible. Funding is available for up to a maximum of six months. Employees subsidized under these programs may not be members of the employer's immediate family.

Receive reimbursement for employee wages up to $7.50 per hour or $300 per week when you provide job training and skill development.

To assist Albertans in upgrading and developing job skills, the Alberta Training Program will provide financial support to your business.

The program will subsidize the cost of wages for your new or current employees when you provide them with the opportunity to develop the new skills they need to help you in your operation.

The training projects must provide your employees with the opportunity to develop new skills in medium and high skill occupations on a full time basis. The length of training can vary depending on the occupation and the training needs.

Consultants at Alberta Manpower Employment Development offices will assist you in developing a training plan.

Applications are now being accepted.

Both the Wage Subsidy and the Training Programs are effective immediately and end March 31, 1985.

Application forms and further information on the Alberta Wage Subsidy Program and the Alberta Training Program as well as other Alberta Manpower programs may be obtained from:

Achievement award nominations wanted

Nominations are now being accepted for 1984 Alberta Achievement Awards.

Mary J. LeMessurier, Minister of Culture, in announcing the program said, "The Achievement Awards Program offers each of us the opportunity to nominate any individual or group who we feel has made a significant contribution to the enrichment of life in our Province."

If you know of someone who has made an outstanding contribution in sports, the arts, community service, science or other fields, send in your recommendations.

Nomination forms are available from Alberta Culture, Alberta Achievement Awards Program, 12th Floor, C.N. Tower, Edmonton, T5J 0K5.

At last year's awards ceremony and presentation in Calgary, a total of 185 awards were given out in three categories performances, service and excellence.

Performance awards are given to Albertans who, as Alberta representatives, placed first in a Canadian championship, or first, second or third in a recognized international championship, between June 1, 1983 and May 31, 1984. This applies to non-athletic and athletic competitions.

Service awards are given to individuals who, in a voluntary capacity, have performed outstanding service, having provincial or wide regional impact, for ten years or more.

Excellence awards are given to individuals for exceptional contributions and/or achievements in a professional or occupational capacity at provincial, national or international levels.

Spilstead district news items

by M. Fisher

Due to the fact this column was not printed in The Mercury last week, I will recap on the old news.

On April 7, a Woodbadge 1 training day was held at Spilstead Hall for leaders, group committee and any interested parents of Beavers, Cubs and Scouts who wished to attend. This training was very well attended with 19 members, some from as far away as Egerton, taking part. Six trainers, five of which were from Wild Rose District and one from Lacombe, gave some excellent advice on how to run Beaver colonies, Cub packs, Scout troops and group committees.

In the evening, the Spilstead Community League held its Western Roundup dance with an average crowd attending.

Over a year ago, Spilstead Sunday School decided they wanted to build a model church, complete with all the furnishings. On April 8, they unveiled their year-long endeavour. It will be left on display at the Hall for a time in order for as many people as possible to be able to see it.

The final bingo for the season was held on April 12. The decision as to whether or not more will be held in the fall, will be made by the Spilstead Community League executive during the summer.

The Spilstead Ladies Society have some charitable donations of $100 each to the Diabetes Foundation, the Heart Fund and the Cancer Society.

Registration for minor baseball will be held soon, so watch this column and the Hall bulletin board for times and dates.

This past Wednesday saw the ball diamond at the hall filled with boys and girls. A challenge match between the ladies and Scouts was taking place.

Easter is coming and with it holidays for the school children.

Happy Easter Spilstead!

At the Ladies' Club meeting last week, Maureen Bauman, D.H.E. with Beaver County brought members up to date with the right way to use a microwave oven, and how to use one to the best advantage. Arrangements were discussed for the annual international dinner, which will take place on May 12th.

The monthly Community Association meeting will be held on Thursday evening at 8 p.m., following the Playschool [illegible].

The Playschool benefited by $335 from the recent fund-raising activities, and it is hoped that this will be boosted by a matching grant from Strathcona County Planning is going ahead for the outdoor developments, and the playground nucleus is to be expanded to form a 'family park.' All interested people should attend a planning meeting at the hall on April 29th at 2 p.m., bringing a dish for the pot-luck supper which will follow. At the meeting, sub-groups will discuss different aspects of the park, such as a campfire and picnic table, a native trail, a sport-[illegible] and a children's [illegible] activity centre. Report from Parliament Hill from Hon. Don Mazankowski, P.C., M.P.

"The federal government is betraying western farmers by permitting a $4 billion drop in western rail investment", says Don Mazankowski, P.C. spokesman on transportation.

"Transport Canada officials appearing before the Transport Committee today confirmed that the railway investment will drop to $12.5 billion over the next ten years, a 38% reduction from previous commitments. This decrease should be matched by a corresponding reduction in freight rate payments by the producer under the Western Grain Transportation Act. Lower investment means fewer jobs will be created and service improvements will be delayed. The promised benefits for western Canada are quickly evaporating. Further evidence confirmed that freight rates will likely rise by 35% in the 1984/85 crop year."

"Tonnage shipped will rise to 33.4 million tonnes and, as a result of the 31.5 million tonne volume cap, the producers will pay a larger portion of the total cost than originally projected. All shipments of grain over the cap are paid for entirely by the producer and Pool representatives have indicated that increased shipments will raise the producers share an additional 5%."

"On the other hand, according to the Pools, the rate paid by the government will be reduced by approximately 7%, as a result of lower inflation."

"With the reduction in investment it is incomprehensible to me that producers should be paying more than anticipated while getting less in return," continued Mr. Mazankowski.

Mr. Mazankowski was further irritated by evidence that over $6.5 million will be spent to advertise and promote the Western Grain Transportation Act.

"This is a ludicrous waste of money, particularly when the ads contain misleading and false information, regarding the jobs and investment to be generated in western Canada. This money could be better spent on actual improvements to the rail system than on misleading propaganda to bolster the Minister of Transport", concluded Mr. Mazankowski.

It was hot on Sunday!

The mercury soared upwards to a record high before it levelled off at twenty-five above (seventy-seven degrees Farenheit) about mid-[illegible]

That temperature broke the established mark for April 15th which had been set back in 1949 and which was tied in 1981, when the old record had been nineteen degrees above zero

There were reports that Sunday was the warmest-ever day in the history of Alberta, breaking a record that had been set in 1906. Records maintained locally date back to the early 1900's when the first official record were kept.

It was possible that Monday could also have established a record temperature as predictions were that it would get to twenty-one above and if that happened, a mark set in 1962 would have fallen, by one [illegible]

The highest temperature ever recorded in this area for the month of April took place on April 30, 1939 when it soared to a balmy thirty-one degrees (eighty-nine the old way)

It has been warming up at night and after flirting with above zero temperatures for the past two weeks, the mercury finally did it on Sunday night when the overnight low was only five above

Record highs listed for the balance of the month range from nineteen to thirty-one degrees while record overnight lows are from a minus [illegible]

As I See It

by Dr. Walt Buck, M.L.A [illegible]

One of the most frequent complaints I receive from Albertans is the difficulty they encounter in communicating with this government. It is noteworthy that the Premier told those attending the Tory Convention in Calgary earlier this month that communication with Albertans is an important item.

Almost in the next breath, the Premier told the Legislature he would not consent to meet directly with the executive of the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, nor with any other group for that matter. He says Alberta organizations will have to be satisfied to meet with his "Caucus Committees". The Premier tells convention delegates that they must communicate, but appears to believe it's not necessary for him to do so!

I would again like to thank all of those who contacted me to support my Bill to repeal the 13% income tax levied on January 1, 1984. You are probably aware that government MLAs all voted in favour of retaining the tax, which shows they do not really speak for their constituents on that specific issue. How they can defend an unnecessary tax is beyond me!

Please contact me with your opinions, concerns or questions by phoning 427-2231 collect, or write to Room 214 Legislative Building, Edmonton. T5K 2B6.

Farm corner

The following information is supplied by R.J. Chernos a Department of Agriculture poultry specialist concerning the feeding of small poultry flocks

Every spring the Provincial Vet Labs and Poultry Branch officers receive numerous phone calls from small flock owners who are experiencing problems of one sort or another with their young birds. In the majority of cases these problems are related to an incomplete understanding of the nutritional requirements of the species of bird the owner is dealing with.

Let me cite an example. Quite often both broilers and turkeys will be delivered at the same time. The flock owner will notice a marked difference in the price of turkey and broiler feed and will sometimes opt for the cheaper broiler feed. This will be fed to both species with inevitably disastrous results.

Turkeys require 28% protein at the start and broilers 23%. The turkeys will undoubtedly develop leg problems and a host of other nutritional diseases. The owners have to feed them separately and with feed designed for that bird.

It is recommended that broilers be fed a commercial broiler starter for 3-4 weeks of age and then a home mix can be utilized. Usually the small flock owner is not terribly concerned about getting his birds ready to butcher in the shortest period of time and the least amount of feed. This can only be done by using commercial feed all the way through and ensuring that the birds are confined and adequate feed and water space are available, etc. etc. Most farmers have their own source of grain they would like to use and I would certainly encourage this but only after the three week starter period. Leg problems are the most common complaint and in many cases these can be minimized by "slowing" the birds down. Purchase chick grower supplement and follow the directions on the tag. This will allow the use of the farmers own grains and also allow the bird a chance to develop properly. About 10 days to two weeks before the flock is ready to butcher, switch to a finisher supplement. This will put a nice finish on the birds and ensure that withdrawal times for any medications are adhered to. The same program can be used for turkeys, only be sure to use "turkey" supplements and starters

Laying birds or pullets are a different story again. Be sure you do not feed these birds a broiler ration as they will become too fat and egg production will suffer as a result. Pullets that are too fat at the onset of lay are also prone to prolapsing and pick-outs. There are, once again, specially designed feeds for pullets and these are available at your local feed mills.

The proper feeding of all livestock is obviously very important and is a science in itself. If you should have any doubt as to what program you should follow, don't hesitate to contact your feed mill or myself. We would be only too pleased to try and help you out. I should add also that, should abnormal losses occur in your flock, please feel free to contact once again, myself, or the Provincial Veterinary Laboratory at Airdrie (phone [illegible])

Wind erosion is threat

by John C. Hermans

Section Head, Conservation and Development Branch, Alberta Agriculture

As spring approaches and farmers return to the land, we are reminded that, during the springs of 1981 and 1982, areas of central and southern Alberta experienced some of the worst wind erosion since the "Dirty Thirties". Most of it was associated with [illegible] fallowed fields, particularly those that had been overworked to keep [illegible] "black". And the potential for [illegible] erosion this year is just [illegible] serious. Dry soil conditions and very little snow cover have left our soils extremely vulnerable to [illegible]

With the approach of spring work, there are important factors that should be considered. One is that cultivating the land too far ahead of seeding may increase the potential for erosion and result in a needless loss of moisture. Some of the most erosive winds in central and southern Alberta occur in April and May. Another factor is that seedbeds should be prepared with implements that conserve as much crop residue as possible. A blade or wide sweep cultivator will leave most of the straw and stubble on the surface to protect the soil, while a double disc will bury more residue, pulverize the soil and leave it exposed to erosion.

The following emergency measures are recommended if drifting should start.

— Watch fields closely for spots that are prone to drifting, i.e. focal points. If the problem can be stopped there, it will prevent the drifting from spreading over the whole field. Potential trouble spots can be covered with a good layer of manure now.

— Chisel heavier textured or slightly frozen soils at right angles to the prevailing winds at a spacing of two to three feet to bring up clods.

— Ridge sandy and dry [illegible] right [illegible] to the prevailing winds. To do this use lister shovels or increase the pitch on [illegible] shovels at two to three foot spacings.

— Place straw bales in parallel rows about 30 feet apart. This practice should minimize erosion damage.

Additional information on emergency controls is available in the publication, "Wind Erosion and Its Control", (Agdex 573-4) or from your district agriculturist, agricultural fieldman or a member of Alberta Agriculture's conservation and development branch

Gardeners meet

The Tofield Garden Club held their April meeting at the home of Howard and Doris Brown with a good attendance

After the minutes and treasurers report were given, more memberships were paid

A letter from the Alberta Horticultural Association was read dealing with the classes they sponsor at the Fair. It was felt members could not include all the A.H.A. write-up in the Fair book because of printing costs.

A price list for day lilies was looked over with a chance to order.

A prize list was received from the Stoney Plain Horticultural Society annual flower and garden show to be held the last week in August.

An inquiry was made about renting the Garden Club arches. It was decided to rent them.

A float for Tofield Sports day, July 1st, was discussed.

Louise Kyle and Irene Warner served lunch while a social time was enjoyed. The next meet will be on June 6th

BY DALE ZOBELL

The treatment of seed is a management tool that can not only help protect your investment but can pay high dividends. Chemical treatment can give seedlings a head start by preventing or reducing damage from certain crop pests.

The three prairie provinces have a uniform seed treatment policy which recommends:

— Rye and flax should always be treated because they are very susceptible to seed decay.

— If smut was observed in a crop which will be used for seed the grain should be treated.

— When growing cereal varieties which are susceptible to smuts, and the presence of smut is uncertain, it may be wise to treat the seed every second or third year depending upon the susceptibility of the variety.

— Seed of resistant varieties and seed of susceptible varieties that are free of smut should not normally require treatment.

— Wireworms which attack all grain crops, and flea beetles which attack rape and mustard seedlings can be controlled by seed treatment with [illegible]

— Rapeseed should be treated with benomyl or carbathiin to control the seedborne phase of blackleg.

Liquid seed treatment formulations may come as a solution, suspension or emulsifiable concentrate. The Camrose and Bashaw seed cleaning plants are equipped to treat seed with liquid fungicides. Sling [illegible] are available for accurately metering liquid treatment on grain augers.

Farmers can also use powder formulations listed as dust or wettable powder. These can be mixed with seed in the drill box just before planting depending which treatment is necessary (fungicide, fungicide/insecticide, or insecticide).

For more information on seed treatment of cereal and oilseed crops for 1984 drop into your nearest Alberta Agriculture office and ask for publication 100/632. It has a lot of general and specific information and could prove helpful this spring.

Grasshoppers severe west of Camrose

Grasshopper infestations could be bad in Alberta this spring.

The province has experienced five serious grasshopper outbreaks since surveys were started back in 1932. They occurred in [illegible] and 1974. And survey and weather data that have been compiled at the federal research station in Lethbridge indicate that we may be heading into the sixth one this year.

Last year's weather pattern was apparently extremely favorable to grasshopper growth and reproduction. A warm, dry June enhanced the survival rate of hatching nymphs and promoted their growth. Then hot, dry weather in August provided favorable egg laying conditions, and a partial snow cover during the severe cold spell in November and December ensured that a high percentage of the grasshopper eggs survived.

What happens from now on will depend upon the weather. A warm, dry spring, combined with a high survival rate of the larger-than-normal number of eggs, would provide the conditions for a serious grasshopper outbreak.

On the other hand, the survival rate of grasshopper nymphs will be reduced, and their rate of growth retarded, if the spring turns out to be cool and wet. This latter situation would give crops a chance to get a head start. The fact that older plants are more able to withstand an onslaught of grasshoppers than young plants was demonstrated in the Peace River region last year when a severe local outbreak, which had been predicted, was alleviated by the arrival of moist weather.

No grasshopper problem is forecast for that area this year.

Similarly, severe grasshopper infestations were reduced in the Wainwright-Provost area by rain and disease. However, there were localized infestations, and a moderate to severe grasshopper hazard is expected in the area southeast of Wainwright, especially if the spring is dry. The high risk areas this year will be around Drumheller and in a triangle which is bordered by Fort Macleod, Claresholm and Lethbridge. Smaller infestations may occur near Edmonton and Wainwright in the north and near Warner in the south.

The Alberta grasshopper survey is conducted by Agriculture Canada personnel in cooperation with agricultural fieldmen. Last August grasshoppers were sampled on almost every 10 km of agricultural land, and the data obtained showed that the total area rated as "severe" (5-10 grasshoppers per m2) and very "severe" (more than 10 grasshoppers per m2) has remained at about 4 per cent of the total area surveyed. However, agricultural land which had a "moderate" rating (2.2-5 grasshoppers per m2) has increased from 19 per cent to 25 per cent, and the "light" infestation area has increased by approximately the same amount.

Dr. Ulf Soehngen, entomologist at the Alberta Horticultural Research Center in Brooks, urges farmers in areas which have been given a "moderate" or higher infestation rating to check their fields very carefully when the grasshoppers begin to hatch in mid to late May. He says if more than 15 grasshoppers are found per square metre in June, control measures may be required.

Current grasshopper control recommendations can be obtained from all district agriculturists.

Farmers need good records

by George [illegible]
Farm Business Management Branch
Alberta Agriculture

Farmers need all the facts and figures they can collect to improve their decision making efficiency and to reduce their production costs. How successful a manager will be in adjusting his operation in the years ahead will depend, to a large extent, upon the quality of his management.

Management has been referred to as the science and art of adjusting. Progressive farmers, who want to see their businesses prosper and grow, continuously adjust their operations to reflect changing conditions. The past few years have seen a series of major events, such as actual and threatened grain embargoes, the United States PIK Program, manifold increases in energy prices, high interest rates and other inflationary pressures, influencing a farmer's life and requiring constant adjustments in his operation. The years ahead will most likely also bring their share of surprises. To manage successfully, a farmer has to know his operation and he has to keep a variety of records to know the strong and weak points of his [illegible].

Farmers usually make widespread use of rules of thumb and average of representative data when working on their production plans. They often rely on production guidelines that someone else has deemed average. Even though many of these guidelines have been carefully selected from on-farm situations, farmers should still evaluate their use carefully.

Average, group, and consensus research data provide a level of performance against which a farmer can operate his own performance or set a goal that he would like to reach or surpass in a given amount of time. Often these data are used to estimate or calculate the cost of producing such things as a bushel of barley or a weaner pig. For somebody who is considering a new enterprise or who is starting to produce new goods, these data are quite useful. However relying on ready-made criteria can lead to management mistakes in [illegible] enterprises.

Each farm business is unique and has its own characteristic conditions that affect the performance of its crop and livestock production, which, in turn, will reflect the overall profitability of the farm. Hence, it is often less than adequate to rely on "average" data or "good" guesses when managing an operation. There is no real substitute for knowing the actual cost of production and profitability of individual enterprises. This means financial, as well as physical, records have to be kept and analyzed.

Many factors influence such things as labor use, machinery costs per tilled acre and feed costs per livestock product produced. The specific crops grown, the extent of summerfallowing; the production practices followed (for example, substituting chemicals for mechanized tillage); and the amount of reseeding, if necessary, are all factors which will affect labor use. And how well a farm's machinery complement fits the tilled acreage will influence the cost of raising a crop. Livestock producers have similar standards against which to measure their performance. For example:

– Non-feed costs per unit of livestock production sold
– Livestock returns per $100 of feed consumed

As [illegible] with the cost structure of the livestock enterprise, knowledge of variations in them is essential for realizing a profit from raising livestock or reducing losses during adverse times. Therefore, for sound and efficient management, production records are a valuable tool in a successful farming operation; but a tool [illegible] potential.

Production records give the physical performance of crop and livestock production. The number of details recorded should be in proportion to their intended use. There is considerable time and effort involved in keeping accurate records, and, as with many other chores on a farm, additional effort should be put into keeping them only as long as the expected benefits outweigh the costs in time or money of producing the information.

Records that are worth the most are those that are used the most. A farmer can get a considerable amount of information relating to production as well as to the overall productivity of his livestock and crop production by consulting his inventory and his income and expense accounts if these have been kept in sufficient detail.

The key to the success of any good record system is the daily recording of all essential information. This daily recording should be in the form of a documentation of the important things that happened that day. And it should be recorded in a format that allows for rapid and easy summarization at frequent intervals.

Therefore, a farm manager must tailor his record keeping system to his own particular needs and circumstances so that it is as simple as possible, but still satisfies all his information requirements. Such a system will allow him or a professional to carry out an accurate farm business analysis of the records. The analysis will enable him to gain valuable insights into his business. Without it, his record function would be little more than accounting for tax purposes.

In the final analysis, a farmer must know the cost structure of his farming operation if he is to make sound business decisions.

An Alberta Agriculture publication entitled "A Guide To Physical Record Keeping Systems For Alberta Farmers", (Agdex 818-5), discusses a variety of record keeping systems which are currently available for recording physical data from many farm enterprises. Copies of the publication are available from district agriculturists, the Farm Business Management Branch, Box 2000, Olds, Alberta T0M 1P0 and by writing to the Publications Office, J G O'Donoghue Building, 7000-113 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, T6H 5T6.

The following article on insecticide impregnated eartags was taken from the April 9 issue of Agri-News.

Three Insecticide Eartags Now Available to Cattlemen

Alberta cattlemen now have three types of insecticide-impregnated eartags to choose from when protecting their cattle against hornflies this summer.

The newest tag, Atroban, has just been registered for hornfly control on cattle. It is manufactured by the Burroughs Wellcome Company (Cooper).

Debantic came on the market in Canada for the first time last year. It is manufactured by Diamond Shamrock.

Bovaid has been used to protect cattle against hornflies since the summer of 1981 and apparently provides excellent control. It is manufactured by Cieba Giegy.

Dr. Ali Khan, Alberta Agriculture's livestock pest control specialist, reports that all three types of eartags are slow insecticide-releasing devices, and that they will protect cattle against hornflies during the whole pasture season.

He points out that one of the main advantages of insecticide-impregnated eartags, compared with other methods of hornfly control, is that the cattle can be slaughtered without a wait period. Other advantages are that the tags can be used on both beef and dairy cattle, and that they are easy to apply. In fact, they are applied in exactly the same way that Allflex identification eartags are applied.

Dr. Khan says that studies which have been conducted in Alberta and in other parts of Canada have shown that hornfly populations can be reduced by as much as 90 per cent in herds where all the cattle are wearing insecticide-impregnated eartags.

Further information on the three types of eartags can be obtained from district agriculturists, agricultural fieldmen and Dr. Khan at 427-8911 in Edmonton.

Are Our Cereal Crops Headed For Trouble?

Over the past few years, we have noticed an increasing number of cereal fields infected with diseases such as smut, glume blotch, root rot, net blotch, etc. Farmers now recognize the importance of treating canola seed to protect against fleabeetles and seedling diseases but many have forgotten about treating cereals. Others, in an attempt to cut expenses, have decided not to treat cereal seed. The result has been an increasing buildup of disease in the area. This increase has certainly been helped along by the particular weather conditions of the past few years.

It is true that seed treatment is not a complete "cure-all" for many of these diseases. However, using uninfected seed and treating that seed will certainly help to reduce the problem. Some newer varieties also exhibit increased resistance to some of these diseases.

This week's keeping in touch column is the reprint of a statement by Crowfoot Member of Parliament, Arnold Malone, under Statements Pursuant to Standing Order 21, delivered in the House of Commons on Wednesday, April 11th.

Agriculture

Input Costs of Farmers — Criticism of Government Policies

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, Canada's food producers are travelling down the road toward dire straits. Farm bankruptcies have increased by 200 per cent in the past five years. Net farm income as a ratio of gross income has declined continuously from 1965. Farm operating expenses have increased 115 per cent between 1975 and 1982. They are projected to increase another 100 per cent by 1986, while farm commodity prices decline.

It is against that background that the federal Government refuses to pay farmers nearly $1 billion of their own money in the Western Grain Stabilization Fund. It is in light of these devastating economic facts that Governments have caused farm fuels to be taxed 75 per cent more than production costs. It is against these hard economic realities that the federal Government has now increased the long-term interest rates of the Farm Credit Corporation to a devastating 15 per cent. Farmers everywhere know the impact of these facts.

Today I appeal to urban Canada to rise up in anger against the federal Government. Your food security is threatened, and you are dangerously close to losing your world price advantage on low-cost foods. All Canadians must hear the message. The business of food production is seriously threatened.

A [illegible] Easter Meal

When planning your Easter meal this year – think Spring! It's time to serve up fresh vegetable salads and light fruit desserts.

I've noticed fresh spinach in stores recently. Spinach salad is easy to make and delicious. I just wash and tear up the leaves, add sliced fresh mushrooms and homemade bacon bits. Top the salad with chopped hard-boiled egg. Serve with an oil and vinegar dressing – or your favorite.

Scalloped potatoes and ham could be served with the spinach for a traditional [illegible].

There are many cuts of ham available, with a confusing variety of names. Ham is usually labelled "Cook Before Eating" or "Ready to Eat". "Cook Before Eating" hams need to be roasted to an internal temperature of 160°F. "Ready to Eat" or "fully cooked" hams may be served cold, as is, but they will taste and look better if heated to an internal temperature of 140°F and glazed during the latter part of cooking.

Ham does not cook or heat well in the microwave oven. Because of the high salt content, the ham tends to dry out before it is cooked.

Ever had your scalloped potatoes curdle on you? Heating the milk before pouring it over the potatoes will prevent curdling.

Another easy method of making scalloped potatoes is to layer sliced potatoes and onions in a casserole. Pour over cream of mushroom soup that has been diluted with milk, about half and half. It is very tasty and the sauce will never curdle.

Fresh strawberries are now available, for an easy dessert making. An elegant but easy way to serve strawberries is to leave the green stems on, then dip the bottom half of the berry in melted semi-sweet chocolate. Served with coffee or tea, they are a delightful way to end the Easter meal.

Hope you have a peaceful and happy Easter celebration!

Control rodents' damage

Although fall is the recommended time for preventing winter rodent damage to nursery stock, ornamentals and fruit trees, there are things that can be done during the winter to control it.

Mice, rabbits and porcupines are the main causes of winter damage because they remain active throughout the cold [illegible] and require a large [illegible] to maintain their energy level.

[illegible] and the white-footed mouse are the [illegible] species of mouse that are most often responsible for damage to nursery stock as well as to [illegible], fruit and [illegible] trees. [illegible] the snow provides them with a protected environment, they remain active regardless of the temperature and other weather conditions. They girdle the [illegible] of young trees and shrubs, they eat the rootlets and they gnaw the [illegible] roots, any of which can [illegible] kill the trees.

The snowshoe hare and the white-tailed Prairie hare periodically cause severe damage to both fruit and shelterbelt trees, and they sometimes cause serious losses of nursery stocks. Heavy losses usually coincide with years when the rabbit population is at its peak, and the damage results from the debarking of tree trunks and branches and from the clipping off of terminal and lateral shoots as the snow becomes deeper.

Porcupines usually attack the upper trunk and branches of larger trees, but they will also damage seedlings and other horticultural plants like raspberry canes. They may partially or completely debark or girdle the branches [illegible] and coniferous trees.

R.C. Acorn, Alberta Agriculture's regional supervisor of vertebrate pest control in Barrhead, suggests the following control measures for people who did not take any precautions last fall against winter rodent damage and who are now experiencing problems.

He recommends trampling the snow down around and next to trees and shrubs that are being attacked by mice. He also says that in cases where the problem is severe, it may be a good idea to use bait stations made out of small tin cans that are open at one end. Put several ounces of an anticoagulant bait, available from most hardware and drug stores, in each can and squeeze the open end down so that it leaves an opening of about 1.5 cm. Then carefully place the cans on their sides in the area where the damage is occurring, and cover them with some straw to make them more attractive to the mice.

When rabbits are causing the damage, one way to deal with the problem is to harrass them over several days with one or more dogs. Persistent harrassment will often cause the rabbits to leave the area. An alternative would be to hunt them with a .22 calibre rifle, or a shot gun. A 0.177 calibre pellet gun is recommended for rabbit problems on acreages. When only a few rabbits are involved, they can be removed by using snares on their runways.

When porcupines are damaging trees or shrubs they can usually be found within a short distance of the damage. A tell-tale trail can be seen and followed to their den site. Den sites are often located under piles of brush, under [illegible] or in [illegible] dark, [illegible] places. When found the animal can be humanely disposed of with a .22 calibre rifle. It is also possible to trap a porcupine at the damage site with a No. 2 or No 3 leg-hold trap. The trap should be placed on the porcupine's trail and it should be properly secured to prevent a trapped animal from escaping with the trap attached to its leg. Anyone who uses a trap should check it daily, preferably in the mornings. Also, he must obtain a resident trapping license or a damage permit from his local fish and wildlife office.

Mr Acorn says it is much more efficient and humane to prevent winter rodent damage by taking the proper precautions in the fall than to have to control it when it is in progress.

Wild oat control earns major reward

Wild oats are one of the most troublesome weeds to grain producers in western Canada. According to Dr. J.H. Hunter, Regina Agriculture Canada Research Station, provincial surveys indicate 56% of Alberta fields, 70% of Saskatchewan fields and 73% of Manitoba fields are infested with wild oats at an average density of 14 to 19 wild oat plants per square meter. Although wild oats can cause economic losses through a number of added costs including dockage, the greatest single cause of losses is reduced crop yields due to direct competition. Studies have indicated that yield reductions of 22% in wheat, 14% in barley, 15% in canola and 35% in flax may occur if wild oats emerge at the same time as the crop and are not removed until 30 days later (C. Bubar, Agriculture Canada, Regina Research Station).

Wild oats are obviously strong competitors with most crops, and there are several reasons for this. Wild oats are prolific seed producers. A single wild oat plant can produce 500 seeds, reports Hunter. The seeds frequently shatter and fall to the soil surface before the crop is harvested. Once on the ground, the awns of the seed twist into the ground as the seed becomes wet, and this effectively imbeds the seed into the soil. Once in the soil, the seed may lie dormant for as long as seven years, waiting for the right combination of conditions to germinate. As well, the wild oat plant possesses an extensive root system which allows the weed to compete effectively for moisture with other plants.

The persistence of the wild oat plant makes it a difficult weed to subdue. Herbicides for wild oat control have been in use since the early 1960s, with approximately a dozen chemicals now available for use on virtually all crops. H.W. Leggett of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association has estimated that about one third of the land devoted to the six major crops in Western Canada is now sprayed with a wild oat chemical.

Herbicides should be carefully applied to maximize wild oat control. In general the effectiveness of the wild oat herbicide is reduced when applied as a tank mixture with herbicides for broad-leaf weed control. Such antagonism can be avoided by applying the two types of herbicides at least four days apart.

Wild oat herbicides are most effective at a particular stage of plant development, and the recommendations for application should be followed. There is also a recommended minimum amount of time between spraying and rainfall that should be observed if possible.

Beyond the use of herbicides, there are several management practices that can be used to help minimize wild oat populations. Weed free seed should be a major component in any wild oat control program. The few extra dollars spent on weedless seed will be dollars well spent. Depth of seeding should be considered in establishing a competitive crop. Shallow seeding results in more rapid germination and emergence and the crop will then be more competitive with wild oats. Fall-seeded crops can be used to advantage to reduce wild oat stands. Fall seeded crops begin growth early in the spring and tend to smother the wild oats which germinate later. For the same reason increasing the seeding rate of cereal crops reduces competition by wild oats. Delayed seeding using an early maturing crop is another strategy for control. The wild oats which germinate can then be controlled through early spring cultivation. However, this procedure may contribute to the drying of the seedbed or to the breakdown in the soil surface structure and may result in reduced yields or lower grades arising from the late seeded crops. The process of delayed seeding must therefore be used with care. The combination of chemical programmes and sound cultural methods is the most effective way to control wild oats.

Cable tv nears

by Joan Murray

Cable television service is imminent for Tofield in the very near future.

Installation of hook-ups is scheduled to start on June 15th.

Rural Satellite Television Cable Company (RSTV) has received final approval of a rate structure for the Town of Tofield. A deposit of $20 will be collected by a local community service club that will be canvassing door-to-door, for subscribers.

Dana Quigley, marketing manager for RSTV, said they are looking at Tofield as a "kind of showcase situation" that will be an example of RSTV's reliability.

A previous cable company had promised service in several areas in Alberta but did not produce nor did they return any monies collected. RSTV hopes to waylay any misgivings created by this dilemma with having deposit money placed in trust with the local service club until cable service begins.

RSTV has the support of Town Council but, needs at least 60% of the houses in Tofield signed up for service before it is possible to implement service.

If there were to be a problem with getting service into this area, Quigley has given his assurance that the deposit money would be returned to subscribers by the service club and the club would be paid for their work done on behalf of RSTV.

He emphasized the fact that RSTV is a reliable company and their policy is to hire only reputable service people for their operation. QCTV from Edmonton will be doing installations.

Because the stations are picked up on special antennaes, the resulting picture is "crystal clear" and according to Quigley, it is of a better quality than that which is now received by Edmonton residents.

RSTV is a division of Saskatoon Telecable in Saskatchewan and is better known it's more than 50,000 subscribers in Northern Alberta, they have a fully qualified main serviceman and sales representative in the Tofield area.

The satellite receiving dish will be located at the power hill station in the Belvedere area.

Ball clinic set

A ladies' fastball clinic has been scheduled for Ryley.

The clinic will be held at the Ryley Sportsgrounds on Thursday, starting at ten o'clock in the morning.

Three members of the Camden national senior ladies' fastball team will be on hand as instructors.

The trio, Brenda Staniforth, Donna Veale and Chris Jervais, are regular members of the Lashburn Bluebirds and last year, were named to the country's national women's team.

The clinic is open to all interested ladies and has been described as a good opportunity for players to improve and develop their skills.

The clinic is being held under the sponsorship of the Ryley Blazers, gold medal winners in the 1983 Alberta Summer Games.

Registrations for the clinic may be made by calling 663-2216.

Rodeo plans set

by Joan murray

May 26th and 27th is the date set for the second annual Sodbuster Rodeo in Tofield and preparations are well underway

If this event follows true to form, it should attract some pretty top-notch rodeo riders again this year.

The stock will be provided by Les Trach Rodeo Company, which is well known for having some of the very best stock in the business.

The six queen contestants are helping to promote the forthcoming event by selling tickets for cash prizes

The ticket sales make up 40 percent of the points required when they are being judged. Horsemanship makes up another 40 percent and congeniality make up the balance.

The girls will be present at the May 11th Farmers Market to judge the Sodbuster Rodeo poster contest entries and will also be selling advance dance tickets. The dance is scheduled for the Saturday

The crowning of the Tofield Rodeo Queen is a major event on the calendar, and will take place during intermission on May 27th. Winning cash prize tickets will be drawn at this time as well Rodeo events will feature calf roping, ladies' barrel racing, bareback riding, steer wrestling, bull riding, junior steer riding, saddle bronc riding, junior barrel racing, team roping and a novelty event, Mutton Bustin.

Other events planned are a beer garden, barbecue and a pancake breakfast.

Service groups and clubs will be running concession booths, directing traffic and supervising where required.

The rodeo clown will be "Hi-ski" Wanchuk of St. Paul.

Rodeo chairman for 1984 is Glen Jones and secretary is Belinda Jones. The Agricultural Society is sponsoring the event again this year.

Show starts Saturday

The Tofield Gun Club's sixth annual hobby show is scheduled for the coming weekend.

The major event will take place in the Tofield Arena on Saturday and Sunday.

Doors will open at ten o'clock each morning and remain open until eight o'clock on Saturday night and the event will come to an end at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Approximately one hundred different displays were on show last year and this number is expected to increase this weekend.

Organizers are hoping to have more than one thousand people tour the premises on the two days which attracted 850 people last year.

Trophies for the best displays will be offered.

On display will be antiques, arts, crafts, guns, cartridges, glass, jewellery and collectables

People attending the two-day event will be able to buy, sell or trade for items on display.

The gun club has arranged for around the clock security.

Additional information or, to book tables, may be obtained by calling 663-3613 or [illegible]

Negotiations stop

Negotiation discussions between Elk Island Regional [illegible] Authorities Association and the Alberta Teachers Association broke off on Thursday when an impasse was reached.

Several items are still outstanding but, the main area of disagreement appears to be compensation

The teachers are not receptive to a Board offer of "no increase"

Jurisdictions involved include Counties of Beaver, Flagstaff, Lamont, Provost School Division No. 33 and Wainwright School Division No. 35.

Board formed

by Joan Murray

At an organizational meeting of the Regional Landfill Authorities Board in Ryley on March 22nd, an agreement between the municipalities of Tofield, Ryley, Holden and Viking and the County of Beaver No 9 was signed to provide for a regional landfill operation in the County of Beaver.

The RLAB is in the process of getting a development permit issued for the landfill site

Although it has not yet been confirmed, it looks like Ryley will be the site location. Victor Istace, secretary-treasurer of the RLA Board, said that the final decision will be made at the next meeting.

The official executive body for the RLAB was formed at the meeting and are chairman, Bob Cross; vice-chairman, Reuben Howeland; secretary-treasurer, Victor Istace

Municipal representatives and their alternates are Tofield, Ed Regher and Hans Christensen; Ryley, Bob Cross and Larry Andrukow; Holden, Joe Fornal and Dennis Danyluk; Viking, Bob Evans and Jennie Bird.

Representatives for the County of Beaver are Reuben Howeland and Fred Meyer with Dan Ronaghan and Gordon Maxwell as alternates.

Still on the books

Canadians have become accustomed over recent weeks and months to hear claims of owing certain groups, such as Indian bands who never formally ceded their lands, or the Japanese Canadians who were dispossessed of their lands and properties, robbed, interned and resettled during World War II. Our sympathies are with both.

But we were appalled this week to learn that the Canadian government never completed its undertaking to Canadian soldiers who were taken prisoners of war by the Japanese during World War II, many of them forced to serve in Japanese slave labor camps.

Shortly after the war, Canada undertook to pay each of these men $2.50 per day for each day of their captivity, the money to be paid out of Japanese war assets.

But the war assets fund ran out when only $1.50 of that figure had been paid, leaving $1.00 per day owing ever since 1951.

We can sort of understand some hesitation to accept a nebulous figure for damages suffered by the Japanese Canadians on the West Coast, or seemingly endless Indian groups, even if we don't agree with that hesitation.

But it seems utterly shocking that our government would turn its back on several thousand Veterans using a trumped up excuse that the funds had run out. We have watched Mr. Trudeau find funds to help almost every other nation on earth . . . why can't we find funds to discharge obligations honestly acquired here at home? We don't by any means intend to blame only Mr. Trudeau . . . he's only been prime minister for sixteen years, and the debt goes back twice that long.

The veterans point out there's only $1,500,000 on the books, and surely that's only a trifle the way Ottawa figures. More realistically, it should be far higher than that. If any of us, even including those same veterans, owed tax money to Ottawa for 33 years, there would be interest added to interest, such that the balance we would owe would come out seven or eight times the original debt.

These men were captured while trying to secure freedom for Canada . . . more than forty years ago. Today they're at least 60 years old. Some of them are no longer with us. Few, indeed, are not scarred forever by their period of slavery. For the rest of us.

Surely, while some of them are still living, this debt should be paid. Then we can get on to do something about those other debts . . . they may not show up on any legal document, but Canada has a definite moral obligation it should accept. We weren't around to see the way the Indians were forced into reservations, and otherwise stripped of their lands, but we definitely did see Canada's treatment of hundreds of citizens in British Columbia in 1942, shortly after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor.

Most of us would be revolted if Canadians of Russian origin were rounded up and imprisoned, because of the Cold War. Or if German, or Italian, or Ukrainian heritage Canadians were suddenly dispossessed. But that's what Canada did to its Japanese, and we personally saw hundreds of them interned in a portion of Hastings Park in Vancouver. One day they had owned businesses, homes, buildings, fishing boats, bank accounts. The next they owned nothing, and they were on their way to resettlement areas, areas such as Taber and the sugar beet fields. Their assets became scandalous bargains for a few, those with position, with power, with connections.

Their only crime lay in being descended from Japanese.

Canada treated them shamefully. We owe them too.

Ridiculous

The provincial government recently received a petition with 3,500 names urging them to settle the Alberta Government Telephones controversy with Edmonton Telephones by swift, legislative action, pre-empting the entire field.

The fact the petition centers around two former very senior officials, one a vice president of AGT, makes the whole operation ridiculous.

There is a definite solution to the problem, one which changes from time to time as technology and investment changes, but expropriation, or compulsory agreement, should not be considered the only answer.

Indeed, technology is threatening both AGT and ET, and it may not be too long before they have to reach agreement in a common effort to hold the place they have gained. With satellites increasingly filling the skies, with broadcast capability expanding exponentially, with integrated circuits, or chips, expanding their capacities by light years, the [illegible] tolls may only be academic a short time from now.

The proper course would be to agree on principles which recognize dual ownership, which recognize the interests of the two parties, and which best meet the principle of offering the best service to the greatest number of people. After all it's in Edmonton's interests, just as it is in AGT's, to see better and better telephone capacity in the most remote hamlet. If rural people can't reach Edmonton business firms by Zero-plus, by 800 plus, by 1 plus or some other system, Mayor Decore will have more to worry about than a few million bucks worth of tolls.

In the dark ages, preceding all of this government generosity with taxpayers money, people got together and worked hard to raise funds to help improve their communities and their lot in life. They enjoyed doing it and their greatest reward was that of being able to say, "We did it ourselves."

This is one of the most affluent areas of our country, yet every week we hear of government handouts to individuals and organizations for one purpose or another even though Canada and Alberta are deeply in debt, with many of our young people unemployed.

I do not question the need for governments to take care of the needy and the helpless or to help provide essential services in the community, but I [illegible] continuing "Big Brother" aid to those who are not in these categories. I firmly believe that it is not the responsibility of governments to do for us [illegible] ourselves and it is high time we tell this to our representatives.

A lot of Canadians seem to believe that government handouts are free and have no strings attached but that is seldom true. In the long run we usually lose something that is very difficult to recover. The loss of individual initiative and personal freedom is something to be concerned about.

Perhaps you will print this little tale, from the Network of Patriotic Letter Writers, for your readers to think about. The title is "Doubt That Handout".

Years ago, in the great Horseshoe Bend down the river there lived a herd of wild hogs. Where they came from no one knew but they survived floods, droughts, fires and freezes. [illegible]

One day a man came by the country store on the river road and asked the wereabouts of the wild hogs. He drove a one horse wagon, had an axe, some quilts, a lantern, some corn and a single-barrel shotgun. He was a slender, slow moving, patient man. He chewed his tobacco deliberately and spat very seldom.

Several months later he came back to the store and asked for help to bring out the wild hogs. He said he had them in a pen.

Bewildered farmers, dubious hunters and storekeepers gathered at the Horseshoe Bend pen to view the captive hogs.

How in the world did you do it? They wanted to know.

"It was very simple," said the hog catcher. "First I put out some corn. For three weeks they wouldn't eat it. Then some of the young 'uns grabbed an ear and ran off in the thicket. Soon they was all eating it. Then I commenced building a pen around the corn, a little higher each day. When I noticed that they had stopped grubbing for acorns and roots, I built the trap door."

"Naturally," said the patient man, "they raised quite a ruckus when they seen they was trapped, but I can pen any animal on the face of the earth if I can just git him to depend on me for a free hand-out."

Yours truly,

Nominations sought

Alberta's minister of agriculture, LeRoy Fjordbotten, has announced that nominations for the Alberta Agriculture Hall of Fame are now being accepted.

Induction into the hall of fame recognizes Albertans who have made an outstanding contribution to agriculture and the rural community, and, according to Mr Fjordbotten it represents "the highest honor Alberta Agriculture can bestow on an [illegible]".

The hall of fame was established in 1951 and is currently comprised of 61 distinguished members. Any Albertan who displays devoted [illegible] the development [illegible] of the local, [illegible] national and international [illegible] may be eligible [illegible] given to individuals directly involved in agricultural production, but agricultural business people, professional agrologists and rural community workers will also be [illegible]

Individuals chosen for induction into the hall of fame will be honored with a formal banquet and awards presentation ceremony. This event, to be held in March 1985, traditionally marks the start of Alberta's Agriculture Week celebrations.

After the ceremony, portraits and histories of the inductees for 1984 will be added to the Agriculture Hall of Fame display on the main floor of Alberta Agriculture's J.G. O'Donoghue Building in Edmonton.

Nomination forms for 1984 are available through the department's district offices throughout the province or, they may be obtained by writing to Alberta Agriculture Hall of Fame, J.G. O'Donoghue Building, 7000-113 Street, Edmonton T6H 5T6.

The deadline for receipt of nominations is June 30.

[illegible] didn't even [illegible] our youngest [illegible] been tying his laces for years, but perhaps that is because the child only ties them occasionally, like when he's told to or after tripping over them and skinning his face on the pavement. And then there was the time when I bought that pair of bowling shoes. In order to slide on the proper foot it was necessary for me to learn how to curve the ball after tossing it over my shoulder. But that wasn't a problem and it certainly made our team a hit.

I did a test, called a torque test, with my two sons (one who is and one who isn't), to determine whether any of us really are. All that was necessary was that we each draw a circle with each hand. Those drawing clockwise supposedly are while those drawing counter-clockwise aren't. I say 'supposedly' because my youngest son, who never has been, made counter-clockwise circles, but my other son, more of one than any of us, made one in each direction. I made both mine counter-clockwise and I've been one for more years than I care to tell. But according to that test, I'm not. And I don't know what it makes my son -- undecided? I know that there are exceptions to every rule, but one out of three is not a good [illegible]

But I want you to know that we aren't awkward, weird or special. Like Popeye, "we am what we am". Ask any of us and we'll tell you that lefties and southpaws are quite comfortable using the hand we are meant to. If the pen were in the other hand, so would you be. Honest.

Chinese present trade show

Rhonda Mok

At least 41,000 Alberta students will be attending the Great Trade Show and Cultural Exhibition of China which is currently underway in Edmonton.

And if Rhonda Mok has her way, most residents in Central and Northern Alberta will also attend.

Mok is the official hostess for the major international event and in that capacity, has been visiting many towns and cities in an effort to encourage more Albertans to attend.

During promotional work and acting as a hostess is somewhat different for Mok whose usual job is that of a senior coloring consultant with the Edmonton Convention Centre.

The month-long engagement in Edmonton is the People's Republic of China's only visit to North America in 1984, although it is expected that similar events will be held in future years in other Canadian centers as well as the USA.

In conjunction with the trade show and cultural exhibition, the Chinese are also presenting the Great Circus of China.

The trade show, cultural exhibition and circus opened to the public last week and will go every day up to and including May 5th.

While the other two events are being staged only in Edmonton, the circus will go on to visit Montreal, Toronto, Halifax, Quebec City and Moncton.

The trade show is being staged in an effort to increase Canadian awareness of what the Chinese have to offer and increase commerce between China and Canada.

At the present time, the People's Republic of China buys large quantities of goods from Canada but, this country does not buy Chinese goods in the same amounts.

On exhibit will be arts, crafts, light industrial products, textiles, food-stuffs, native produce and a wide variety of other products, all of which are for sale during the trade show.

The Tofield Hospital Auxiliary special projects group is looking for any youth groups (Beavers, Cubs, etc.) interested in creating small tray favours for hospital patients. These favours are placed monthly on dinner trays as a treat and sign of caring. Please contact Cory Sutton (662-3984) or drop your ideas and suggestions into the drop box at Owl Value Drugmart.

It has been calculated that 3,300 volunteer hours have been collected up to September, 1983.

Pitch-in and Keep Canada Beautiful

Record high set

Sun-bathing weather is not really that usual in April in this part of the province.

But, for a second straight weekend, some people were out in brief attire looking to get a start on an early tan.

While it was warm, it didn't reach the record high levels of the previous week.

As was reported in last week's edition of The Canadian, a record high had been set on April 15th when the mercury climbed to twenty-five degrees above.

It was even warmer the next day when it soared to twenty-six degrees above, also a record.

The previous high for April 16th had been twenty-one above with that mark having been recorded in 1952.

The average (record) high for April is twenty-three above and the warmest ever day in the month took place on April 30, 1980 when it got to 31 above.

Temperatures were above normal in May of last year with the result that many farmers took advantage of the warm weather and a goodly number began seeding operations in the first week of the month.

Unfortunately, the early warm weather was followed by hail, rain, snow and a temperature drop which resulted in a lack of germination and many fields had to be reseeded.

The average (record) high for May is twenty-five above with the hottest day taking place on May 30, 1936 when it got to thirty-three above.

It can be cool in May during the night hours as the average (record) low for that is six degrees below zero with the coolest day being on the first day of the month in 1984 when it dropped to a minus twelve.

Will that be cash or charge? These common words can mean the difference between financial security and [illegible].

Managing credit wisely is part four of the five-part series Introduction to Budgeting. A work-at-home package "The Money Kit" is available at no charge by calling 343-5241 or by dropping into The Camrose Canadian office.

It's easy to get caught in the credit system, and we're encouraged to do it. Pay the minimum monthly balance! Get those things you want now with a loan! Why wait when you can borrow?

It sounds wonderful, but there is a cost involved because you are renting money. The rent paid will depend on who is lending, who is borrowing and what is purchased. Shopping around for the best loan is vital.

Before considering credit you should estimate your cost of living. Your ability — that's your monthly take-home pay minus your monthly expenses — will tell you the maximum you can afford for payments. Remember that using the maximum will leave little or nothing for savings, goals or emergencies. Be sure you've accounted for your needs in these areas before you commit yourself to credit payments.

One family looked at the interest charges they had paid on credit card balances for one year. The total was $1,000. They were astounded as they still owed money on the cards. This exercise meant a sharp review of their budget and credit card statements to see what they were using their cards for.

The opportunity cost of credit is often forgotten. Credit lets you use items before paying for them. However, the interest charges could have been used to buy other items. The same young couple speculated about what they could have purchased with the $1,000.

Their biggest disappointment was the revelation that most of the credit card bills were for miscellaneous items, usually impulse purchases. Using credit cards for impulse purchases can be an invitation to disaster.

Credit card balances should be paid in full when due. If expenses are planned the money should be available from the existing budget categories. If you are constantly running a balance on your credit card, perhaps it is time to figure out your cost of living. You may find that you are overspending your income by the amount of the balance.

Consider the costs. If it will take more than two months to pay for the credit card purchase consider a lender loan. Loans aren't always bad but they must be thought out and payments must fit your budget and lifestyle. For some people, the purchase is important and they are willing to cut spending in other areas.

Shopping around for the best interest rate can save hundreds of dollars on the total cost of the purchase. Shortening the term of the loan will also save money. The $4,000 loan at 16 per cent interest taken over five years will cost $5,772, over three years $5,027. That means by paying $43.42 a month more for the shorter term, you would save $745.

Credit problems and habits can start early. Children pick up their parents' attitudes about credit. It's easy for them to get the impression that plastics are easy money. Explaining carefully about why the card was used rather than cash or cheque and how the credit system works, will prevent problems in the future.

Credit card use with teens is common. Often they have their own cards or signing privileges on their parents' cards. It is important that the teens be responsible for their debts and spending.

There are several credit tip sheets included in "The Money Kit". These can be ordered separately if you wish. Contact the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs at 343-5241 and ask for the credit tip sheets.

POTASSIUM

Potassium Plays Many Roles

Potassium (K) is essential for plant growth, but its exact function in plants is not well understood. Unlike nitrogen and phosphate potassium does not form organic compounds in the plant. However, K is a very important constituent of cell sap where its primary purpose seems to be associated with plant metabolism. For example, it is essential for plant photosynthesis, respiration and protein synthesis. It's also important in transportation of other nutrients, formation of fruit and seeds, resistance to disease, and in activating and controlling many enzymatic reactions that occur within plants.

WHY USE POTASSIUM ? 0 - 0 - 60

1. Encourages root growth and increases resistance to disease.
2. Produces larger, more uniformly distributed xylem vessels throughout the root system.
3. Increases size and quality of fruit and grains, is essential for high quality forage crops.
4. Prevents grain lodging, stiffens the straw.
5. Pumper kernals, more weight per bushel.

Plan your garden

A well planned vegetable garden plot of about 30 x 30 feet can supply an average family with enough garden produce for the whole summer and provide enough for preserving as well.

Alberta Agriculture's district home economist at Airdrie, Debbie Brekke, suggests that home gardeners, especially those who will be planting their first garden this year, make a sketch of the area they plan to plant. Then when planning where the various types of vegetables will go, consider their growth patterns to make sure that those that grow tall will not overshadow those that are low-growing. In a plot that has previously been planted to vegetables you should take into consideration soil moisture, crop rotations and insect problems. Ms. Brekke recommends that first-time vegetable gardeners keep the area small. As she says, "A small, well tended garden certainly beats a big weed patch!"

The next step is to choose your seeds. Since not all vegetables varieties grow well in Alberta, it is a good idea to consult the "Alberta Horticultural Guide" (Agdex 200/01) for recommended varieties. It can be obtained from any district agriculturist's office or by writing to the Publications Office, Alberta Agriculture, 7000-113 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, T6H 5T6.

When buying your seed, only buy enough of each type of vegetable for this year's use because the germination rate of vegetable seed declines rapidly with age. "If you plan to freeze or can your vegetables", says Ms. Brekke, "be sure it states on the package you choose that the variety is recommended for freezing or canning." She points out that some seed catalogues list more than 20 varieties of beans, but not even half of them are recommended for freezing or canning.

There is a saving when home grown vegetables are properly preserved, but who can put a dollar value on the home grown flavor, quality and convenience? According to Ms. Brekke, some district home economists are working on projects to establish the actual dollar value of home grown produce. She says that the main costs involved in growing one's own vegetables are the investment in equipment and the time. However, it is time well spent for those who enjoy gardening. In fact, gardening can be a hobby that pays!

Land base is important

Agriculture built our province, sustains it and is our resource for the future. Despite the growth of other industries, agriculture is still vitally important to us all. Can we maintain or expand our agriculture production in the future? That's the question posed by Helmut Entrup, Farmers' Advocate of Alberta.

Throughout Alberta, land is being lost to non-agriculture uses and its quality is deteriorating. The land that is available for agriculture is of a lower quality than the land now farmed, and it costs more to grow crops on poor soil. How can agriculture remain a competitive food producing industry if our costs, as they relate to production, rise excessively?

These questions have prompted the government to set up a special committee to hold public hearings about food producing lands. Specifically, these hearings will be on expanding and maintaining the quality of agriculture's land base in Alberta. They will consider the impact of urban and industrial expansion, powerlines, roads and airports. Farming practices, like summerfallowing and the use of fertilizers and chemicals, will be scrutinized, and agricultural research and methods to increase production will be investigated.

You can and should have an input because you may make the difference. Positive suggestions on how our land base can be preserved, enlarged and properly utilized, with the acknowledgement that other segments of our society also have the right as user groups, should be submitted to the committee. This fall (after Thanksgiving Day) 16 well advertised hearings will be held in Alberta to receive input from both individuals and groups.

Farmers have neglected these issues for too long. Now is the time to take the initiative and put forward your real concerns. As a primary user of land, you cannot afford to be silent and to lose out by default. Please take advantage of this opportunity, states the Farmers' Advocate.

Medically Speaking

by Dr. Bob Young

"As smooth as a baby's bottom" is an appropriate descriptive phrase but not if the baby has diaper rash. Diaper dermatitis is a common condition, at least in countries where infants are swaddled in what the British call nappies. Babies born in primitive cultures seldom have the problem.

Aside from the obvious distress it causes the child, diaper rash may be the cause of other problems. The mother is often upset that her offspring's skin is not perfect, and may blame herself for not taking proper care of the infant. Grandma, in particular, may be very critical of the poor care she imagines the child is receiving.

Nothing is simple in medicine, and diaper rash is no exception. The main factors associated with the development of a rash are occlusion of the area, which prevents evaporation, friction between the diaper and the skin, yeast infection and occasionally an increased susceptibility as in a child from an "allergic" family.

It is possible for an experienced doctor to differentiate between the different types of diaper rash, at least some of the time. Mixed rashes and rashes complicated by infection may defy accurate diagnosis.

Treatment involves what I call educated common sense. Moisture is harmful, so remove wet diapers promptly. Plastic hold moisture and also often chafe. Do not use them if a rash is present. Exposing the babe to the air helps, and some suggest the use of a hair dryer (with care and from a distance) to keep the skin dry.

Washing the area adds moisture and should be kept to a minimum. Ointments may reduce friction, but they also may trap moisture and add to the problem. Old fashioned cornstarch is good; athletes use it to prevent chafing. Bak-

Simple measures may not suffice if a yeast or bacterial infection is present or an allergy exists. The doctor can help here.

There seems to be little to choose between cloth or paper diapers. Some diaper rashes are particularly resistant to treatment and never get better. That is not really true — they all get better once the child is toilet trained — but then they are no longer diaper rashes are they?

Medically Speaking is brought to you by the Alberta Medical Association and this newspaper.

Growing apples in Northern Alberta

Although it will probably be a while before Alberta's home garden apple growers can compete with their counterparts in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley, they already have a wide selection of varieties from which to choose.

In fact, according to Grant Gillund, who is district agriculturist at Smoky Lake, and who has a large demonstration orchard there, the choice is no longer determined by the apple varieties that will grow here, but rather by the kind of apple the home gardener wants to grow.

Mr. Gillund started his orchard, which is almost an acre in size, and which contains 134 trees, in 1975. Since then he has added 10 to 15 new apple varieties every year. He says "I now have 64 different apple varieties and about half a dozen apple crabs, all of which are doing well. However, I still have a few more to get." He also has 22 plum trees, five pear trees, three cherry trees and one apricot tree.

Mr Gillund's experience refutes the opinion, held by many, that it is impossible to grow tree fruits in northern Alberta. He admits that it can be challenging at times but stresses that it is far from impossible. He also points out that his orchard has proved that many of the apple varieties in the Alberta Horticultural Guide that are listed as being only marginally hardy will do well in northern areas, providing they are grown in a well sheltered area.

Rodents have posed the biggest problem for Mr. Gillund. He reports that mice stripped the bark from the trunks of 80 of his trees in the winter of 1980-81, with the result that their tops died. Deer and rabbits have also taken some trees, with apricots being their favorites. Mr. Gillund stresses that anyone who grows fruit trees in Alberta must protect them against mice, rabbits and deer.

Last year he decided to evaluate seven of his apple varieties from the point of view of their eating quality. He was joined in this project by regional home economist at Two Hills, Edith Zawadiuk. After having been peeled, sliced and frozen, each variety was made into apple sauce and into pies. No sugar or spices were added so that the variety's true quality awnd flavor could be assessed.

Both Mr Gillund and Ms. Zawadiuk, and a number of other people who took part in the evaluation, were extremely impressed by the quality of the apples and by the fact that they were superior in many ways to the commercial apples. According to Ms. Zawadiuk, Sunnybrook was the outstanding variety among those they tested. She says, in addition to being an exceptionally good eating apple, it makes excellent apple sauce and pies." Heyer 12, which is hardy enough to grow anywhere in the province, also made very good apple sauce and pie.

Ms. Zawadiuk summed up their eating quality evaluation project in these words. "We had as many different products and flavors as we had samples. And more importantly, we had apple sauce and pie fillings that were far superior in many respects to the commercial product."

She went on to point out that their project underlined the importance of handling each apple variety on an individual basis. In other words, one variety may require more sugar to make a pleasanter pie, while another may need the addition of a little ascorbic acid to reduce the discoloration of its apple sauce. "The real art of cooking apples," says Ms Zawadiuk, "is to design a recipe that will enhance a specific variety's special flavor."

INTRODUCTION TO BUDGETING

Families go through stages of feast and famine with money. This column, the third in a series of five on Introduction to Budgeting, looks at the family financial cycle

The cycle consists of the predictable peaks and valleys in income and expenses through an average family's life. By analysing where you are in the cycle, you can anticipate future needs and plan accordingly

For singles with no dependents and couples planning not to have children, the family financial cycle is very different from the one we will discuss here. You can prepare your own graph by plotting your income line and expense curve, be it below, above, or equal to it. The most important thing to remember, if you fall into this category, is that you need to look towards the retirement stage.

For singles and childless couples who are planning to change their status, the graph we will discuss is very appropriate

The graph below represents a couple and two children. Your situation may be different, but it's the relationship between the income and expense curves that is important. Age is the horizontal axis, income the verticle axis.

The income line is that of a salaried person. If both partners are working, a second income line is shown. The accompanying graph shows one partner quitting work when the first child arrives and the resulting overnight reduction in income. The average wage earner will experience a steady increase in salary up to age 45 or 50, after which income tends to level off. Retirement brings another abrupt drop in income.

The expense curve remains relatively stable until the children reach school age. Then the costs mount. "Financial Post" (October, 1982) suggests the cost of raising a child to age 18 based on 1980 dollars, given a 10 per cent inflation rate, is $394,371 with day care, and $115,960 with babysitting. "Changing Times" (April, 1983) estimates the cost of raising a child to age 22, including college, as $226,000 in U.S. 1982 dollars.

As a U.S financial counsellor says, "It's important to understand the financial implications of having a child. During the pre-school years, it's easy to be lulled into thinking kids are not expensive, but as children grow older, they take a larger proportion of the family's income."

By the time the children have reached their late teens, expenses will have peaked and probably exceed one's income. Expenses start to decrease when the child leaves home or starts contributing to the family income.

By the time both children have left home there should be excess income. Retirement years show income and expenses balancing. This may be an optimistic outlook, as not many pension plans are keeping place with inflation.

It is important to recognize that for most "average" families, there will be a time when expenses will increase more rapidly than income and in fact expenses will exceed income.

There are several ways of coping with this stressful time. Some families turn to the use of credit, others look to a second income (which has further effect on increasing expenses, due to clothing, child care, and increased transportation costs). A third alternative is careful planning. A family that plans spending wisely may be ble to save the excess income from the early years before the children are born, to help avoid the use of credit during a more expensive time.

In the beginning years (1) both partners are usually working and family income often exceeds current expenses. Careful planning will make the most of it. Couples contemplating children and a stay-at-home parent should get used to living on one income. If you are planning to make long-term financial commitments, such as a mortgage or long-term loan, consider how the costs fit with the future income and expenses.

Once the children leave home, the recovery years (4), income should exceed expenses. While some of that excess income may be needed to pay past debts, how the remainder is spent should be well planned.

In retirement (5) expenses remain relatively constant but income is substantially reduced. If retirement income is entirely made up of company pension, Canada Pension and Old Age Security, you can expect approximately 70 per cent of your previous year's salary. This may not be enough to maintain your lifestyle. Pre-retirement planners suggest that both financial and lifestyle retirement planning start at age 35.

Rostad seeks juniors

Faith Rostad has an important job.

The coach of the CLC Vikettes has been retained by the Alberta Basketball Association to coach the best junior women in the province.

Rostad has been named as provincial coach of the Alberta Junior Women's team (under 21 years) for the next two-year period, after completing the job in successful fashion last year

This team is to be composed of the twelve best junior women in the province

Right now, the search for those players is about to get underway

Tryout camps will be held next month (May) in seven communities with Camrose being one of the sites.

The Camrose camp is to be held on May 25 and 26 at Camrose Lutheran College under the direction of Gail Amort-Larson.

Any junior players (16-21 years) interested in attending the camp should get in touch with Amort-Larson, at the college.

Following the tryout camps, the twelve top players will be selected and they will hold their first team workouts on the first weekend in July.

The provincial team will be going to Brandon during the second weekend in August to participate in the national junior women's basketball championship tournament.

Rostad has been head coach of the Vikings for the past two seasons and was named to the Canada West all star team when she was a member of the U of A Pandas.

Veterinarian facts

Management and Prevention of Problems Associated with Calving

We're sure that all dairymen would agree that most of the veterinary related problems they encounter occur at calving time or shortly thereafter. We would therefore like to go over some of the common problems dairy cattle develop during this period and try to make a few suggestions which will hopefully reduce the dairyman's losses.

Milk Fever

This is probably the most common problem at calving time. Although the treatment available is very effective, we think our primary objective should be to minimize the incidence. This can best be done by controlling the ration of the dry cow.

During the dry period the cow should be kept on a low calcium diet to condition her body for efficient use of the available calcium. Alfalfa hay provides too much calcium for the dry cow and thus should not be used. Instead a grass hay, good quality greenfeed or cereal silage provide a much more acceptable level of calcium.

In cows known to be very susceptible to milk fever, Vitamin D3 has been successfully used to prevent the disease. This drug increases the uptake of calcium from the intestine and also the reabsorption of calcium from bone thus helping the cow through the crisis period.

While using Vitamin D3 there are several important factors to remember. First of all, fr maximum effectiveness it should be given about 72 hours before calving and secondly the injected drug must be metabolized in both the liver and the kidney before the active metabolite is produced. Also the amount of active metabolite produced is determined by such things as the level of phosphorus already in the body thus emphasizing the importance of a balanced ration.

Downer Cow Syndrome

This problem is really interrelated with milk fever and certainly is a condition feared by all dairymen. In simple terms, this is the condition where a cow is free from injury but unable to get up following calving and does not respond to milk fever therapy. The cause of the condition is obviously multi-factorial however we feel the most important cause is improper nutrition during the dry period.

It is extremely important during the dry period not only to feed low levels of calcium but also to prevent the cows from becoming too fat. As a cow begins lactation there is no way she can consume as much energy as she is producing in the form of milk. Therefore the body fat reserves must be used as an energy source, however, these reserves must pass through the liver to be converted into utilizable energy. In an extremely fat cow the liver will become so congested with fat it will no longer be able to carry out the normal metabolic functions which are so necessary to keep the cow up and going.

A useful aid in the treatment of this type of case is to provide the cow with a great deal of intravenous dextrose so the fat can be changed into utilizable energy and does not pile up in the liver. Prevention again is the most desirable route to take and here the two key points are to prevent the cow from becoming too fat and also to minimize stress on the cow at the time of calving so she will not go off feed. As soon as she goes off feed much more fat begins to build up in the liver and serious problems may follow.

Calving Injury

Probably the most common injury to the cow at the time of calving is what we refer to as "obturator paralysis". This simply is the partial paralysis of one or both hind legs following difficult calving. If we review the anatomy of the birth canal we see that two nerves which are responsible for some of the muscle function in the hind legs are in a very vulnerable position for injury. The injury is always most severe if pressure is applied to thses nerves over a sustained period of time.

The classic case where this will occur is with a hip lock or in other words a situation where the calf is stuck at the hips. If these cases are not dislodged quickly there will invariably be damage done to the nerve supply for the hind limbs. A calving jack is a great asset in correcting this type of problem as it gives one the opportunity to direct the line of force down thus forcing the calf's hips up into the widest part of the cow's pelvis.

Regardless of how good the management is, we're sure every dairyman will see one of these paralysis cases at some time in his career. Because it is impossible to predict when the case will arise we think it is essential to calve a cow out where there is good footing. A grass paddock is probably most ideal, however, since this is not possible all year round the next best environment is a large clean box stall preferably with a dirt floor. It is very undesirable to calve in the stall of a stanchion barn. In fact it would appear that the success of many such cases is unfavorable because of the lack of freedom and lack of good footing found in this type of stall.

As long as a proper environment is provided for cows with this type of problem, a large percentage will recover and go on to produce and reproduce normally. It requires a great deal of work to look after these cases to ensure they are shifted from side to side, milked out and kept clean and dry. For treatment of these cases we suggest a protocol known as "T.L.C." (tender loving care).

This column of fact and opinion about veterinary matters is produced with the advice and authority of the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association, the professional organization of Alberta's more than 500 veterinarians. Reader inquiries may be directed to Dr. Martin at this publication for reply.

The world needs our grain ... Lang

Strong optimism about the world demand for Canadian grain was expressed by Otto Lang, executive vice-president of Pioneer Grain, in a very upbeat address to farmers at Alberta's annual outlook conference in Calgary.

Noting that high energy prices and world recession had temporarily slowed the growth in the demand for grain, the former wheat board minister predicted that stable oil prices and world recovery, now under way, would see a resurgence in this demand, based on the "twin pillars of increasing population and income growth." Income growth is particularly important," Mr. Lang said, "because it brings about changes in eating habits, beginning with greater consumption of cereal foods and edible oils, and leading on to diets that include more grain-fed meat. I am particularly confident about rising incomes in third world and less developed countries and feel that the stage is now set for a return to the trendline for increased grain demand that saw a doubling in grain consumption in the decade prior to the recession".

Mr. Lang also expressed confidence that the correction of present imbalances will lead as well to rising grain prices. He said, "We are not carrying an overly large reserve of grain in the world, keeping in mind the disasters which could occur. The problem is that most of the grain is being carried in the United States and that has an immediately large impact on prices. It may take a short crop, revived world economics, or merely a realization of how small the reserve really is to trigger appropriate price increases."

BETWEEN THE COVERS

On the new book table this week, you will find a variety of books dealing with appearance and cosmetics. Choose from Christine Valmy's "Skin Care and Makeup Book", Anne Harper's "The Big Beauty Book Glamour For the Fuller Figure Woman" and Dr Zizmor's "Brand-Name Guide to Beauty Aids".

For readers who enjoy biography, look for "Dustin Hoffman Hollywood's Antihero" by Jeff Lenburg, or H "Dude" Lavington's new book, "Born to Be Hung", a sequel to "Nine Lives of a Cowboy", which is also in the library.

A good variety of paperback fiction can also be found, including a new Windhaven episode, and new copy of the long-lost second title of that series. In hardcover, try Joel Gross' new novel, "This Year in Jerusalem," or Canadian author Robert Kroetsch's latest, "Alibi".

The librarian will be away at the annual Library Association of Alberta conference April 26-29. Mrs. Carol Livingstone will be in charge during my absence.

Please keep the following dates in mind during your busy spring schedules. May 1 is the first day of the Spring session of Preschool Story Hour for 3 and 4 year olds, beginning at 10 a.m. It is also the first day for Booktime, a similar program for children in K-3, at 4 p.m. Another Preschool session is planned for Friday, May 4. All registrations are $2 per child for eight weeks.

The National Book Festival, declared by Mayor Sears as National Book Week in Tofield, begins on April 28, through until May 5. Tofield Library is celebrating with a Trivia Canada contest, open to anyone, with all answers available at the library. The entry forms can be picked up at the Town Office, the Library, or in the April 11 copy of The Mercury.

Grade Four students, including prize winners, Tracy Wideman, Keith Reichenbach, Ken Clouston and Kris McBurney, have worked hard to make the posters you will see around town, to advertise the three author visits in the Library on Friday, May 4. Mrs. Brenda Bellingham, author of "Joanie's Magic Boots", will be reading to groups of students at 10:30 a.m. and again at 1:15 p.m. These readings are also open to the public, at no admission charge.

At 3 p.m., Mrs. Peggy Holmes will be our guest, with copies of her popular book "It Could Have Been Worse" available for autographing, as well as her soon-to-be-released sequel "Never a Dull Moment". This reading is also open to the public, at free admission.

Do try to take in some or all of Tofield's National Book Festival events. For further information call [illegible].

Medically Speaking

by Dr Bob Young

If you think that your aching shoulder is due to arthritis, you are probably wrong. Nineteen times out of 20 shoulder pain is due to something other than inflammation of the joint, a condition that must be present before true arthritis exists.

The five percent of painful shoulders that are caused by arthritis still need sorting out. That joint damage may be due to osteoarthritis, a wear and tear condition usually related to repeated injury, rheumatoid arthritis, gout or the very serious infectious or septic arthritis.

Ninety-five percent of people complaining of shoulder pain have a problem around, rather than within, the joint. Six major tendons are associated with the shoulder and one or more of them may become inflamed, a condition called tendinitis. This condition may be complicated by calcification and even rupture of the tendon.

[illegible] fluid-filled sacks or bursae, which act as lubricated pulleys for the tendons, become [illegible]lated. It is not as common [illegible] one might assume from [illegible] complaining of "bursitis of the shoulder". When it does occur it usually is associated with a concomitant tendinitis.

Occasionally part of the shoulder-joint capsule gets trapped between the ball of the arm bone and the socket of the scapula or its extension, the acromion process. These so-called impingement problems occur when a person, usually with previous shoulder problems, works or plays with his or her arms extended [illegible].

These are but a few of the many causes of shoulder pain. To complicate matters pain felt in the shoulder region may originate elsewhere. Nerves, pinched as they leave the bony spine of the neck, may produce pain in a perfectly sound shoulder. Even a diseased gallbladder, tucked under the diaphragm in the abdomen, may refer pain to the [illegible].

Fortunately, most shoulder problems are of a temporary nature. This statement is true only because genuine arthritis of the joint is rare.

Impaired drivers worse than war

... says Malone

OTTAWA - Bill C220 to amend the Criminal Code with respect to impaired driving, introduced by Crowfoot Minister of Parliament, Arnold Malone, was debated at second reading yesterday.

Mr Malone stated, "Of all our nation's serious problems, the issue of drinking while driving must be considered as one of those in need of attention . . . Every day in Canada some 400 persons are convicted of driving while having an intoxicating level of alcohol in their bodies."

"The purpose of my Bill," Mr. Malone said, "is to deter persons from driving motor vehicles while under the influence of alcohol. Under Bill C-220, persons caught driving with a blood alcohol concentration above the legal limit would have their licence suspended for one year on the first offence, and for three and five years on second and subsequent offences. In cases where the impaired driver was judged to be the cause of an accident causing bodily harm or death the driver's licence would be suspended for 10 years on the first offence and for life on any subsequent offences."

The general intent of Bill C-220 was well received and both Liberal and New Democratic members gave praise to the bill and spoke favourably of its intentions.

Mr Malone indicated that he brought Bill C-220 to the House of Commons in hopes of raising the level of consciousness concerning the seriousness and extent of impaired driving. He said, ". . . the fact that 2,000 Canadians died in 1980 because of drunk drivers is reason enough to bring an abrupt halt to this 'socially acceptable' murder. [illegible] must be held responsible for their actions."

Mr Malone said, "We should be shocked into action when we realize that from 1972 to 1978 drunk drivers killed as many people on our highways as lives lost in Canada during World War II. "In the United States in any 2 year period of this past decade there were as many lives lost to drunk drivers as the total U.S. casualty list for the Vietnam War," claimed Mr Malone. "It's time for action."

U.S. policy affects Canadian grain view

Dr. John Marten, staff economist with the U.S. Farm Journal believes that the 1985 American Farm Bill could show a shift towards "market clearing" programs that would result in immediate adjustment problems for countries like Canada, which compete with the United States in world grains markets.

Dr. Marten told participants at Alberta Agriculture's grain and oilseeds outlook conference in Calgary, Accent '84, that U.S. farm policy in recent years has tended to move away from market orientation. He was particularly critical of the high price loan rates that hold grain off the market. "Target prices and deficiency payments", he suggested, "have little if any direct impact on the real market price. They are, thus, an outstanding income transfer tool."

He cynically described the 1982 U.S. farm policy, which increased loan rates, as the "Canadian Agricultural Development Act" because it raised a massive umbrella over world grain markets for other exporters such as Canada.

Dr Marten described the PIK (Payment In Kind) Program as being a brilliant — almost perfect — solution to the problem facing the U.S. in 1983 as it cut production, increased prices and farm income, reduced government storage costs and got grain back onto the market.

"If we keep the reserve concept after 1984", he said, "it should be legislated tightly to insure that it is used only as intended."

Ryley Pool news

by [illegible]
Pool Manager

The Ryley Pool held a "Water Safety Instructors Level 1" on the first two weekends in April.

Ten people from the county attended the course. The instructor's course was taught by Cindy Lorincz of Wetaskiwin.

Enrollment for our first set of Red Cross Swim lessons was very good. Some levels filled quickly and as a result some students had to be turned down.

If we were unable to accomodate you, remember our next set of lessons begin May 22 and registration is now being taken for that set. Contact your local recreation office or the pool for information.

May 7th is parents day and we invite parents to take part in the lessons with their children.

Our bronze medallion class started April 24th. Registration is still being taken if you are interested. The bronze course involves 15 to 20 hours of instruction in first aid, water safety skills, water rescues. Minimum age is 14 and you should be a good swimmer.

Coming Up

All the county grade four students will be beginning their water safety program in May. We are expecting about 130 students to take part in the program which consists of water safety awareness, films, safety skills, swimming instruction, survival skills and some aquatic games.

90th celebrated

by Anne [illegible]

Friends and relatives of long-time Tofield area resident, Anne Anderson, gathered in the Tofield Lutheran Church on Saturday to celebrate her 90th birthday.

In attendance were her children, Clifford, Bernice and Phillip. One son, Allen, lives in Los Angeles, USA and was unable to make the trip.

Her brother, Elmer Hendrickson and two sisters, Mary Ruston and Ella Sylteki, were on hand to extend their warm wishes. Mary read a poem she composed in honor of her sister's devotion to the Christian way of life.

Anne was born on April 21, 1894 in Minnesota, USA. At the age of seven, she and her family moved to the Armena Area, west of Camrose. Here she attended school, and returned to the United States during her teenage years to attend summer courses in Bible college. This level of education enabled her to become Dean of Women at the Camrose Lutheran Bible College for a short time before moving to the Bardo District.

Here she met Benny Anderson and they were married in 1918. Anne has always been an active member of the Lutheran Church and taught Sunday School for thirty years.

She presently resides in Tofield Lodge.

Garbage is county concern ... in Bruce, Kinsella

by Joan Murray

At a County of Beaver Council meeting on Thursday, Council felt that garbage at the Bruce and Kinsella landfills was getting out of control.

To clean up this condition, it was agreed to have the road leading into the Bruce dumpsite properly gravelled, allowing the Viking garbage trucks to enter the area during inclement weather conditions, and that graders with dozers in the front be brought to both locations to push the scattered refuse into the pit provided.

It was suggested that after the graders have done their work, two or three persons could be hired to pick up the papers and boxes left behind, once a week.

It was brought up that the Creamery Road going north of Tofield runs out of a gravelled surface at a certain point. In muddy weather it is virtually impassable.

Several warning signs have been erected in the past but, all have gone unheeded and motorists continue to get stuck in the mud. To solve this problem, council decided that a stop sign should be erected at the intersection just prior to the problem area and a detour sign be posted directing traffic one mile to the east or west.

In answer to a request from Viking, the County of Beaver will be providing, at cost, approximately 50 cubic yards of cold mix for their roads. This will save on hauling costs as Viking previously hauled their mix from the County of Camrose.

During discussion of the construction program for 1984, district representatives were requested to have all major changes to their projects submitted at the next meeting so that the proposed master plan could be sent into Alberta Transportation for approval.

The county has acquired a patching truck and the gravel scale should arrive about mid-May. Gravelling should begin sometime in June.

In view of the fact that forty-one badly damaged road signs were brought in at one time to be replaced, it was felt that closer attention should be paid to sign conditions in the future, especially to stop and yield signs. It is their aim to have damaged signs replaced as soon as they are noticed to prevent future accidents in the County.

A list of reserve lands for lease is being compiled and will be offered for tender to the public soon.

Council has agreed to contribute $668 towards the repair of two bridges located in the Holden Drainage District

Tofield plans clean-up

by Joan Murray

At their regular meeting last Tuesday evening, Tofield Town Council designated May 6 to 12 as Clean-up Week

Extra workers will be put on garbage collection for that period and townspeople will be able to phone Town Hall to arrange for pick-up of large unwanted items such as old cars, worn out appliances, trees and brush.

Town Administrator, Lori Pilon, said that in conjunction with Clean-up Week, letters would be sent out to property owners advising them to make arrangements to clean up unsightly garbage in their yards.

Council felt it would be a good idea to approach local service clubs to help with cleaning up the dump road and also with picking up litter that is scattered about the town

Work on Belvedere Park should start anytime and it is hoped that the Garden Club will be able to acquire a grant that they plan to use for a flower bed in this area as a

Gun show is held

by Joan Murray

On the weekend, the sixth annual Tofield Gun and Hobby Show drew a fairly good crowd but, not as large as last year.

The bulk of the gate was local people and Wally Lee, treasurer of the Tofield Gun Club, said they certainly appreciated the support.

There were not as many display entries this year either, but those that were there, were very impressive. Lee attributed the drop in attendance to the farmers being into full swing with preparations for seeding. Most years the weather is too wonderful for such undertakings.

There were a variety of guns, gun accessories, jewelry, collectables, woodcraft, and taxidermy items on display.

One new item was a tipi, a 14 foot high octagon shaped wood construction entered by Neil Reid of Ryley and Dave Paradis of Edmonton. It is mainly used as a campground accommodation. Reid said that they are in the process of manufacturing several of these tipi's to be sent to a campground in Saskatchewan. They hope to get more orders as they become better known to the public.

The Tofield Gun Club had their cannon on display as well as their table display. This cannon is capable of firing a steel ball up to a distance of three miles, and will be demonstrated later in May at the annual black powder show.

The best gun display award was won by Maury Yarmuch of the Tofield Gun Club for his Winchester commemorative collection.

The best hobby award went to Eve and Russell Lermaer of Kingman for their handcarved wood-working display.

Ron Serbin of Wesdpac, received the Bill Stefanyk Trophy for having the best display of collectibles. This trophy was donated by Al and Judy Flack and will be on display at Judy's Flowers throughout the year.

The Tofield Black Power Club will be putting on their annual black powder shoot at the end of May. They will have the cannon on display as well as "cap-and-ball" shooting demonstrations taking place.

Who's harassed?

Following several weeks of Parliamentary complaints by the Tories and increasing storms of criticism from taxpayers across the country, staff members of Revenue Canada are finding the constant criticism is getting under their skin, and they're complaining of public harassment.

Just imagine the type of pressure they must feel from public criticism, public harassment, with all the strength of their resources behind them, compared to the type of harassment the poor taxpayer feels when he looks at his own lack of muscle. Really, your heart has to bleed for them.

No-one who is on the up and up has anything to fear from the tax gatherer, goes the old saying. And it used to be that people had utmost confidence in the tax gatherer: they would tell him things they wouldn't even breathe in the confessional.

But all that has changed. No longer do people trust the tax office with information because they've seen it too often passed to other departments. Not only that, but they have seen the tax office open up avenues we didn't used to think were legal, or proper.

Nor do they believe the tax official is always as fair as he should be. Stories keep coming through of added assessments being made on the premise "they're probably hiding something and this should smoke it out." In too many instances, when the taxpayer has been completely honest, when nothing is wrong, when there's nothing to be smoked out, the taxpayer miserably and bitterly pays the added impost, simply because he doesn't have the money to fight it. The tax department has unlimited funds for lawsuits; the taxpayer can lose his shirt trying to save his.

Hostility to the taxman develops when he can move in and freeze bank accounts, nay, when he can gain utter and total information such that on a recent visit to Camrose they froze one bank account a taxpayer had forgotten he even held. It was small, but they could find out, just as they froze the $38 Christmas present account of a toddler in B.C. whose account was in the same name as his father.

Hostility develops when they freeze accounts, level charges, and don't stop to inquire whether errors may have been made, whether there may have been a misunderstanding. Hostility develops when you get an imperious, peremptory, and accusatory demand from the tax office before you're even aware there is a question, a cheque missed. Compare that to the letter you'd get from a commercial firm seeking your patronage, with the same problem.

Even when the cheque is lost in the mail, or has been credited by the tax office to some other account, (it happens) the taxpayer gets no apology. The whole premise in recent years has been to presume the taxpayer guilty, seize his money, and release it only when he proves himself not guilty. At great expense and difficulty to the taxpayer.

And increasing hostility tends to be levelled at the taxman, (not his fault, he's only the agent) when the taxpayer sees far too many of his hard-earned dollars squandered in unproductive boondoggles, in political patronage, and regional pay-offs. The taxman may be only doing his job, as he claims, but the hostility has grown so rapidly because of the way he chooses, in recent months, to do his job. It's the old, old story: "it's not what you do so much as the way you do it."

And they feel they're being harassed! Ha!

SPRING SPRUCING

It's spring clean-up time, time to resuscitate brown lawns that look like the Sahara Desert and turn over the flower beds. At our house, we have the added chore of teaching our dog that the back flower bed is no longer his run and that one more pawprint on the tender green shoots sprouting there will have him known as "that three-legged mutt".

Since it's nice to be able to see Spring's arrival clearly, we find ourselves with windows to wash. This is a real chore around our house because all the inhabitants swear that it isn't included in their job description. Should windows enter into it, our conversations consist of "I don't do windows" and "Kids have rights too, you know." When and if the pains, I means panes, get washed, it becomes necessary to launder walls and other bits and pieces of the interior since those outside can then see in — unless we wish to be known as "that grungey family with the three-legged mutt."

I've offered to pay someone to do it all but my husband says he doesn't take MasterCard. And it's hard to delegate when you have children constantly reminding you that "you live here too".

I wouldn't pay much attention to spring cleaning if it weren't for the fact that other people insist on doing it and then telling me about it. It's at the point where I can't ignore it any longer or do it when the spirit moves me (1[illegible] — it's a weak spirit). All around us the freshly raked lawns are turning so green that ours should, out of envy if nothing else, people are cleaning cupboards, painting walls, clearing hedges of Old Man Winter's junk collection. Closer to home, we have the subtle reminder that dogs need a bath once a year, whether they like it or not.

Once we get started here (it's bound to happen), we'll use the job-sharing system again, unless someone's back goes out. And you can bet that everyone is going to hear about every sore muscle and blistered palm. Watch for me — I'll be groaning and limping down the street, showing off our freshly laundered three-legged mutt.

Attention farmers

Dear Sir:

We are appealing to farmers to leave some cover around sloughs and field edges, in an effort to stem the steady decline in the duck and songbird population.

The effort of all farmers and ranchers are vitally needed if the species are to survive.

We hope you keep this in mind while preparing the land for this year's crop.

Yours truly,
A concerned farmer

Impaired driving

Darrel is a young farmer in rural Saskatchewan. During the winter he works in the electrical trade. Whether seeding in the spring or installing conduits in a new city building in December, Darrell enjoys a drink after a hard day's work — going to the bar with his friends and, as he puts it, "lifting a few with the boys". Usually Darrell is fairly sensible about drinking, but every once in a while he finds it necessary to go on a binge and that's when the trouble starts. Because, drunk or sober, Darrell likes to drive.

Recently the Mountie highway patrol cuaght up with Darrell again. He's become a familiar figure to the police. He's already served one jail term — but managed to do it on weekends. Now he has a second conviction against him for impaired driving and this time he'll have to do the full term of the sentence — three months.

Darrell's case is an example of a growing incidence of impaired driving. Over the past 10 years, such convictions in Saskatchewan have increased by 60 percent, to 10,000 in 1982.

But Darrell has decided to come to grips with his problem and has applied to the courts for the "treatment option" provided for persons who have been convicted of a second or subsequent impaired driving offence and who are under a sentenced of [illegible].

The Impaired Driver Treatment Program (IDTP) is a provincial program offered [illegible] the cooperation of [illegible] a Board of Governors appointed by the Minister of Health, the Corrections Branch of the Department of Justice and Regional Services, Saskatchewan Alcoholism Commission.

The IDTP was set up in January 1980 and a recent study into the program shows it has been effective in combatting the incidence of impaired driving through assessment and referral, treatment and follow-up. An offender is assessed for suitability for treatment through preliminary screening, referrals, and pre-sentence reports prepared to advise the courts. The treatment component of the IDTP is provided at the St. Louis Alcoholism Rehabilitation Centre located near Prince Rupert.

Clients are required to indicate a willingness to undertake treatment before they are accepted and, once they arrive, they are expected to participate fully in the program. Up to 15 clients are admitted each Friday. The two-week in-patient treatment program is probably the shortest in Canada. It is designed simply as a foundation or starting point for recovery.

Offenders such as Darrell sentenced to St. Louis have a six-month probation order attached to their sentence requiring them to report to [illegible] Alcoholism Commission to work out an on-going treatment plan. This will usually involve [illegible] family and aftercare services such as AA (Alcoholics Anonymous), churches and health care professionals. A follow-up report is made after six months, to complete the treatment contract. Recovery plans and services may follow for as long as needed with formal evaluation at one and two year intervals.

Darrell and other clients referred to St. Louis for impaired driving do not represent the driver who had "just one drink too many". Their average blood alcohol level was .20 or more than double the legal limit of .08. Half the clients have breathalyzer readings above that level. Furthermore, impaired driving has been found to be symptomatic of serious alcoholism problems among clients.

For Darrell and other clients, St. Louis may have been the answer. During Safe Driving Week, it is worth considering the merit of this one program and its effectiveness in combatting the incidence of impaired driving in this province.

Stop seal hunt

Prime Minister Trudeau last week received the most ridiculous petition we've ever heard of, in this intsance from the Animal Protection Institute of America, based in [illegible].

Filling 25 boxes, the petition weighed 1117 pounds (American, not Canadian) and contained 286,500 signatures.

Accompanying the signatures was the following proclamation: "The Animal Protection Institute of America presents this petition of 286,500 signatures as an indication of protest against the annual commercial hunt for harp and hooded seals on their respective welping (sic) grounds in Canada's Atlantic region.

"At a time when international opposition to the killing is endangering the viability of Canada's fishing industry, the Animal Protection Institute has chosen this nonconfrontational method to underscore the magnitude of that opposition. Whatever the merits or lack of merits of arguments mounted for or against the hunt, now is the time to end it".

Isn't it lovely having a quarter million American animal lovers telling us how to operate? They can't protest the bludgeoning of seal pups . . . that doesn't happen anymore. It's only the annual commercial hunt, the cropping of seals, they are protesting. Whether or not there is any merit to their argument.

Strangely, no protest is raised over the fact that American fishers, with many other nations, overfish the oceans, or that they, along with many other nations, have ignored Canada's protests and overkilled practically every species of whale to the point they are endangered as a species . . . not at all like the seals.

Nor have they raised a fuss over the number of fish being killed in Canadian or other waters by American acid rain. Not to speak of people being poisoned in the same way.

Wouldn't it be interesting to speculate on the interest these same Americans might generate if Mr. Trudeau were to return their petition with his keen interest, and ask their support in endorsing a similar petition to Washington, protesting the frightful impact on life in Canada, animal, vegetable, fish and human, developing from American insistence on exporting their sulphur dioxide to this country?

The petition would be in the same spirit, of course, "whatever the merits or lack of merits of arguments mounted for or against".

We could almost trade off for the seal hunt, couldn't we?

Summer camp set

Dubois Valley camp will again operate this coming summer for both boys and girls.

The camp is located on the bank of Big Knife [illegible] seventeen miles [illegible] Gadsby.

Operated by Carol and John Connon, the camp offers children 8-14 years a week-long (or more) opportunity to learn about horses, go trail riding, enjoy nature hikes and play games in a pleasant atmosphere.

For experienced riders, the camp operates on a low children-staff ratio to insure that all riders know how to handle horses before they go on trail rides.

Complete information about the camp may be obtained by writing to Carol Connon, Box 13, Gadsby, T0C 1K0 or by calling either 574-3041 or 574-2115.

It was agreed to assist the Tofield Fire Department in applying for participation in a cost shared equipment program sponsored by the Alberta Disaster Services. They hope to acquire the "Jaws of Life" equipment that enables them to pry open vehicles in emergency situations.

A street light north of the railroad tracks had previously been deemed unnecessary and was disconnected as a cost saving measure. In response to comments by private citizens, it will be turned back on immediately.

Scouts stay active

The Tofield Scouting movement has been fairly active recently. On March 31st, four boys and two leaders took part in a heart-saver CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) course in the Tofield Fire Hall.

John Bauman instructed them on the basic methods of dealing with emergency heart situations. They were all successful in completing this course and received a certificate for their achievements.

Cubs and Scouts teamed up with the Splitstead troop for a spring camp-out on March 30, 31 and April 1st out at the Colby Bark Club on Hastings Lake. Cubs worked on achieving their winter camp-out badges, even though the weather was not exactly winter-like. Scouts actively pursued their pioneering and camp-craft badges.

There were about 80 boys and adults in attendance that weekend. Scoutmaster, Don Kondrat, said it was a good turnout and nearly every family was represented by at least one parent.

At Splitstead on April 7th, the leaders participated in a Woodbadge I training session. This introductory course provides leaders with a general background as to the basic operations of the Scouting movement and how it differs from other boys' clubs in its aims and goals.

On April 14th, Scouts participated in a unique fund-raising project, preparing lawns for local townspeople. They aerated, raked and fertilized 40 yards that weekend as part of their community service activities and to help the Lions [illegible] sponsor in funding the construction of a canoe trailer.

There will be three more camps this year before the combination "Fly-up" and "Wind-up" celebrations will take place on June 11th.

Anniversary planned

by Jean Murray

June 24th, July 1st and 2nd are the days set for celebrating Tofield's 75th anniversary in conjunction with Canada Day.

The July 1st Committee met recently and decided to include a canoe wheel and possibly fireworks in the event schedule.

The parade is planned for the Monday morning and will have the 75th anniversary as it's theme. The Tofield Skating Club is in charge of the parade and entries can be submitted to Margaret Adams.

A silver dollar raffle is being sponsored by the Golden Club and members will be selling anniversary sweepstakes tickets for a dollar. Proceeds from ticket sales will go towards the celebration preparations.

There will be something for everyone of all ages this year, starting with a dance on the Saturday night and followed by two days of bingo, farmer-flea market activities, ball tournaments, kid's games, carnival games, gymkhana and pony rides.

To take care of any hungry celebrants, the Lions Club is sponsoring a barbeque, the Legion has planned a pancake breakfast and the Cubs, Scouts and 4-H members will have a myriad of goodies at their concession booth.

Recreation Director, Jackie Dansochel, said they are planning to have a pamphlet made up that will show where and when events will take place as well as the areas acceptable for overnight campers.

Although the general plan of events has been worked out, there is still no shortage of work left. The organization and co-ordination of all the planned events and activities will keep everyone pretty busy for the next two months.

According to a recent Marketplace program on T.V., cotton flannelette sleepwear for children has been banned in the U.S. These night-gowns pose a serious flammability problem

First, cotton burns rapidly The style of a nightgown creates a "chimney effect" causing air and flames to be drawn up the nightgown, resulting in rapid burning. Marketplace suggests a synthetic fibre is better for sleepwear because it burns more slowly. Also, choose close fitting styles of sleepwear with ribbed cuffs, waistband, etc.

Gray is winner

By [illegible]

Mrs. Elizabeth (Zippy) Gray, [illegible] Tofield resident, entered four items in the 8th annual Northern Alberta Ceramics show in Edmonton April 13, 14 and 15th and won four first places.

Her creations were entered in the Golden Age [illegible].

The "Strawberry Welcome Plaque" won her a trophy and a "Freddy" award, which is the highest award one can receive in hobby ceramics in Northern Alberta.

She said that the statue of an American eagle in flight was her most difficult piece to create.

"Zippy", as she is known to most everyone around Tofield, became interested in ceramics four years ago when she was encouraged by her daughter and son-in-law to enter her work in the NACA show and has won a "Freddy" every year since.

She only does ceramics during the winter [illegible] she visits her daughter, who owns a ceramic shop, and can take part in the day courses offered. During the summer she says she is too busy keeping her garden and yard in top shape.

A public crusade

An anguished mother's private grief has become a public crusade against impaired driving.

It's gaining momentum every day.

Margaret Taylor founded Citizens Against Impaired Driving (CAID) after her 16-year-old daughter Sara was taken from her by a drunk driver.

It all started with an outraged letter to the editor in which she urged others to sign a petition demanding the government deal with the problem of impaired driving.

Response was overwhelming, and Taylor realized that she'd tapped into a wellspring of public discontent.

She founded CAID and the battle was on.

"We want people to realize that victims could've been one of their loved ones," said Taylor.

"Impaired drivers aren't very selective."

"We want people to get mad and identify with the victim, not the driver."

"We want impaired driving to be as socially unacceptable as child abuse," she said.

Representing some 500 members, Taylor spends her time lobbying politicians, public speaking and producing the CAID newsletter.

"We're looking for changes in the law," said Taylor.

"We want more enforcement and we want loopholes in the laws closed."

BETWEEN THE COVERS

On the new book shelf this week, we have included "The Way of the Warrior", by Howard Reid, a book on the martial arts. Students registered in the recreation program may be interested in this and other books on similar topics to be found in the library.

A variety of books on communication, both verbal and written are now available. Among them, "How to Speak, How to Listen" by Mortimer J. Adler, covers many facets of the art of effective communication. For writers, or aspiring writers, try one of the following: "How To Write Best-Selling Fiction" by Dean R. Koontz; "How to Write a Poem", by Lawrence Jay Dessner; or "Guide to Better Business Writing" by Mary A. DeVries.

The children's shelf has two anniversary books this week: "Babar's Anniversary Album" containing six favourite books, and "Happy Birthday Charlie Brown", celebrating 30 years in comic strips and 15 years on television. Two more story books are Shel Silverstein's "Who Wants a Cheap Rhinoceros?" and "The Man Who Tried To Save Time" by Phyllis Krasilovsky.

Don't forget the three author visits this Friday, free, at the Library. Mrs. Brenda Bellingham, author of "Joanie's Magic Boots" is speaking at 10:30 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. Mrs. Peggy Holmes, author of "It Could Have Been Worse" and "Never A Dull Moment" is speaking at 3 p.m. All readings are open to members of the public at no charge, and Trivia Canada and poster prizes will be awarded at that time.

While you are in the library, have a look at the display of Canadian books set out to mark National Book Week, and the lists of other similar books available in your library. Ask for a souvenir book mark!

Regular library hours are Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-6 and 6-8, Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-5.

Horsemen keep busy

Katchemut Creek Family Horse Club started April off with a special meeting to plan their second annual Senior's Day scheduled for Sunday, May 6. Despite poor attendance, many plans were made and a schedule of events was formed.

On April 7, a stove and general merchandise auction was held on the club grounds. The auctioneer, Rod Heimsen, managed to get really good prices for the stoves, who have to work two hours for their buyer.

The weekend of April 13, 14 and 15 was Camrose Rodeo and the Club's contestant for rodeo queen, Renee King, was kept busy attending the functions laid out for the queen contestants.

The regular monthly meeting of Katchemut Creek Family Horse Club was held on Sunday at Beaverhill Family Centre. The guest speaker, [illegible] from the Horse Industry Branch of the Department of Agriculture, showed a film and gave a talk on horse nutrition and feed requirements.

Some of the club members were late for his lecture as they had attended the memorial service held at the Legion for Marlene Weber. Marlene and Bernie were among the founding members of the club in 1981. Marlene, who passed away suddenly on April 25, was the club's first secretary.

After the guest speaker had completed his talk, the general meeting was held. It was mainly taken up with finalizing plans for Senior's Day. The second annual Senior's Day will be held on Sunday at the club grounds, starting at 1:30 p.m.

This is the day when everyone who is 55 years or older is served free from the concession booth. There will be many special events staged for the guests as well as the regular gymkhana along with chariot racing. Anyone who is participating in the events is reminded that the Arena Directors need your registration no later than 1:15 p.m.

There will be a special gate prize for the seniors again this year.

Teresa Williams, the club's contestant in the Tofield Bid-buster Rodeo Queen contest was on hand to pass out more of her tickets for sale. Each of the six contestants in this contest received their 700 tickets at the tea held at Sharon Telford's.

Coffee and lunch were served after the meeting was adjourned.

Meeting is held

by Jean Murray

At a public meeting held in Tofield on April 24th, several residents voiced their objections to the rezoning of a piece of property in the Gospel Church area where a local contractor wishes to construct a 13-suite apartment building.

A petition bearing 87 signatures, stating specific grievances, was read aloud and discussed at length.

It was noted that the outline submitted by the contractor was not adequately detailed to give an accurate picture of how his project might fit in with the General Municipal Plan of the Town of Tofield.

Provincial Municipal Planner, Mark Lawrence, felt that the major concern here was the conflicting road patterns and suggested that council work together with the contractor, the area residents and himself, to come up with an overall plan that would be satisfactory to all concerned.

It was agreed that those parties would be contacted and asked to attend a meeting to discuss Lawrence's suggestion. This meeting will be scheduled as soon as possible.

ON MAY 5, OVER 6000 YOUNG PEOPLE WILL BE CLEANING UP ALBERTA'S HIGHWAYS.

Every year on a Saturday in May, a group of young Albertans make a special effort to clean up Alberta's highways.

Over 6,000 members of our 4-H Clubs and Junior Wardens will take part in removing the litter left along Alberta's roadsides by careless motorists. More than 6,000 km of provincial primary highway right-of-way will be cleaned and about 50,000 refuse bags will be filled.

Saturday, May 5th, is the big day.*

Although these terrific young people will be wearing safety vests and bright clothing and supervised by their parents and leaders, you, as the operator of a vehicle that day, must be extra cautious.

Watch out for our young volunteers! Look for the road signs!

Please do your part. Use extra care and caution. Drive safely while these young people are on our highways.

They'll be working hard all day to make sure Alberta's highways are clean, neat and tidy for the summer season ahead.

The very least we can do is make sure they all return home safely Saturday night.

Marv Moore
Minister of Transportation
Alberta
TRANSPORTATION

In the event of inclement weather, the clean-up will take place the following Saturday, May 12th.

Dancers perform

by Jean Stacey

At a recent dance concert in Tofield, the Tofield Dance Club performed for a full house with their interpretation of these theme "Hitting the High Spots".

Each group were different ethnic costumes and danced to co-ordinating music from such countries as Switzerland, Ireland, Mexico, China and Spain.

Solos were performed by Melanie Young, Patty McDonald and Grace McKoen. Instructors, Debbie Steele and Allyson Souster from the Sherwood Park School of Dance, were guest performers.

Mrs. Elaine Porisky, dance club president, said that the emcee, Doug Herrick, had done a terrific job of introducing each act.

During intermission, three-year pins were awarded to Sharon and Carolyn Wade, Ceralee Peterson, Kathy Herricks, B.J Connelly, Michel Blades and dance instructor Allyson Souster.

Five-year pins were awarded to Grace and Elizabeth McKoen and Rami Hastings.

The Nellie Young Memorial Trophy went to most improved dancers, Carla Kope — ballet, Melanie Young — jazz and Irma Webb — tap.

Dance lessons will continue for the month of May with exams tentatively planned for May 28th. The wind-up picnic will be held at the Peter Brown farm on June 10th.

Other events the club will be participating in are the Sodbuster Rodeo with a concession stand, Heritage Days with a dance demonstration and the July 1st parade

Common Traits of Farm Women

Dr. Hiram Drache, a Minnesota farmer, professor, and agri-business consultant, has found through research, that wives of successful farmers generally possess several traits which are critical to the farm business.

— She is generally prepared to take risks. This is important in an era where farmers must borrow large amounts of money and deal with rapidly changing markets.

— She is most often the "attitude setter" in the family. The person who gets the family to cooperate to get the job done. Generally, the attitude of the mother is the key factor in whether her children will farm or not.

— She is the family's "stabilizer" in time of crisis: a critical trait where national and international events can change the farm's outlook overnight.

— She frequently shares the problems and the workload when the burden becomes too great for one person to endure.

— She often asks the key questions like why something should be done while her husband is more concerned with how it can be done.

— The final two traits found in successful farm women are motivation and pride — two traits anyone needs to succeed.

Shirt Collars

Ever had problems with collars that pucker — no matter what? When this occurs, the shirt manufacturer has made a poor choice of collar interfacing fabric. When the garment is laundered, the interfacing shrinks more than the outer layers. Because the face fabric is now larger in size than the interfacing, it is extremely difficult to get the collar to lie flat. The manufacturer is responsible.

Employment Programs for Farmers

The following are brief descriptions of the employment programs available to Alberta farmers. Please note two main points: the dates that the programs are effective and where to obtain application forms and eligibility criteria.

Alberta Wage Subsidy Program

This program, administered by Alberta Manpower, is effective from April 1, 1984 to March 31, 1985. If the application is successful, the program will reimburse the employer on an equal cost-shared basis to a maximum of $2.50 per hour. Requirements are: at least 32 hours of work per week for a period of not less than 3 continuous months and not more than 6 months. Application forms and further information can be obtained from: Special Manpower Programs, Alberta Manpower, 17th Floor, Park Square Building, 10001 Bellamy Hill, Edmonton, Ab. T5J 3W5. Phone 427-4740.

Summer Farm Employment Program

Application forms are now available from the Ryley District Office of Alberta Agriculture. Application deadline is June 1, 1984 and completed applications must be returned to the nearest Canada Farm Labour Pool office. Vegreville or Camrose would be the closest offices for farmers in the County of Beaver.

The program is effective from July 2, 1984 to August 31, 1984, with a wage subsidy, by the government, of no more than $300 per month. The other half of the employees wages is paid by the employer. Applicants must be at least 15 years of age and priority will be given to employers who did not participate in the program in 1983.

Applications will be dealt with on a first-come first-serve basis so get your application in early.

The University of Alberta is Trying

To help students obtain production experience combined with summer employment, the Department of Animal Science at the University of Alberta is taking steps to establish contact with livestock producers.

If you are aware of all the farm employment programs but really don't have anyone in particular in mind, the U of A is trying to help you in your search. We have a special form available in the office that will provide students at the University with a description of your operation. The hopeful result is that one or more students may contact you regarding employment. Please give us a call if you would like a copy of this form.

Students hired under this program may qualify for any of the Federal or Provincial employment programs now available.

Dryland Salinity

Each year, we are losing more and more productive land to soil salinity. But don't take my word for it. All you have to do is travel the countryside to see the evidence of soil salinization. The characteristic white spots on the fields and the white rings around the sloughs are the symptoms of the problem. Little or no crop growth in these areas are the results. And no, liming will not correct the problem.

These white spots occur when soil water, laden with dissolved salts from lower depths, moves up through the soil profile. The water evaporates and the salts are left behind on the surface.

Unfortunately, at the present time, the only realistic way we can deal with many of these situations is to intercept the water flow before it reaches the surface, and the most inexpensive way of doing this is by cropping management.

The root system of a crop is very instrumental in intercepting this water and leaving the salts at lower depths. Forages, such as alfalfa, are very good at this, as they use much more water than most crops and because of their deep rooting nature, they intercept the water at lower depths. Certainly we can't solve all our salt problems by seeding everything down to forages — the economics just don't allow it. However, growing a forage, cereal or oilseed crop on salt affected land each year is a possibility.

Yes, I'm attacking the age-old tradition of summerfallowing. Leaving economic and perennial weed-control considerations off to the side for just a moment, the practice of summerfallowing is probably one of the main contributors to soil salinization. The alternatives to summerfallow are many and I won't get into them here. They can be obtained from any D.A. office

Once again, don't take my word for it. The next time you're driving the country side, take notice of which fields show more salt. Are they the ones that have been continuously cropped or the ones that are summerfallowed on a regular basis?

Drop-in has opening

by Joan Murray

The official grand opening ceremonies for the Tofield Golden Club Senior Citizen's Drop-in Centre took place on Friday afternoon.

Retired Mayor, Dr. W.H. Freebury, was on hand to snip the ribbon for the opening.

Members of the head table for this event were Golden Club president, Robert Scott; Mayor, Charlie Sears; former Mayor, Dr. W.H. Freebury and his wife; County Reeve, John Warner and his wife; New Horizons representative, Don Mayne, organizer and first president, Bertha Phillips; original entertainment committee member, Myrtle Nerland and building overseer, George Lee.

Master of Ceremonies, Pete Korbie, introduced each member of the head table who, in their turn, said a few words about the club and the building of the centre.

The Golden Club originated in 1973 and was incorporated in 1974.

This new centre was started in 1983 and is composed of the old Fire Hall Building with a new section built on the west side of the fire hall, extending toward the street. The land and fire hall are leased from the Town of Tofield.

Letters of congratulations and best wishes were received from M.P. Don Mazankowski, MLA Walter Buck and Municipal Health and Welfare.

New Horizons representative, Don Mayne, presented the club with a certificate of merit for their success in completing this project.

New Horizons is a government organization that supports projects done by senior citizens. They do not contribute to projects done by others for senior citizens. The work must be done by the seniors themselves.

The Golden Club is now officially open to residents who wish to drop-in and have coffee, play cards and pool or who just want to visit with others.

Lodge officially opens

by Joan Murray

The grand opening of the Holden Lodge took place on Sunday afternoon.

Master of ceremonies, Oleh Shykora, introduced the following platform guests, MLA John Batiuk; Reeve John Warner; Mayor Kevin Stambaugh; Ted Van de Giessen, project manager of Alberta Housing Corporation; Victor Romaniuk, Beaver Foundation; Rev Sheski; Joe Galbund, resident of Holden Lodge; William Holden, architect; Eugene Wolski, building contractor; and Ed Albrecht, member of the Holden Lodge Management Board.

Many of these gentlemen spoke of the struggle to acquiring a facility for senior citizens that would be equivalent to others around the province. It was also mentioned how beautiful the building is and that those in residence seemed to be settling in quite well.

There was a short musical interlude for the entertainment of residents and guests performed by Mrs. Janet Winsnes and the Ryley Ladies Quartet.

John Batiuk performed the unveiling of the ceremonial plaque and presented the Alberta flag to Joe Galbund.

Mayor Kevin Stambaugh, on behalf of the Village of Holden, presented the Lodge with an oil painting done by a local artist.

Following the opening ceremonies, guests were invited to remain for refreshments and a tour of the residence.

The Beaver Foundation sponsors and manages Holden Lodge.

Members of the Lodge Management Board are Kevin Stambaugh, Victor Romaniuk and Ed Albrecht.

The building was designed by Hnidan Architect Ltd., and contains 44 beds, including two rooms especially designed for handicapped individuals.

Wolski Building Contractors Ltd., of Camrose, constructed the Lodge.

The approximate cost, including renovations, was $1,661,388, and it was financed by Alberta Housing Corporation through the Alberta Investment Division of the Heritage Savings Trust Fund.

The Provincial Government will also assume responsibility for any deficits incurred in the operation of the residence.

Safe graduation set

by Joan Murray

To promote the theme "Make the Most of a Good Thing, Make the Most of You" and to promote the need for safety at graduation time, AADAC (Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission) donated a cheque on April 19th for $280 to Tofield School Safe-Grad Committee and the forty-one graduating students.

Grade twelve students at Tofield School have accepted the challenge of co-ordinating safe-grad activities in conjunction with this year's graduation ceremonies. They selected a committee, chaired by Sandra Shewchuk, to organize and promote such a program.

The first component of the program was a film and discussion on the dangers of drinking and driving and the hazards which could arise at graduation parties and bashes. Logs and bumper stickers were distributed.

To help set the tone for the graduation ceremony and party, the committee decided that an interdenominational church service will be held in the Tofield United Church at 7:30 p.m. on May 31st before the graduation ceremony. This service will be open to all graduating students, their parents and other relatives.

Half of the monies received from AADAC will be used to pay a nominal fee to responsible students with valid driver's licences, to transport students to and from the party site on June 1st. This taxi service would also insure that all graduating students arrive safely at the grad breakfast on the morning of June 2nd.

The other half of the $280 will be used to pay for the morning-after breakfast at the Shewchuk residence, which will begin at 7:30 a.m. and is open to all graduating students and their parents.

Mother's Day?

Maybe the eve of Mother's Day is a ridiculous time to look at divorce law in our country, but on the other hand, maybe it's a most appropriate time.

It's only days ago that a nation-wide survey publicized its findings that marriage is a worse deal for women today than it was half a century or more ago. It used to provide security of a kind, and at one level or another. Today, despite our 'progress', our emancipation, our women's lib, our equal treatment, it doesn't even offer the security it did half a century or more ago.

Indeed, the survey found women are considerably worse off.

The finding seems to be reinforced by an Ontario Supreme Court Judge who ruled recently that a wife had made significant contributions to her husband's career, and took this into account in determining support levels he (the husband) must pay following their divorce.

40 years old, her lawyer-husband had a potential annual income of $165,000 a year, the judge noted. So in consideration of the help she contributed (such as helping put him through law school, working both before and after the birth of their child, and so on . . . all very minor contributions obviously,) the judge ordered that she get $30,000, his half of the family home, plus $1,250 monthly for two years. $50,000 over two years, then nothing. Plus a home she can't afford to keep. While he gets $165,000 a year. It seems obvious she'll treasure Mother's Day, doesn't it?

On the other hand, the Supreme Court, by a ruling of five to none, seems to have said the 'capital-base theory' used in Saskatchewan to decrease the assets wives get after a divorce, is "wholly incompatible" with the thrust of the province's Matrimonial Act. By so doing, it seems to have vindicated the appeal of a woman who recently was cut from one half of the assets being reviewed in a divorce case to one third of them.

So what are we saying to women as we move closer to this Mother's Day? More insecurity? More inequality in pay scales? More inferior jobs? More rape? More brutality? More beating? Or more appreciation? More love and reverence? More warmth, more acceptance, more recognition?

Mothers will settle for so very little. The tragedy is that usually we give them so much less. How thin can we shave the veneer of progress, of civilization?

Recycling

Only about ten percent of the paper used in Alberta is currently being recycled, according to the Waste Management Branch of Alberta Environment.

Much more will be needed over the next three to five years to meet an export demand for used paper to be recycled into building materials such as roofing felt, gypsum paper, insulation, and other new products.

This sounds great until you stop to think about it. Camrose is probably very much like most of the rest of the province, and there are many people here who would be happy to recycle more. Paper. Bottles. Tin cans, and many other things.

But the "system" seems to make it so very hard to recycle. There have been times when we couldn't even find room for all our old newspapers in the trailer which carries them back to the shredding plant. And if we can't get rid of ten percent, how can we find access to facilities for more?

By and large, we would bet most Albertans are anxious to protect the environment we've inherited. They want to reduce the amount of sanitary landfill, where possible, to reduce the amount needed for incineration, and if it takes a little more effort to recycle, they'd gladly jump on the bandwagon. You've only to look at the 4-H effort to clean up the highways last week-end to be convinced of that.

But let's make the facilities easily available. Let's tell people the facilities are available. Let's tell them the Boy Scouts, or the Girl Guides, or the Air Cadets, 4-H or Junior Achievement or somebody, needs the extra few dollars that recycling will bring. It could be the churches, or the schools, or the seniors. No matter the group . . . we'll all pitch in . . . we just want to be convinced there's room, and there's need.

Loose Ends

by Carol Livingstone

WHEN IS MOTHER'S DAY?

Mother's Day is labor pains, jokes about 2 a.m. feedings, and spitting up.

Mother's Day is firsts — that first smile, first tooth, first step and first lispy word, and bragging about them at coffee parties.

Mother's Day is potty training.

Mother's Day is surviving the Terrible Twos and Threes, the Fearsome Fours and Fives and crying when the first day of school arrives.

Mother's Day is nursing [illegible], scraped knees and walking the floor with high fevers.

Mother's Day is crayon marks, training wheels, rock collections and making a tree costume for the school concert.

Mother's Day is patching jeans, baking cookies, 4-letter words and allowances.

Mother's Day is being called the meanest mother on the block because you won't allow a room to go uncleaned for another week and insist that all homework be done by the student.

Mother's Day is birthday parties, swimming lessons, chess clubs, intramurals and leading a cheer in a cold arena on Saturday morning.

Mother's Day is loud music, video games and curfews.

Mother's Day is giggles, long talks and "Thanks, Mom, I knew you'd understand."

Mother's Day is growing pains and puppy love.

Mother's Day is worrying about straight A's, the neighborhood bully, peer groups, puberty, drug abuse, secondary education and nuclear war.

Mother's Day is having to look up when you take disciplinary action.

Mother's Day is an empty bedroom and collect calls asking for money.

Mother's Day is love and trust, caring, hope and pride.

Mother's Day is every day.

Dist. Agriculturist

JEROME MANCHUR

Hi! Once again we may have to worry about bugs in our crops. Hopefully, grasshoppers and cutworms won't be a problem, but I thought a little background information is always good to have. The following comments from Mike Dolinski, Supervisor of Entomology with Alberta Agriculture, are guidelines for control of grasshoppers and cutworms.

Grasshopper Control in Alberta 1984

The revised Agricultural Pests Act should be proclaimed some time in June; until proclamation, we will be functioning under the present act. Once the act is passed, local governments will be able to make the producers adjacent to roadsides responsible for grasshopper control to the middle of the road by passing a local bylaw, as is the practice under the Weed Control Act.

Chemical controls may be necessary in some, if not most, parts of Alberta. Chemical supplies are in place to start the program and the suppliers have made arrangements to move products into Alberta as demand dictates. I don't foresee a supply problem.

The products available for control of hoppers on cereals this year will be Furadan, Sevin XLR, malathion, Monitor and Lorsban. Information on all aspects of each product are included in the "Blue Book", Guide to Crop Protection in Alberta.

Cutworm Control

Pale western and red-backed cutworm are expected to be widespread in southern and central Alberta. Both destroy seedling crops. Damage usually starts on hills and south-facing slopes of fields. The plants will usually be cut and consumed in large patches, but in severe infestations whole fields will be destroyed if controls are not applied.

The cutworms feed during the night and chemical controls should be applied late in the evening for best control. Lorsban, Ambush and Decis are registered for control. Examining your fields regularly for cutworms, during the seedling period of crop growth, is a good idea. Again, insecticides will be available and the prices of recommended products will be very competitive.

Between the Covers

Tofield Library is lucky to be the first in the province to acquire copies of the newly published book by Peggy Holmes, "Never a Dull Moment". Autographed copies were purchased from the author last Friday and are ready for circulation now.

Also on the new book table, look for Judy Blume's new adult novel, "Smart Women", about two divorced women and their families.

The third volume in the Sackett series is here, containing four more titles. For those interested in the north, "Georgia: An Arctic Diary" will be a good read. "Firefox" fans will be ready to read the sequel, "Firefox Down", by Craig Thomas.

The "One-Minute" series has been well-received, so the new book "Putting the One-Minute Manager to Work" by Kenneth Blanchard and Robert Lorber should be very useful as well. The library also has the titles One-Minute Manager, Father, & Mother.

The winners in the Grade Four poster contest advertising last week's author visits were Tracy Wideman, Keith Reichenbach, Ken Clouston and Kris McBurney. Mrs. Bellingham presented their book prizes when the classes visited the library to hear her talk on book publishing.

The winners in the Trivia Canada contest were: Senior Division: Janet Nahirniak, Lennie and Susie Gomez [illegible] Junior Division: Tied for first, Patti and Candy Macdonald, Richard Chubaty, Jacob Wyman and Jim Hoskins, tied for second: Keith Reichenbach, Christopher Wiens, Jason Siverns, Brent [illegible] Kevin Sommer, Jeremy Cunn[illegible] Nahirniak, Michelle Steinhusen, Jason and Kevin Livingstone, Jody Krystal, Kevin Krystal, and Melody Sommer.

Those who did not receive their prizes from Mrs. Holmes at the author reading on Friday may come in and pick them up from the Librarian.

Congratulations to all who entered the contests and did so well!

There are still a few places left in the Preschool Story Hour sessions on Tuesday and Friday mornings 10 a.m. Booktime for children in K-3 runs on Tuesdays at 4 p.m. with a registration of $2.00 for the next eight weeks. Please call 662-3838 to register for any of the above programs.

Library hours are: Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-5 and 6-8; Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-5.

People are cruel

May 2, 1984
[illegible]
[illegible]

Dear Sir

On April 30, between 7 and 8 p.m. people driving a dark coloured late model Ford pick-up abandoned a dog at a deserted acreage in the Miquelon Lake region, forty some miles southeast of Edmonton.

I would like your readers (and I hope these people are among them) to know how the dog behaved after the abandonment. The dog ran frantically down the road in the direction the truck left and then back to where the truck had been parked. The screams (and they were screams), the total despair was no different than if it had been a child that these people had abandoned.

When people decide to bring a child into their lives, they take on a commitment to provide for and share with that child until it is ready to be an independent adult.

When people decide to bring an animal into their lives, they take on a commitment to provide for and share with that animal for all it's life.

Who are these people who abandoned the dog?

They have to be someone's family, someone's relatives, someone's neighbours or friends.

Do they talk about how they abandoned the dog?

Do they wonder what the dog is doing?

I can tell them that the dog is out there somewhere hungry, lost and desperately looking for the people that he once trusted.

Yours truly,
Gene Elsert

If you might not be home on Saturday morning, please place your bottles and/or paper donation on your front step or, at the end of your driveway.

Also on Saturday, at 10 a.m., a registration for minor baseball will be held at Spilstead Hall. If not enough children are registered to make up teams, the minor ball for Spilstead will be cancelled and registration fees returned to those who have already registered.

On Saturday evening, the Spilstead Community League is holding its spring dance. Tickets are available from any members of the executive, at Ed's Store or, at the door.

On Sunday morning, at 10 a.m., the Spilstead Pathfinders are having a Mother's Day Pancake Breakfast. This endeavour is the big one for the Pathfinders to earn some funds to help cover the costs of their summer camps. The girls are also available to do any odd jobs, such as mowing lawns, painting, washing windows, etc. If you have any jobs for them, please call either Ardel or Margaret, whose phone numbers are already in this column.

Council meets

by Joan Murray

At a special meeting of Tofield Town Council, several budgetary issues were discussed.

It was agreed that reserve monies would be "unfrozen" to accommodate improvements to be made at the Tofield Fairgrounds. The fairground committee's plans for new fencing of the ball diamonds and for landscaping the area, can now go ahead.

The Department of Municipal Affairs have been invited to attend the next council meeting on May 14th, to discuss accounting procedures.

It is not yet known if there will be any change in the mill rate for local taxpayers.

More concrete information regarding the budget will be available at the next meeting of Town Council.

Meeting held

by Joan Murray

On April 28th, a meeting of Rural Development Project was held to discuss the next steps to take towards improving medical services in rural areas.

Mel Warren, project co-ordinator from Holden, said that small towns like Myrnam, Mundare and Willingdon are major areas of concern because their hospitals need more than one doctor to cover their needs but, the area is too small to attract more.

One suggestion brought up at this meeting was to have the three hospitals form an association whereby the three doctors (one from each town) could have hospital privileges in each area and rotate on a regular basis in order to relieve the work load for one doctor.

Another idea was to have the nurses upgrade their training to a level similar to that of a paramedic to enable them to maintain the hospitals.

It is hoped that the next meeting will be attended by a representative from the College of Physicians and Surgeons who may be able to answer questions and clear up any misunderstanding or misinformation that the project members might have.

Delegates from each area will be asked to invite members of their communities from the media, Chamber of Commerce and the hospital board to attend this meeting.

Scholarship offered

by Joan Murray

The Tofield Lioness Club will once gain offer a $500 post-secondary education scholarship to graduating students of Tofield High School.

But, because of declining membership in the club, it may not be available next year.

Membership has declined to five and two ladies are moving away from the area soon. Lioness club secretary, Eileen Harper said that unless the number could be increased, the club would no longer be able to function and would cease to exist.

They meet on the first Tuesday of every month and anyone can join. One does not have to have a spouse in the Lions Club to become a member. Most of their funds are raised by cooking for the Lions Club.

If more ladies could be encouraged to join, the club hopes to promote a drug awareness program in the schools and would like to increase their involvement in The Canadian Institute for the Blind Association.

Applicants for the scholarship offered this year must send a copy of their marks and a letter stating why they are applying for this scholarship.

Donations should be sent to Mrs. Eileen Harper, Box 240, Tofield, by August 15th or phone 662-4161 or 662-2870.

Conditions of the scholarship are based on the applicants needs, scholastic ability, choice of program importance, and apparent commitment as well as the location of the course.

It will be presented some time in September of 1984.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Tofield Lioness Club may call Mrs. Harper at the above numbers.

Crib club ends year

Since the Tofield Crib Club moved to the Drop-in Centre at the beginning of March, they have held five tournaments with an average of twenty people attending.

First place trophies went to Janet Gagne, John Fisher, Josie Paulson, Sandy Scott and Joe Murray.

Second place went to Joe Murray, Hans Henningson, Ted Wood, Art Williams and Linda Scott.

Lowest scores of the day went to June Winslow, Nola Wood, Mildred Wood, Helen Murray and Hans Henningson.

Overall highest score for the year 1983-84 went to Hans Henningson.

The crib club has now closed for the summer.

Powerline is set

No changes are expected for the Powerline Baseball League for the upcoming 1984 season.

The league will operate with the same eight teams it has had in the past.

Each team in the league will play 14 games in their schedule. Many of the teams will hold a couple of tournaments this summer as well as competing in the league.

The season starts on May 17 and will run until July 3, providing they don't have rainouts. When the season is over and rainouts have been played, the playoffs will begin.

The top four teams in the league will advance to the playoffs. All the series in the playoffs will be a best of three.

Teams in the baseball league are Armena, Ryley, Camrose, Holden, Tofield, Bardo, Viking and Round Hill. The schedule will be the same as last year as well.

Lars Rude of Tofield will again be the president of the league. Also elected to return to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Powerline Baseball League was Jack Lampitt. He is also from Tofield.

Bardo has fixed their diamond and have made some renovations to the ball facility they have. In the past, the park needed work but, it wasn't until this year the improvements were made.

Most of the teams are set for the season to start. Round Hill could use some more players on their team but the rest of the teams are set.

Umpire are always needed in baseball and if someone is interested in umpiring they can contact the league office at 662-2285.

Armena has scheduled two tournaments at their home diamond. On June 3 and July 22 they will host a baseball tournament. Other teams have not announced their dates for tournaments.

Horsemen hold seniors' day

Katchemut Creek Family Horse Club held its second annual Seniors' Day on Sunday.

Despite the cold and wind, there was a good crowd on hand to watch the events of the afternoon.

The first event was the costume class. Two seniors from the crowd were asked to judge. The judges, Bob Scott and Bill Tiedeman, had many good costumes to choose from. Dianne Harper, dressed as a painter, complete with pail and brush, and her horse Chico, attired in paint-stained pants, won first prize. Second place was taken by two-year-old clown, Colleen Shaw. Suzie Wood, dressed as a bear, won third.

The chariot race was next with the first heat between Ed Gustavson and Kasey Krystal with Kasey winning. The second heat was between Jack Gustavson and Walter Krystal. This was Jack and his team's first race and also the first race for Walter's mule team. Walter won by .02 of a second.

Many of the events for the day were novelty, rather than gymkhana; some including horses and som just on foot. First came double barrels, which is a barrel race done in pairs. Only one pair, Suzie Wood and Heather Shannon, completed the cloverleaf pattern without losing their hold on the rope. Five-year-old Kristy Krystal ran the pattern without a partner.

Polebending, a regular gymkhana event, was won by 1. Rhonda Wood 2. Suzie Wood and Kristy Krystal tied 3. Shawn Lovell.

The Boot Race was divided into two classes, seniors and intermediates: 1. Teresa Williams 2. Angela Wood 3. Tracy Shannon.

Juniors and pee wees: 1. Suzie Wood 2. Shawn Lovell 3. Heather Shannon.

Egg and spoon race, senior and intermediate: 1. Renee King 2. Angela Wood 3. Tracy Shannon.

Juniors, pee wees and good sports: 1. Shawn Lovell 2. Monique Petram 3. Phil Lovell.

Musical tires, senior and intermediate: 1. Gord Hardy 2. Dianne Harper 3. Tannies Lovell.

Junior, pee wees and good sports: 1. Suzie Wood 2. Rhonda Wood 3. Jim Fehr.

Intermission was called at this time. During intermission Ruth Hardy gave a demonstration of some dressage manouvers with her horse, Pedro. As soon as intermission was over there was a balloon race for the pee wee class. The kiddies, seven years and under, rode their horse (or were doubled, or led) down the arena to where some girls waited with inflated balloons. They had to dismount, break a balloon, remount and ride back to the starting line. 1. Jenny MacCormac 2. Kristy Krystal 3. Colleen Shaw.

The second chariot race was then run with Kasey Krystal and Ed Gustavson in the first heat. Kasey was again the winner with Ed less than a second behind. The second heat saw Jack Gustavson beat Walter Krystal's mule team by a good margin.

The dress-up race, done in pairs, was won by Angela Wood and Gord Hardy. Second, Tannies Lovell and Shawn Lovell and third Renee King and Jim Fehr.

Flag picking: 1. Suzie Wood 2. Shawn Lovell 3. Heather Shannon.

Stake race: 1. Gord Hardy 2. Teresa Williams 3. Karry Krystal.

There was a gate prize draw for the Senior Citizens only, won by Irene Scott. Winner of the club draw held at each club event was Norma Smith.

A special guest attraction was Ted Holden from Bruce, riding his three-year-old mule, Marmaduke. Although Ted and Marmaduke are new to gymkhana, he entered most events and proved that mules can do it too! Ted enjoyed himself and assured the club they would come back again.

The concession booth was handled by members of Tofield Legion, freeing social conveners Anne Neufeld and Catherine Brewster to participate in the days events. Their help was greatly appreciated.

The next club event is the regular meeting on May 16 at 8 p.m. in Beaverhill Family Centre.

Authors speak

by Jean Murray

During National Library Week, April 30th to May 5th, Tofield Library was the scene of author readings by two Alberta writers.

On Friday morning, children's book author, Brenda Bellingham of Sherwood Park, entertained children from Mrs. Sinclair's grade 4 class and Miss Lonsgard's grade 3 class (both from Tofield School) with a review of her book "Jonnie's Magic Boots".

In the afternoon, she was heard by Mrs. Finlay's grade 4 class as well as by all the Tofield Brownie Pack.

The children received autographed bookmarks as a memento of the occasion. Those who purchased her book were able to have it autographed.

Canada's oldest broadcaster, Peggy Holmes, was on hand that afternoon to speak to the local townspeople. She is 86 years old and has compiled two novels regarding the hardships of pioneering. Her speech was humorous and well received by all those in attendance.

Tofield studies FCSS

by Joan Murray

At the regular council meeting of the Town of Tofield on Monday, council expressed considerable interest in having a Family and Community Support Service (FCSS) program for the Town.

Evelyn Nelson, Alberta Social Services consultant, was on hand to inform council of the existance of such a program and gave a presentation on services FCSS could provide.

She said that the FCSS is a municipal-provincial relationship program brought into existence to strengthen families and communities. A lot of problems develop in communities that could have been prevented had there been someone available to recognize them sooner. The government is unable to assess local problems as well as local people can.

FCSS can help by co-ordinating services already in place to prevent overlap or lack of services. This would enable the town to enjoy better and more efficient social help where needed.

Nelson said, "Nearly every community in Alberta has this program and I don't like to see my home community without such a service."

The program is offered to the town on a cost shared basis whereby government provides 80 percent of funding and the municipality is responsible for the remaining 20 percent. Application has to be made to the Department of Health and Welfare and if accepted, the town would have to enter into an agreement with the Department as well as provide an annual audit and report for the Minister of Health and Welfare.

It is recommended that a director be hired to carry out the necessary administrations of the FCSS program, otherwise the task falls to volunteers and may not be as efficient.

If the community does not wish to operate alone, there is an option which allows them to work with other municipalities to form a regional program.

The Town of Viking is presently operating an FCSS program with considerable success. Council plans to invite their director to a future meeting to gain more information.

Don Kambrat, Tofield Lions Parks Committee Chairman, informed council of plans to upgrade the Lions Playground. They hope to do some painting and groundwork and to replace the poplar trees that were cut down earlier this year. The committee will work with Parks and Recreation in regards to tree replacement.

The property that council had tentatively chosen for the transfer station for the regional landfill program was not approved by the Vegreville Health Unit. Therefore, they are back to square one as to where the site will be located but, they do have several other pieces of property under consideration.

Ed Thomlinson and Wayne Morse, inspectors from Municipal Affairs, appeared before council to discuss the 1964 budget. They suggested several financing alternatives that would help the town to remain in a healthy cash flow position. Their main purpose in attending the meeting was to act in an advisory capacity only and to give information and advice regarding municipal financing in the future.

Town Administrator, Lari Pilon, will attend a municipal administration refresher course in Banff on June 3rd to 6th.

Ryley seeks new plant

. . . for waste disposal

by Joan Murray

The Council of the Village of Ryley has been working with Kinetic Ecological Resource Group people for some weeks to put in place a lease agreement on village owned land, which will make it possible for the Village of Ryley to have a special waste disposal plant.

Ryley Mayor, Bob Cross met with the president of Kinetic, Gerald Gerke, at a press conference held in Edmonton.

They announced the finalization of a lease and development agreement for the construction and operation of an integrated special waste treatment facility to be located within the municipal boundaries of the Village of Ryley, provided all the necessary permits can be obtained.

The village is prepared to lease this property rather than sell it to Kinetic because it enables them to have control of the land and can close down operations if the lease is violated. The operation is designed in such a way that it could be expanded if the waste grows in volume.

It is a different type of operation than the one proposed for Swan Hills in that the waste is not burned, it is imbedded in molten salt, and would have no landfilling in connection with this process.

During village involvement in the siting of the plant that is now to go to the Swan Hills area, advantages of having an industrial facility in Ryley became apparent.

With the lack of employment opportunities in the area, the decline in school population and the high cost of providing services, they were extremely interested when first approached by Kinetic.

The operation and method of dealing with the waste at Kinetic's waste storage operation at Nisku was examined by council members and found to be satisfactory.

Kinetic has committed themselves to employing as much local help as possible. The plant will employ about 45 to 50 people.

Mayor Cross has stated that this facility was always wanted by the people of Ryley and to date, he has had no negative feedback from the people.

Kinetic President Gerald Gerke confirmed that they are serious about this project and are at this moment preparing a proposal involving the Ryley site which, on completion, will be submitted to the Alberta Government for approval.

Technical details and specifications of the facility will be released at a later date.

Break-ins occur

The IGA grocery store in Tofield was broken into, possibly during the early morning hours of May 16th.

The intruders entered the premises by breaking the front door window. Goods were stolen but, no other damage was apparent. They exited through the back door of the building.

The Tofield RCMP Detachment is undergoing an extensive investigation in this matter.

There were also signs of an attempted break-in at the Owl Drug Mart but, the suspects did not gain entry to this building.

As this occured during the same time period as the IGA break-in, it was thought that the same persons were suspect in this case as well.

County seeks new fire chief

by Joan Murray

The County of Beaver will see a new fire chief in the very near future.

At a regular council meeting on Thursday, Laurie Weatherill, present County Fire Chief and Agricultural Fieldman, requested that council replace him as chief so that he might devote all his time to agricultural affairs. He will be available as County Fire Chief until a replacement can be appointed.

Council expressed their appreciation for the time and effort Weatherill has given to fire department matters during his appointment. Because two members of council, including the chairman of the fire committee, Don Monaghan, were absent, they felt it was best to postpone the acceptance of Weatherill's request until the next council meeting on May 26th.

A delegation representing the six county fire departments were concerned about the change of chiefs. Before going to this meeting they were not sure if a new chief was going to be appointed and had been under the impression that the fire committee composed of Victor Romaniuk, Don Monaghan and John Warner would be taking over these duties as a joint body.

Their fears were laid to rest when council assured them that there would be a county fire chief to take over the duties that Weatherill had performed in the past.

Council said the delegation's recommendations and concerns would be taken into consideration and that Weatherill could still take part as a member of the Tofield Fire Department if he so wished. They were assured of being notified of council's decision as soon as it was made.

Appreciation and praise of their fine fire service and volunteer work was expressed by council. Their work involving major incidents was especially noted.

A group of truckers, with Sandy Suchy as their spokesman, were on hand at the meeting to dispute the outcome of a recent tender regarding gravel hauling that was sent out by the County of Beaver.

They felt that the gravel contract had discrepancies in the wording that led seven of the ten bidders to assume that the bids were to be submitted on a tonne per kilometer basis only and as a result these seven companies had built a loading factor into their final bid.

Spokesman Suchy said that

Rodeo promoted

by Joan Murray

There is a little more than a week left before the Sodbuster Rodeo in Tofield begins.

Queen contestants were selling tickets and buttons to promote the rodeo at the Farmers Market on Friday. Almost all their tickets have been sold.

Rodeo queen contestants are judged 40 percent on ticket sales, 40 percent on horsemanship and 20 percent for congeniality.

The top scorer in all three catagories will be crowned as the second annual Sodbuster Rodeo Queen on May 27th.

The contestants also judged the poster contest entries at the Farmers Market with the following results:

Ryan Carlson (5 years old); Lea Hyrbachuk and Jennifer Lee (7); Ross Suchy (8); Kevin Sommers (9); and Richard Armstrong (10). All the winners were from Tofield.

The support of the poster contest was overwhelming with almost 200 posters to be judged.

Each winner will receive three free rodeo passes.

Easier metric

Judy Erola has announced from Ottawa that government forces won't push the metrication of Canada as hard as has been done in the past, yielding finally to the mass of public opinion, backed up by the courts, that such extreme pressure wasn't warranted.

So grocery stores can advertise, and price both ways. So can many other centres. . .

We're not against metric . . . we're just opposed to the completely unreasonable and irrational use of government muscle in rapidly expediting the switch, against all reason.

Sure, there's merit in metric. But tell that to a farmer whose land is surveyed in miles, sections and acres. Tell that to a carpenter who is repairing an existing building. Tell that to a container manufacturer whose customers still must meet public demand in old-time sizes.

Where is the merit in hard conversion, so that we buy only products in the 1,000, 500 or 250 unit size, as opposed to the myriad of convenient sizes we used to have? What is wrong with King Size, with Giant Size, with Family Size? when occasion and promotion warrant it?

Are we letting the Liberals on the Metric Commission tell us that Technocracy really had its good points? Will women's fashions be next to be 'standardized' in the name of efficiency, of economy, of practicality?

By contrast, we read the Metric Commission's own comments on metric conversion in the United States, which they consider 'inevitable'. But they go on to say "This growth will come on a product-by-product basis." Without government compulsion. As the market place indicates.

So, too, is their report of metric in Great Britain, with both levels of prices being shown on many products, and where they have recognized, and accepted, especially as part of the EEC, that conversion is only a matter of time. True to the British pattern, they're not suggesting time be looked on as a matter of months . . . they're thinking in terms of, possibly thirty, even fifty, years. They know it's really all in the hands of the young . . . as they move more and more to metric, and as they gain more and more in numbers, imperial will simply fade away.

New Alyth computer aids major rail car increase

CALGARY — A new $8.7-million computer system at CP Rail's Alyth marshalling yard is receiving a share of credit for a major increase in the number of freight cars handled during 1983.

Calgary Division Superintendent Mike Stroick said today a total of 706,353 freight cars were handled at Alyth during the year, an increase of 58,431 cars — or nine per cent — over 1982. This is the second largest number of cars handled in Alyth's history. More than 744,000 were handled in 1979.

"Although CP Rail was setting traffic records through the fall and we naturally experienced a corresponding increase in what we handled at Alyth, the new system greatly improved our ability to handle cars while, at the same time, it enabled us also to improve the time yard locomotives took moving cars through the yard," Mr. Stroick said.

He said 6,376 engine hours were trimmed from the 1982 total of 100,200 hours — a decrease of more than six per cent. "This is significant in that an engine costs more than $136 an hour to operate", Mr. Stroick said.

The new system — a General Railway Signals Data General Eclipse Process Control computer (GRS) — went into full operation at Alyth in September, making the yard one of North America's most sophisticated and technologically advanced.

"More than a decade ago, when automated rail yards were still in their infancy, rail yard designers were looking at developments at Alyth when planning for the future. Much the same can be said today," Mr. Stroick said.

In essence, the GRS system is an automated yard operator. It works in concert with another state-of-the-art computer system — the Yard Activity Reporting and Decision System (YARDS), developed by CP Rail and [illegible] Systems, and implemented in [illegible].

GRS controls virtually every aspect of Alyth's "humping" operation. The hump is a gentle hill or ramp adjacent to Alyth's control tower. When trains roll into Calgary, the road locomotives and cabooses are removed for servicing and yard "switcher" locomotives take over.

The switchers haul strings of freight cars to the "lead" track, from which the cars are pushed up to the crest of the hump. From there, individual cars are allowed to roll down the hump toward an assigned track in the 48-track classification yard where train sets are "built" before being sent out of Calgary.

Using a combination of mini-computers and dedicated micro-processors, the GRS computer acts as a total monitoring system, providing precise control from the hump to the classification yard.

GRS weighs each car at the hump, sets the exact speed for a car's descent to the classification yard by operating sets of in-track brakes [illegible] "retarders" and [illegible] track switches to send a car to its assigned track.

As each car begins to roll down the hump, radar and other electronic detectors give it a complete scan. Other sensitive equipment determines a car's "rollability" by collecting a variety of date including the type of wheel bearing on the car as well as wind speed and direction, and other weather conditions.

The information is automatically fed to GRS and stored. All the while, GRS is electronically linked ot the YARDS computer to ensure an uninterrupted flow of data to yard co-ordinators and other CP Rail employees.

In effect, YARDS is the GRS system's supervisor. It is designed to deliver — in an instant — complete information concerning location, origin, destination, contents and handling instructions for each of the almost 2,000 freight cars handled each day at Alyth.

YARDS renders complete car histories and traces the movement of every car within Calgary division jurisdiction. In fact, any authorized CP Rail employee can instantly obtain complete information about any car anywhere on the railway system by calling up the car number on a video display terminal.

Calgary's system is linked to CP Rail's main computer systems in Montreal and Toronto.

Gratitude

Along with the regular invoice for gas service, we recently received an 'Important Message' from a utility describing the Natural Gas Price Protection Plan, and how it operates.

Part of the message was an injunction to tell our MLA how much we value the Price Protection Plan. "Several . . . MLA's . . . have received many letters thanking them for the ($100.00) Senior Citizens Home Heating Rebate, but not . . . one letter of gratitude for the Price Protection Plan . . ."

To most users the Price Protection Plan would be worth a good deal more than the assistance offered the Seniors, at least in terms of dollars, so our seeming lack of gratitude is remarkable. We can think of two reasons, the first being that possibly citizens below the level of Seniors feel they don't have time to write such letters, the second being that the thing seems so complicated they don't really know how to express themselves.

It starts with the Alberta Border Price, computes the Support Price at 65 percent of that figure, then establishes the Field Price as the Border Price less the Alberta Cost of Service, (still with us) and finally determines that Price Protection equals the Field Price less the Support Price. It all sounds terribly logical, doesn't it, unless you don't happen to have any idea of how they establish Cost of Service, or why the support price works out at 65 percent, and so on.

We're sure the MLA's hardly have to be told that any price protection is welcome, indeed most Albertans figure they don't get enough price protection. After all, they point out, the gas is ours, and if we weren't so intent on selling it, or if Ottawa didn't gouge such heavy taxes on it, we'd be facing far lower prices.

All of which may be true. It's probably also true that unemployment would be far higher than it is, that far fewer revenues would be supporting both current expenditures and the Heritage Fund, and that taxes would have to be higher if royalties were so much lower.

But if MLA's aren't getting messages of appreciation, it's because people don't want to look silly trying to discuss a complex scheme they don't understand or they feel they're entitled to this much and more.

Dear Sir:

Alcohol, sometimes referred to as a political drug or political holy water, is authorized for sale by our very friendly and sometimes gracious politicians. Politicians know that, while under the influence of alcohol, people have been known to kill, rape, maim, abuse and get sick; yet alcohol is readily available to nearly everyone for a price.

On the other hand, alcohol creates jobs, which makes our politicians look as if they really cared. Our hospitals are overcrowded due to alcohol-related diseases, injuries and pregnant teenagers. Our jails are over-crowded with young and old because of alcohol-related crimes. It is hard to imagine how politicians must feel, realizing how many jobs are created through using alcohol to stimulate the economy with sickness and crime.

Although the public may disagree with the idea of using sickness and crime to create jobs, politicians continue to do as they please, whether the public likes it or not. This is their definition of a participatory democracy. Politicians have people working for them who tell us it is our right to use alcohol! It's all so encouraging. They insist that to stop people from using alcohol is impossible. I disagree with them and herewith offer a sure way of curbing alcohol use. Merely turn the job over to the Minister of Revenue Canada and his officials and employees. They can use the same brutal tactics on those who sell and use alcohol as are used on those who do not pay income tax. With such a system, everyone would be guilty and would have to prove his innocence. There would be no pleading "not guilty" and no jury trials. When you think of it, the law should be the same for everyone; our Charter of Rights states that everyone is equal before the law (15(1)).

Ask yourself, why don't politicians use the same brutal manner on those selling and using alcohol as is now reserved for those not paying income tax? I leave it to you to figure out.

School changes planned

by Jane Hurley

At the regular meeting of the County of Beaver Board of Education on May 8th, Bill Schoeman, Superintendent of Schools, gave a progress report on the re-organization of instruction scheduled to begin September 1st in the Ryley and Holden Schools.

At present, both schools have kindergarten to grade 12 classes in session but, this will be changed in the fall.

Holden School will house kindergarten to grade nine only and the Ryley school will accommodate kindergarten to grade six students and those in grades 10, 11 and 12.

There has been much controversy on the part of both schools about this change. Holden has expressed a desire for a public meeting to discuss the time-tabling and busing aspects of this re-organization. The Board of Education has said that this could be arranged once these matters have been finalized.

Ryley School supporters attended this meeting to present a brief airing their concerns regarding the changes to be made. They feel that a sense of security and a sense of community are important factors and will continue to explore and present alternatives to the Board so that they can work together to ensure good, quality education without having to experience undue emotional and social pressures.

The Board indicated that their concerns will be discussed and taken into consideration when setting up the new program.

Superintendent Schoeman said that this is a new experience for every one involved and because there still seems to be much confusion he feels that they (the Board) could have done a better job of communicating with parents.

To further ensure better community relations, the Board has adopted a policy recognizing that intelligent, informed support of the schools is dependent upon the public's full knowledge, understanding and participation in the efforts, goals, problems and programs of the educational system in the County of Beaver.

Feedback from members of both communities has shown that there is a general misunderstanding regarding how the students of these two schools will be placed in classes.

Students will be integrated in such a way that there will be no distinction of villages. There will not be one class with Ryley students and one class with Holden students, classes will be composed of students from both villages.

French language courses will not be available this fall but, computer programming classes are definitely scheduled for '84-85.

In order to co-ordinate the differences in programming and cycling next in progress, it will be necessary to combine two subjects only — Physics 30/20 and Math 30/20 which are both general program subjects. Complete general and matriculation programs will be in place.

Bus routes will stay the same for '84-85 term with express buses transporting students from their home school to their respective learning facilities.

A principle meeting involving time-tabling will take place in the next week or two, after which both schools will be given an updated progress report on this subject.

Busing guidelines for '84-85 and the future years have been established. Kindergarten will be included in the regular staff complement. Principals will be responsible for assigning regular staff to positions in their schools.

The Board will attempt to hire, where applicable, specialists to be employed on a county-wide rather than on an individual school basis. Pre-vocational education will focus on preparing students for entry into trades and service programs.

Resignations have been accepted, effective June 30th, for Jim McGaughey and Allyson Embury, both from C.W. Sears School in Tofield, and for Helen Lindsay, head caretaker for C.W. Sears, effective on October 30th, 1984.

Final government approval has been received for the construction of a home ec and shop facility in Tofield School. The architect has been instructed to prepare the drawings and construction is scheduled to begin in September.

Fire chief . . .

they felt the County should not accept the bid that was awarded on the basis of the discrepancies of contract interpretation.

Council pointed out to the group that on the first page of the contract was a clause that specified council's right to accept or reject any discrepancies or waive any formalities according to their best interest. Their concerns will be discussed.

The beaver population in this county has grown to such a high level that it has be. ome almost impossible to control. The beaver trapper is being kept busy constantly, working to achieve some semblance of control. Beavers eat shelterbelts, block culverts, flood farmlands and generally make a nuisance of themselves at their present population level.

The dry spring season has done nothing towards lessening this problem as was previously anticipated. Fish and Wildlife have been approached by council to aid in having beaver removed from the county

Forage Equipment Field Day

Are you getting the most out of your forage harvesting system? Answer this question on June 13, 1984 at 9 a.m. at the Forage Equipment Field Day at the Lakeland College Farm in Vermilion.

Equipment at the Forage Equipment Field Day will be displayed and discussed by local co-operating dealers and manufacturers. Mower-conditioners, swathers, balers, loose stackers, forage harvesters, forage handling and moving equipment will be displayed and demonstrated.

Disc type mower-conditioners will be shown and demonstrated, as will swathers with forage headers. Round and square balers will be shown. There may be a demonstration of round bale silage baggers for round bale silage and regular silage baggers are being shown and demonstrated. Silage bagging equipment is also used to store high moisture grain.

Several types of round bale movers for truck mount or loose bedded trucks and tractors can be viewed. These machines will be demonstrated.

Investment in farm machinery is a serious decision. Information at this field day and discussions with dealers and manufacturers will give you the information needed to choose forage equipment for your farm.

The Forage Equipment Field Day is co-sponsored by Alberta Agriculture and Lakeland College. For more information contact Mike Doggart or Brian Kennedy in the Regional Agricultural Office in Vermilion at 853-8811.

Report from Parliament Hill

Hon. Don Mazankowski P.C., M.P.

Immediate Grain Stabilization Payout Required

Don Mazankowski, M.P., has again called on the federal government to introduce changes to the Western Grain Stabilization Act that will trigger an immediate payout to grain producers.

"At a time when farmers are facing a serious cost-price squeeze, especially in light of the sharp reduction in initial prices, an immediate payout from the stabilization fund is required to increase cash flow and to provide financial assistance to producers", said Mr. Mazankowski.

Reacting to a recent announcement by the government that it plans to amend the stabilization program, Mr. Mazankowski expressed dissatisfaction that "...liberal government's plan will not result in a payment until October.

"Western Grain Farmers need a payout now so they can put their money back to work for them in the coming months."

"Therefore, our Party is urging the government to make an interim payment as it did in 1979. We are also calling for the amendments to be retroactive to the 1982/83 crop year. Such action would produce a payment of an additional $100 million."

The Government has indicated that, under its plan, the average payment per farmer would be between $1,500-$2,000.

"In effect, all the government is doing is paying back contributions made by producers. For example, a farmer who joined the program in 1979 would have paid a maximum of $4,000 into the program since then."

"While an immediate stabilization payout will be an important step, it will not solve the many economic problems facing farmers today. We will continue our efforts to have the government introduce further initiatives to support western Canadian agriculture."

"Included in these initiatives should be an increase in initial prices, a doubling of the level of advance payments and the removal of the 9% federal sales tax on farm fuels. All of these proposals would provide our producers with some hope and optimism at a very crucial time"; concluded Mr. Mazankowski.

We would like to say

Facts about food

Because we, as consumers, are continually bombarded by messages about food, it is important to be able to identify what is fiction and what is fact.

The following examples of fiction and fact were provided by the committee for Alberta's Nutrition Month, which is March, and Alberta Agriculture's district home economist at Airdrie, Debbie Brekke.

— Fiction: Bread sold as brown bread is the same as that sold as whole wheat bread.

— Fact: At least 60 per cent of the flour used in whole wheat bread must be whole wheat flour. The remaining 40 per cent is usually enriched white flour. However, brown bread is either made with white flour that is colored with molasses or caramel or it contains less than 60 per cent whole wheat flour.

— Fiction: Raw sugar and honey are more nutritious than white sugar.

— Fact: Raw sugar, honey and white sugar are all different forms of the same product. They are treated equally by the body's digestive system, and each has basically the same levels of carbohydrates and other nutrients.

— Fiction: Grapefruit and grapefruit juice melt away fat.

— Fact: Grapefruit is a member of the fruits and vegetables group in the Canada Food Guide and is a nutritious, low calorie food that supplies vitamin C. No food including grapefruit, has the unique ability to melt away fat.

Firemen take course

Sixteen firefighters from the County of Beaver Fire Service have completed a thirty-six hour Alberta Fire Training School course in Tofield.

Normally this course requires that the individual member attend the Provincial Training Centre in Vermilion.

Recently, arrangements were made to provide instruction in Tofield with provincial fire training personnel testing each candidate upon completion of the course material

Don Carlson, an assistant chief with the Tofield Fire Department, instructed firefighters from Viking, Ryley, Holden and Tofield in such topics as fire behavior, search and rescue, and use of breathing apparatus.

"By teaching this course here in Tofield we have saved a considerable amount of money for the taxpayers. It normally costs the town or county $300 to send each fireman to Vermilion. We've trained sixteen members from across the county at no expense", says Carlson, a professional firefighter for nine years. "Firefighting is a dangerous endeavour and we must provide each member with up-to-date training to minimize the risk of personal injury."

On Thursday each firefighter will take a written exam and be given a practical test. It is hoped that additional courses may be arranged in the future.

Crops are being sown

Weather permitting, seeding operations [illegible] in full swing in this part of the province, this week.

While some farmers have been out in the fields for a couple of weeks, others are just in the process of getting started.

A number of farmers were reluctant to begin seeding before the middle of the month (May) after early seeding last year was followed by dismal weather which saw crops fail to germinate which resulted in reseeding.

According to reports received from the Alberta Wheat Pool, about eight percent of the 1984 crop has now been seeded, with most of that being in wheat acreage.

Twenty percent of intended wheat acreage has been sown, [illegible] seven percent, oats and barley are at four percent and a start with flax and rye is yet to be [illegible].

[illegible] has shown the most progress as farmers in that district have seeded just over forty percent of all intended acreage with wheat sixty-five [illegible].

Hay Lakes and Round Hill have completed about ten percent overall with thirty-five percent of the proposed wheat crop around the Round Hill area having been seeded and Hay Lakes area farmers are about one-quarter done with wheat.

Holden and Rosalind have passed the five percent mark while Ryley is just a step behind at four percent with Daysland and Tofield areas just getting started with seeding operations.

The report from the Bawlf area indicated that no seeding had taken place and a report had not been received from New Norway.

Moisture conditions in the Ryley area were reported to be poor although all other regions were either good or very good.

General comments from Wheat Pool agents indicated that additional rainfall was needed and then, a period of warm weather was required.

Canola acreage will increase by sixteen percent in this region with the Holden area showing the biggest jump as canola acreage will be increased by sixty percent.

Acreage seeded to flax and rye will be unchanged.

Oats and barley will show a drop of about three percent in intended acreage with Holden having the biggest drop as farmers in that region have reduced oats by forty percent and barley acreage has dropped by thirty percent.

The biggest decline is in wheat acreage which has dropped seven percent over last year with only Hay Lakes, Holden and Rosalind holding the line while Bawlf shows the biggest drop as farmers there have reduced wheat acreage by fifteen percent.

Hastings Lake

Several local craftspeople will be holding a craft show and sale on Saturday at Ministik Hall. Crafts included are basketry, pyrographics, pottery, weaving, wooden furniture, stitchery and charcoal drawings. It will be open from 11 a.m. until 9 p.m.

The Hastings Lake Pleasure Horse Association is holding a fun day and horse show at Hastings Lake Hall on June 3rd from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be a food concession. Also, the Arena has recently had sand added and is in very good condition. For more information phone Muriel Rabby, 662-3434.

The recent international dinner was a great success. Over 100 people enjoyed foods ranging from pizza to Japanese chicken wings.

Dutch elm disease not found in Alberta

Since Dutch Elm Disease (DED) was discovered in the United States in 1930, and in Canada in 1944, it has spread throughout much of the eastern part of North America.

Having first been discovered in Manitoba in 1975, it now occurs in most areas of that province. It was subsequently found in Saskatchewan and was eliminated, but so far it has not yet been found in either Alberta or British Columbia.

The symptom of the disease that a layman usually notices first is the yellowing and wilting of one or more twigs on a tree that otherwise appears to be in good health. As the disease progresses more twigs and branches die until the whole tree finally succumbs. A check under the bark of such a tree will usually reveal a network of tunnels that has been made by European or native elm bark beetles, both of which spread the fungus [illegible]

The fungus grows in the vascular system of an infected tree where it produces a toxic substance that interferes with the tree's water uptake. It is most often transmitted between trees by the two species of beetles, which breed in the cambium region of the bark of elm trees and elm logs, but it can also be transmitted via root grafts between neighbouring trees.

Dr. Ulf Soehngen, entomologist at the Alberta Horticultural Research Center in Brooks, reports some work has been done on attractants that may be used to monitor the migration into new areas of the elm bark beetles, and that a bacterium plus a fungicide has been injected into elm trees to counteract the DED fungus.

At the present time, however, the selection of elm species and hybrids that are resistant to DED seems to hold out the most promise. Scientists are hoping to develop a strain of elms that is resistant to DED fungi and that has many of the desirable characteristics of the present American elm.

Spilstead news

by B. Fuller

This past weekend has seen a lot of activity in the community.

On Saturday morning, Cubs and Scouts were out and about in the community collecting bottles and paper. The response has made it possible for more financial help for the children to attend their respective camps this summer.

Also on Saturday morning, the registration for minor ball was held. In case you weren't able to come and register your children, please call Denise at 662-2373 by Saturday. After Saturday, a decision will be made as to whether it will be feasible to go ahead with minor ball, according to the number of children registered and parents willing to help out.

On Saturday evening, the Spilstead Community League held its very successful spring dance.

Sunday morning saw the Spilstead Pathfinders and their leaders busy preparing the food for the Mothers' Day pancake breakfast. A number of people from the community took advantage of a nice way to begin Mothers' Day.

The Pathfinders are still looking for odd jobs to do in the community. If anyone has any odd jobs they would like to offer these girls, please call Ardel at 662-2960 or Margaret at 662-3119 (evenings please).

On Sunday, a church service will be held at Spilstead Hall at 3 p.m. with Rev. Art Dahlen from Rosebud, officiating.

Students write essays

by Jean Murray

Education Week is from May 7 to May 11th and the theme is "Education: It's for me!"

Each student wrote a short story on what education means to them.

The top story from each grade was chosen and they were written by: Sherilyn Kauffman, grade one; Dawn Sutton, grade two; and Christine Steinhusen, grade three.

Sherilyn's essay: School — It's for me.

I go to school to learn things. I go to school to learn to read and to learn the sounds of the letters and learn to print and learn what mammals are and learn math and phonics and I go to library and learn to [illegible] books out of the library and art. Best of all I like library books.

Dawn's Essay: What Education Means to Me.

Friends mean a lot to me because every day I meet someone else that I never knew before in school.

Math is fun because I like learning how to do tricks in Math.

Reading is fun too because I learn where people live and what they eat. And what games they play.

Art is the funniest thing in school. Because I learn how to make things for holidays and birthdays.

Christine's Essay: What Education Means to Me.

Education means learning things that are new to me. If a teenager is out of school and wants a job, he or she would have to be educated. If you read lots you learn lots. You don't stop learning when you get out of school, you keep on learning.

I think if you want a good education, you should keep on learning not only at school but at home and work. Almost everywhere and every thing you learn. Sometime you like it and sometime you don't. To live in the world, you have to learn lots of everything. Education is very important.

ADC issues fiscal reports

J. Harold Hanna, Chairman and Managing Director of the Alberta Agricultural Development Corporation, has announced ADC's results for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1984.

Direct farm loans were authorized during the year for 1168 Alberta farmers and amounted to $149.6 million. Of this total, 1082 loans were made to beginning farmers for $142 million. Some 85% of these beginning farmers took advantage of the staged option feature whereby total borrowings may be advanced in two stages to suit the development needs of the farm unit.

An additional 68 farmers obtained loans amounting to $4.3 million from conventional lenders and guaranteed by ADC under the Specific Guarantee loan program. ADC's Alberta Farm Development Loan program provided 6977 guaranteed loans through other lenders, for a total of $89.4 million during the year.

ADC also provides credit assistance to Alberta's agri-business industry, and during 1983/84 a total of $13.3 million was authorized for 23 agribusinesses direct and guaranteed loans.

While the major thrust of ADC's direct lending continued to emphasize financing to beginning farmers, Mr. Hanna indicated that ADC is doing everything possible to assist existing borrowers to remain viable under adverse economic circumstances. The Corporation's staff have greatly increased their efforts to provide financial advice to farmers in difficulty in order to restructure debt loads and otherwise find solutions which will ensure survival of the farming operation.

Mr. Hanna said that at the end of the year a number of policy and program changes were introduced in order to ensure that future funds loaned are reserved for those individuals who continue to be actively involved in farming, and to improve the chances that borrowers will succeed in their farming operations. While new beginning farmer applicants will be required to demonstrate a commitment to full-time farming to qualify for a loan, new borrowers no longer forfeit their beginning farmer incentive because of off-farm employment. Beginning farmer applicants will be expected to have a minimum of two years related practical experience or an equivalent, with special consideration extended to post-secondary agricultural students. They will also require a minimum of 10% equity in cash or net worth in productive assets to contribute to their farming enterprise. These changes are intended to recognize the realities of the current economic situation, and are in keeping with the Alberta government's commitment to provide strong support to individuals who are serious about embarking on careers in agriculture.

Mr. Hanna emphasized that ADC will continue to be sensitive to the changing credit needs of Alberta farmers and agribusiness operators. ADC staff are dedicated to providing the best possible service to clients and other members of the farming public, and to participating effectively in maintaining a strong and growing agricultural industry in the province.

ADC's lending programs are funded through the sale of debentures to the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund.

Ryley students take trips

by Jane Sleeny

During the week of April 19-22, leading Cadet Carmine Von Tettenborn of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps attended an Easter cruise aboard a Yard Craft Auxilliary General Purpose Vessel (YAG) for a period of four days.

Carmine is a grade 10 student from Ryley School and was chosen along with seven other cadets across the province to take part in this cruise from the Quadra Base in Vancouver Island.

They sailed throughout the islands around Vancouver Island to learn sea terminology, drills, knot tying, signals, locating bombs, proper techniques involving life jackets and rafts as well as a few communication skills.

In spite of a bout of seasickness among shipmates, Cadet Von Tettenborn's group took first place with a score of 87.9% on an inspection test of their skills over the four days.

Carmine Von Tettenborn

Cheryl Andrukow

Cruises of this type take place on an on-going basis throughout the year. They are available, by application, to any member of the RCSCC Nootka Cadet Corp as well as other cadets across Canada.

The Ryley Legion sponsors the Corp in this area which is composed of students from Ryley, Holden and Tofield.

During the Easter break another Ryley student, Cheryl Andrukow, attended a tour of the Terry Fox Youth Centre in Ottawa.

To emphasize the theme of the tour, "Science and Technology" they were shown films on how Canada rated with the world.

A tour of the Chalk River Nuclear Plant was the main highlight of the trip. Advantages and disadvantages of nuclear power were pointed out to students from both French and English speaking Canada.

Cheryl traded Village of Ryley and County of Beaver pins with others and received a wide assortment in return.

She said, "It was a great experience and I would encourage others to take part."

This on-going tour is available year-round to any Canadian student 16-18 years of age. Applications can be obtained from school offices. Once the application is sent out and received in Ottawa, more information is sent out to the applicant.

Cheryl's trip was sponsored by the Ryley Legion.

News from Ministik

by Catherine Reddick

The charity auction sale and flea market held in the Community Hall on May 5th, proved to be a great success.

Everything donated, was sold. The bake table inside the building was a big attraction and the plants and shrubs were gone in no time. A concession from the kitchen and the refreshment booth were busy all day for those who were hungry and thirsty.

Gladys and Frank Swaby were hosts last Sunday to Bob and Joan Swaby and family of Sylvan Lake.

Jean and Russell Rowland recently returned from a week vacation spent in Lethbridge and Fort Macleod.

The Ministik Ladies Club enjoyed their annual day out to dinner at the Highwayman on Thursday. They also visited a greenhouse, picking up plants, seeds, etc.

The Ladies Club's annual strawberry tea is on June 2nd in the Community Hall. Raffle tickets are being sold on a cedar wishing well planter and a smaller planter.

Ron and Clare MacLean were visitors to Saskatoon for a few days this week.

Several friends and relatives from the area attended the silver wedding anniversary reception and dance in the Tofield Legion Hall on April 28th.

Word has been received of the passing of Tom Masters in the Veterans Home in Edmonton, on May 9th. He was the eldest brother of Violet Nasichuk, a resident of Ministik.

Jean and George Kleinschroth were Sunday visitors with daughter Laura Swann and family in Gibbons.

Another popular best-seller is Megatrends. Ten New Directions Transforming Our Lives, discussing aspects of social change in today's fast-paced world.

Among other new books from the Chilton line, Guide To Auto Body Repair and Painting gives clear directions for this demanding job. Also available are the repair manuals for most years and models up to 1983, motorcycles, trucks and small motor repair.

The fiction table holds a number of new paperbacks; if you don't find something this week, look again, as books are being borrowed and returned frequently. Among the new hardcover titles are: Poker Game by Fletcher Knebel; Fortune Is A Woman by Winston Graham; Dead In the Water by Ted Wood; The Looking Glass War by John Le Carre; and The Master Sniper by Stephen Hunter

Some new subscriptions have been included on our magazine shelf recently. Have you looked at Canadian Workshop, full of ideas and plans for the home carpenter? Treat canola seed

All canola growers in Alberta are strongly advised to treat their seed with a fungicide that contains benomyl or carbathiin to prevent blackleg and with an insecticide to control flea beetles.

The advice comes from Alberta Agriculture's supervisor of plant pathology, Dr. Ieuan Evans, who reports that blackleg has caused crop losses ranging from 10 to 25 per cent of the expected yield in some parts of Saskatchewan, and that is was recorded in Alberta for the first time last summer.

The destructive fungus which causes blackleg was found in a canola crop near Vermilion. When a sample of the seed that had been used to plant the crop was tested at the Alberta Environment Centre in Vegreville, it was found to contain two per cent of blackleg-infected seeds. However, because it had been treated with a recommended fungicide before it was planted, no diseased seeds were found in the new crop. Dr. Prem Kharbanda of the environmental centre believes that the treatment reduced the disease's potential to spread to the seed pods. When canola has a high incidence of blackleg, the stems, leaves and seed pods all become infected.

In the case of the Vermilion crop, it is felt that the original seed probably came from an area in Saskatchewan where there was a high incidence of blackleg.

Report from Parliament Hill

by Hon. Don Mazankowski P.C., M.P.

All Vehicles Now Eligible For Propane Conversion Grants

The federal government's Propane Fuel Assistance Program has been extended to all propane-fuelled road vehicles. Changes to the Propane Vehicle Program took effect on April 1, 1984 and will now allow owners of private non-commercial vehicles to claim a grant of up to $400 for propane conversions. Previously, the program had been restricted to commercial and farm vehicles.

A further change to the program means that conversions to dual propane and gasoline systems are eligible for the grant. In the past, payments were limited to propane-only conversions.

While increased vehicles will now be eligible for the grant, the government will no longer allow the $400 to contribute toward used equipment, labour costs or equipment and parts transfers from one vehicle to another. Only eligible materials used in the propane fuel system can now be claimed.

To receive the $400 payment, claimants must supply invoices identifying the vehicle and purchaser of the conversion, and the ownership or vehicle registration of the vehicle involved.

The federal government has set a target of 100,000 vehicle conversions by the end of 1985.

Propane fuel has grown steadily with emergence of an inexpensive and plentiful fuel supply. There are now more than 5,000 propane fueling stations across Canada and over 60,000 propane-powered vehicles.

Further information and application forms are available from my offices in Vegreville, 632-2866 and Ottawa (613) 992-[illegible].

Round Hill team folds

Round Hill has folded.

The lack of baseball players in the Round Hill community has caused the team to fold for the 1984 season, in the Powerline Baseball League.

The league will operate with seven teams this year instead of the familiar eight seen in the past.

Games that were scheduled for Round Hill will now have the opposing teams with the night off.

Each team in the Powerline Baseball League will play 12 games this season.

Players from Round Hill will join other clubs or, will leave the sport.

All the other teams in the league are ready to start the season on May 17.

Home openers are scheduled for Ryley, Holden and Bardo.

The season goes to the beginning of July and then the playoffs will start. All the series in the playoffs are a best of three.

Several teams will be hosting tournaments throughout the year.

Armena will start the tournaments off on June 3. They have invited all the teams in the Powerline Baseball League to the tournament. Bardo and Holden are planning to hold Farmer's Day tournaments on June 9. Bardo will be inviting the teams in the same league. Holden will probably turn to teams from eastern Alberta to fill their tournament.

On July 22, Armena will have another tournament. Easyford, Heisler, Bawlf, Spring Lake and Camrose have been invited to take part in the tourney.

Elks' help

On behalf of the Round Hill Elks, John Boychuk (left) presented the Al Kienitz family of Kingman with a cheque for $1,500 to assist them in getting back on their feet after a fire destroyed their house trailer.

Round Hill plans a farmers market

A farmers' market has been scheduled for Round Hill next week.

The market will be held in the Elks Hall on Monday between five and eight o'clock.

A feature attraction at the market will be a demonstration in the art of baking bread.

In addition to all the usual offerings at a farmers' market, an added extra this time will be the availability of bedding plants.

Additional information about Monday's farmers market in Round Hill may be obtained by calling 672-3344 or 672-7275.

4-H club is busy

On April 28, the Tofield 4-H Beef Club had their club tour. We enjoyed dinner at the home of Mr and Mrs. Charlie Ray. We ended our tour at the Howard Brown farm, where we judged four steers.

Joe Brown gave a clipping demonstration. Afterwards, we had lunch prepared by Mrs. Doris Brown.

On May 5, our club participated in highway clean-up. Our club did 11 miles of cleaning ditches, west of Lindbrook Corner.

At our meeting on May 9th, Shane Cunningham led the pledge. Cathy Brown was secretary for the meeting.

Plans were all finalized for carcass night and Achievement Day. Carcass night will be held on May 30 at the Armena beginning at 6:30 p.m. Achievement Day is to be on June 4. The showing of our calves will begin at 1 p.m. The sale of calves is at 3 p.m. Our banquet will be held at the Legion Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Our wind-up party will be at Don Woods' on June 27.

As I See It

by Dr. Walt Buck, M.L.A. Clover Bar

During the Spring sitting of the Legislature, I have concentrated some of my focus on environmental issues. I have had the opportunity to introduce a number of bills dealing with environmental problems.

One of these bills is an amendment to the Hazardous Chemicals Act. This act would compel the Minister of the Environment to set up an inventory of hazardous chemicals, and would force individuals who have those hazardous chemicals in their possession to advise the Minister within 60 days.

The act would further compel the Environment Minister to establish restrictions governing hazardous chemicals, and would demand that the best available technology be used before their storage and disposal. Also contained in the act would be a penalty provision, including fines up to $10,000 and imprisonment up to six months.

In my view, the bill really contains two important elements. The first principle is that the Minister of the Environment create an inventory of hazardous chemicals. At present, we do not know who has what types of chemicals on their property. This bill would ensure there is no chance of a repeat of last year's PCB storage problems in Edmonton. Under the new legislation, we would demand that the best technology be used before these chemicals are stored.

It's interesting to note that a Member of the Ontario Legislature has asked for and received a copy of my bill for introduction in that Legislature. His constituency has a number of industrial plants similar to the Fort Saskatchewan area.

With the proposed hazardous waste site now announced, it is essential that we have an inventory of all the hazardous chemicals in the province. I view environmental safety and integrity as extremely important elements in today's society.

Please direct any concerns, questions or comments to me at Room 314 Legislature Building, Edmonton, T5K 2B6, or telephone collect to 427-2321.

Now that Your Garden Exists!

The fun of having a garden is when most of us get busy and plant the garden, with visions of great harvests in the fall. Below are some tips for a successful garden, taken from the publication "Home Vegetable Gardening in Alberta."

Preparing the garden area with fertilizer of some sort is necessary to ensure nutrients are available to the plants. Poor soils can take up to 65 kg (100 lbs) of manure for 9m² (100 ft²) of garden space. Commercial fertilizer can also be used, but be sure to apply it before planting seeds. Fertilizer that comes into contact with young roots or foliage may cause burning of the plants.

Rows planted in a north-south direction have some advantage over east-west rows in having more exposure to sunlight. Be sure to rotate the location of such crops as potatoes and carrots to keep disease in control.

Some vegetables, like sweet corn, should be planted in short parallel rows in blocks rather than in one long single row. This ensures good pollination of the plants.

After planting, hold off the temptation to water immediately. Irrigation immediately after seeding causes a thick crust to form on the soil, which hinders seedling emergence.

After plants are well up, thin plants to a desired spacing. Do this on a dull day or in the evening to minimize the shock to plants that are left.

In another month, we'll be transplanting flowers and some vegetables outdoors. For best results water the plants lightly before removing from flat, so the soil will cling to the roots. Set plants in holes 1½-1 inch deeper than they were in the flats or pots. Pay particular attention to pack soils when transplanting. They must be completely covered with soil or the exposed portion will act as a wick, dehydrating the soil in the root zone.

Provide these young plants with early nourishment by watering them with a starter solution, made by dissolving 1 tbsp. of high phosphate fertilizer (such as 10-50-10) in 1 gallon of water.

This free publication has many more ideas on successful gardening. If you are fairly new to gardening, or an old pro who just wants some new ideas, feel free to phone or write and request a copy of "Home Vegetable Gardening in Alberta."

IN MEMORIAM

BEEBY– In loving memory of my parents Florence (May 14 1983) and Ernest (May 4 1978)

You went away so quickly
We didn't get to say goodbye
But memories of loved ones
Still cast their glow
To gently light our path
And grace our days
Wherever we may go

- Loved and sadly missed by Carrol, Roll Diana Anita Glen, Duane Kupstadt 37p 7091

Sodbuster rodeo nears

by Joan Murray

It's rodeo time once again!

Get your boots and hats out of mothballs and join in the fun down at the Tofield Fairgrounds next weekend for the Agricultural Society's second annual Sodbuster Rodeo.

There will be two entertaining days of exciting rodeo action with some top amateur rodeo riders on hand for the big event.

These talented men and women will vie for prizes in bareback and saddlebronc riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, team roping, junior steer riding and barrel racing, ladies' barrel racing and ball riding, plus there will be the mutton bustin' novelty event for the young folk.

This rodeo is approved by the Lakeland Rodeo Association which has a membership of over 500. Les Trach Rodeo Company of St. Paul will be supplying the rodeo stock.

Saturday's rodeo events will start at one o'clock "Ricky-tucky" Wanchuk, a rodeo clown, will be there to provide thrills and chills as he diverts the rip-snortin' stock away from fallen cowboys and cowgirls.

Many local service groups and clubs will be running concession booths, thus giving traffic as well as serving and supervising events such as the beerfest and dance.

The beergardens will be open Saturday and the dance will begin at 9 p.m. that same night.

Rodeo committee member, Belinda Jones, said that over half the dance tickets have already been sold.

Also this year everyone, including workers, will have to pay admission to both the fairgrounds and dance.

This is a community effort and all proceeds will be used for arena and fairground activities for the benefit of all local clubs and organizations. There are approximately 200 volunteer workers involved in making this year's rodeo a success.

These volunteers will be helping to clean the grounds, collecting money at the gate and helping at the pancake breakfast and beef barbecue. The Lions barbecue will get underway at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday.

On Sunday, the Tofield Legion will welcome everyone to an 8 a.m. pancake breakfast. Rodeo time will be at one o'clock with the crowning of the rodeo queen taking place somewhere around 2 p.m.

Sharon Telford was responsible for organizing the queen contest.

Contestants Teresa Williams, Karry Krystal, Cathy Brown, Susan Beattie, Terry Reum, and Sherry Smith, will be present throughout the rodeo to sell tickets promoting the contest. These ticket sales will be part of the criteria used to determine the winner.

Local business persons are supporting the rodeo by providing trophy buttons and prize money, queen gifts and bouquets. Rodeo specials and in-store draws will be available in local establishments throughout this week to promote the big event.

Tofield community and surrounding area residents are invited to join in with the spirit of the rodeo along with business employees and proprietors by dressing up in western styles during the week and on the weekend.

Sale is held

by Joan Murray

Holy Trinity Church held it's annual bedding plant sale on Friday and Saturday, marking the 23rd year of this existance.

This springtime event is their main fund raising project of the year. They have been getting their plants from the same supplier since 1961 and have always had good comments about the quality.

There were not as many buyers at this sale as in previous years.

One of the church members, Mrs. Crispin, attributed this decrease to the increasing number of professional greenhouses in the areas, plus the fact that bedding plants are now available in just about every grocery store.

Games postponed

The opening games in the Powerline Baseball League had to be postponed because of bad weather.

Games on Thursday had been scheduled for Ryley, Holden and Bardo and all will be played at a later date.

As a result, this evening's games in Bardo, Holden and Viking will go into the books as the season's openers.

On Thursday evening, Armena will host Viking, Edberg is at home to Bardo and Tofield will be hosting Holden.

One week from today (Tuesday) will see Armena at home to Bardo, Ryley is hosting Tofield and Holden travels to Viking.

All games will start at seven o'clock.

Open house held

by Joan Murray

Over 200 people showed up at the Tofield Post Office for an open house on Thursday.

This event was scheduled in conjunction with National Postal Employees Week, May 14 to 19th.

Everyone enjoyed coffee and cookies and were welcome to tour behind the scenes, sign the guest register and enter a draw for a "puzzle" bear.

Dan Gaunce of Tofield was the lucky winner of this draw.

Mrs Lundgard's grade five class from Tofield School was provided with a guided tour of the building and were able to learn about the different classes of mail, postal codes, cancelling mail and how to make out a postal money order.

In spite of all the information given, pertinent to Post Office procedures, the ice cold orange juice and cookie break was the main topic of conversation for these youngsters, not to mention the free balloons and coloring pages.

This event was planned and executed by Tofield postal employees, Jean Williams (acting postmaster), Mavis McLeod, Connie Komarnisky, Debbie Flech, Jean Bolster and Theresa Reil

All four county high schools, including Holden, Ryley, Tofield and Viking participated.

Tofield took top honours in the meeting by amassing 208 points. They were followed by Ryley 132, Viking 119 and Holden 113.

Winners earned the right to advance to the area championship meet.

Four records were broken when Sheila Winter of Viking broke the old mark for senior girls' 100 metre race.

Darryl Holowachuk of Ryley set a new mark in the intermediate boys' discus while Dan Pusey of Holden broke a record in the intermediate boys' javelin and Jason Chamney of Viking set a new record in the boys' open 3,000 metre run.

Confusion

Grant Notley has been complaining a good deal recently about the provincial government's decision to establish a Calgary base for the provincial government, the premier, the Calgary Mafia, and other government offices in the old McDougall School.

The government acquired the old school from the City of Calgary, for some twenty million dollars, and even Mr. Notley concedes this was a good business deal. It provided money for the Calgary Board of Education to move classrooms from the business section, where there no longer are any children, and out to where families are, and at the same time, it saved a building with a good deal of historic worth and architectural merit.

Now the government wants to spend eleven million dollars refurbishing it, and Mr. Notley complains. He wonders if it's moral for a government to spend eleven million "on its own comforts" when thousands of citizens are out of work, and at a time when the same government feels financially compelled to cut back on benefits to the needy in our society. He also points to the thousands of square feet of commercially available space available at disaster rate bargains in Calgary (if indeed government should avail itself of disaster rate bargains.)

Mr. Notley feels the government has badly handled the situation. It might have eased the burden on private sector office landlords, but instead it chose to spend eleven million on "lavish appointments (needed or not) and worsen the private sector burden into the bargain."

We have some real quandaries in the situation. We tend to agree with Mr. Notley's concern over the government getting involved in a highly expensive branch office situation, yet we concede it may be one of the most important acts for a long-time. Calgary has long rankled over the fact it got neither the Legislature nor the University (until very recent times, and even then much smaller) and a branch office may help a lot.

We don't feel it's the government's job to bail out private sector landlords, who unfortunately got caught in the National Energy Program-inspired depression. But it seems to us that when the government spends eleven million to refurbish the old school it should actually be helping the plight of the unemployed, providing thousands of hours of employment, buying large quantities of materials, and consuming substantial quantities of energy. Surely this is helping the unemployed.

By the same token, we fail to understand the complaints of people who protest the federal government spending vast sums on armaments, on the Cruise missile, for instance, and who insist the money should be diverted to providing jobs for the unemployed.

Where do they think the money goes? It doesn't disappear into thin air. Surely, whether it's Cruise missiles, or Canadair, or wasted airport facilities like Mirabel, it somehow translates into jobs, for people who would face lay-offs or who otherwise wouldn't have them, and eventually money in the hands of people who circulate it further and further, bringing still more jobs.

We've heard criticism of extravagance, of lavish living, of expensive indulgences, such as jewelry, or cosmetics, or art, or clothing, housing, travel, transportation, and more. But doesn't it all boil down in the end into money kept in circulation, of moving to other hands, of keeping more and more people receiving money? If the jeweller gets a substantial payment, he keeps the money going to other people. The cosmetician, the couturier, all the same.

Wine, women and song. It may be a dreadful waste of money, but it still keeps on moving, it keeps people employed, and they keep others. The question of whether we get value for the money, whether in the case of lavish living, of wine, women and song, or of a government centre in Calgary, all of these are entirely different. We can see where a great deal of criticism may be merited insofar as assessing value received.

But insofar as relieving the plight of the unemployed, many of these projects seem tailored to the situation.

Winners circle

Edmonton sports fans had barely lost the Grey Cup before they came home with a brand new trophy . . . one they've never had before.

The Stanley Cup marks Edmonton's coming of age in the world of pro sports. They've only had a berth in the Stanley Cup finals for a decade, and winning the cup was a marvellous stroke. For team, for players, for fans. It will do for future hockey seasons what winning the Grey Cup did for years of Eskimo ticket sales . . . sell-outs should be common for years yet.

Even though they lose . . . as every team has to . . . fans will keep coming back to see when they can do it again. And if they face opposition as determined as the Islanders at the start of last game's third period, it may be a long time till they bring it back again.

No matter. They've proved to Edmonton hockey fans the city has a place in the big leagues, just as much in hockey as in football. The old Roman empire used to work on the concept of giving the masses "bread and circuses" to keep them happy. We don't know much about the bread for the masses in Edmonton, but we can bet they'll be thrilled for some time to come if they can keep on winning circuses such as the Grey Cup and Stanley Cup. Even if they're just serious contenders, but not winners.

French case coverage is called 'outrageous'

WINNIPEG — The Globe and Mail's editorial coverage of Manitoba's French-language dispute has been "the most outrageous" of 12 daily papers in Canada, a media critic told a conference at the University of Manitoba on the weekend.

Eric Wells, former editor of the Winnipeg Tribune and now an author and director of the University of Winnipeg's media department, said the one-sided attacks on Manitoba's anti-French factions in most Canadian newspapers was "the most deplorable" coverage he has seen on any subject.

Mr. Wells said he analyzed editorials and stories in 12 dailies from across the country during the debate to entrench French rights in Manitoba and found only one — the Edmonton Journal — that did not stoop to the vehement assaults that characterized the others.

"I saw very little rational, detailed analysis," he said. "The prem of Canada invested words like 'redneck' and 'bigotry.' Why was there such unanimity? Why were they so vehement? Why didn't they consider other views?"

Mr. Wells said he singled out The Globe as the worst offender because it covered the issue so extensively and consistently attacked the anti-interventionist forces and the provincial Conservative party that led them. In one editorial, he said, The Globe talked about these groups "tapping every latent phobia in the Manitoba constituency."

He noted similar views in other papers as well. The Ottawa Citizen wrote that the Tories were 'riding the redneck vote back to power." The Toronto Star used the phrase "a national disgrace." The Vancouver Sun headlined an editorial "Bigotry Triumphs." The Gazette in Montreal talked about "bitterness and betrayal, rednecks cynically exploit fears."

Discussion of the media's role in the French-language debate was part of a two-day political conference sponsored by the university's Institute for Social and Economic Research and the Department of Political Studies. About 50 students and local media people attended the session on the media.

Mr. Wells was joined in his criticism by Bill Shaw, a former member of the Quebec National Assembly and now vice-president of Freedom of Choice, an organization to promote English rights in Quebec.

Mr. Shaw said there are extreme distortions about attitudes in the francophone, such as statements that Manitoba does not have a single francophone institution when, in fact, there are French hospitals, schools, a college and a television channel. He noted that a Francophone is guaranteed a French trial in Manitoba, while an English person in Quebec has no such guarantee.

The CBC was also criticized from both Mr. Shaw and University of Manitoba psychologist Alex Frumey for siding with the francophone cause and not adhering to its mandate to provide balanced news presentation.

Mr. Frumey said reporters went out of their way to find the most agitated person to give the anti-entrenchment viewpoint and juxtaposed such interviews with the "calm professional" who sided with the francophone position.

In man-in-the-street interviews, Mr. Frumey said the CBC showed six persons who favored the Government position and only one who opposed it. "What was the point of it if it wasn't really random?" he asked. "Is it really news?"

The controversial bill to entrench French rights was not passed because the Conservative Opposition stalled proceedings until the NDP Government prorogued the House. Manitobans had soundly defeated the Government's entrenchment proposals in an earlier referendum.

CONTINUOUS CROPPING ON SALINE SOILS

Continuous cropping of salt-resistant grasses on prairie soils can help farmers get better production from saline soils.

According to Agriculture Canada scientists, specific crops exist for all but the most severe salinity levels.

Those crops will offer better production, but the scientists still warn continuous cropping is not a remedy for salinity.

FOIL PROTECTS CONSUMERS

Agriculture Canada has introduced a new meat inspection system to help federally-inspected meat processing plants.

Through the Frequency of Inspection Level, or FOIL, system, the federal department said he aims to make the best use of its inspection staff while maintaining the quality of meat and meat products.

With FOIL, inspectors are targetted to those plants that carry out complex meat processing operations or fail to maintain proper standards consistently. Slaughterhouses will continue to receive full-time inspection.

Loose Ends

I'm sporting a new look these days. After years of looking at things through my eyes only, I am now one of the lasses with glasses. I had no choice. It was either get glasses or continue to listen to the constant complaints that no one could see the TV with my nose pressed against the screen. Besides, I was tired of seeing two of everything.

Hearing that you need glasses isn't all that bad. I don't think the opthamologist needed to stress the age factor so much though. I know that my eyes are important and that nothing lasts forever, not even youth, but it really hurts us the story going around that the eyes are the second things to go.

Picking out a suitable pair of frames for a face seen naked until now is not an easy task. What look was wanted, they asked. Sporty intelligent, all business? They didn't seem to have anything that said small town casual with muddle-aged spread. It didn't help when the sales person said I should go with the grey plastic because they highlighted the silver in my hair. Nothing looked right. Wire frames made me look like John Denver in drag and in plastic my eyes faded away. Put a red wig on my head and give me a dog and I could have been Little Orphan Annie.

By the process of elimination (finding the pair I disliked least) I chose a frame which, on closer inspection (after it was fitted and paid for), did absolutely nothing for me.

I must confess — there aren't really my first glasses. As a child I was given a pair by a doctor who said they would cure my headaches. They didn't, partly because I had 20/20 vision and partly because the first time I wore them in public was the last. Everyone was staring at me in Sunday school, you see, so I took them off, set them on the window sill and forgot them. I know it's hard to believe, but when I went back for them, they had disappeared. Someone had scoffed my specs, and in a church, yet! My parents couldn't believe it either. To this day, she swears that I threw away that $40 pair of glasses, but honest, Mom, I'm not.

It will be awhile before these glasses become so much a part of me that not wearing them will leave me with an unfinished look. I guess I'll either have to get used to the stranger in the mirror or avoid mirrors. Meanwhile, I'm thinking of having them diamond-studded.

From the Ground Up

RUDY J. WARAWA — Dist. Agriculturist

JEROME MANCHUR

Over the past few years, herbicide use has come under considerable criticism. This last winter, there have been many media reports regarding the possible banning of 2,4-D. The following article was taken from the Swift Current Research Station's Weekly Newsletter.

Has 25 Years' Use of 2,4-D Changed Soil Fertility?

by V.S. Baumbardt

A long-term field experiment at Indian Head has shown that continued use of 2,4-D has had no detrimental effects on the microbial processes that are essential to soil fertility.

Ester or amine formulations of 2,4-D have been widely used to control broadleaf weeds. More than 50% of prairie cropland is treated annually with this herbicide. Although 2,4-D is readily broken down by soil microbes some environmentalists are concerned that there may eventually be some damage to soil life and fertility due to application of this herbicide for many consecutive years.

A 2,4-D field experiment with a rotation of wheat, wheat, fallow was established at the Indian Head Experimental Farm in 1947. Amine and ester forms of 2,4-D were sprayed each spring at a low rate of 0.42 kg a.i./ha (32 oz/ac) on fallow and wheat plots.

We determined the possible short-term and long-term effects on the soil properties by sampling soils from the untreated check plots and plots treated at the high rate of amine and ester at three different times before and after the 25th annual herbicide application. All samples were analyzed at the Swift Current laboratory for fertility-related processes such as rates of microbial respiration, ammonium formation, nitrate formation, amounts of microbial tissue and activities of various enzymes.

Our results showed that 2,4-D applications produced some inhibitory and some stimulatory effects. All significant changes in microbial activities were relatively small. There was a persistent reduction in amount of microbial tissue and the activity of one enzyme (dehydrogenase) in the treated soils. We suspect that these long-term effects are due to the accumulation in soil of some recalcitrant and toxic impurities of commercial 2,4-D formulations used in the 1950's and 1960's, and not to the 2,4-D herbicide compound itself. All other effects were hidden short level.

Since the continual use of either amines or esters of 2,4-D did not cause any interference with the biological cycling of plant nutrients in the soil, it was concluded that this popular herbicide does not pose any serious threat to the fertility of our soils nor to their ecological well being.

The conclusions from this long-term field experiment should go a long way toward lessening any public concerns about the possibility of permanent disturbance of soil biological processes as a result of the continued use of readily degredable herbicides, such as 2,4-D

A number of sport camps have been scheduled for Camrose in the coming summer.

The sport camp program is being held under the sponsorship of Camrose Lutheran College.

The first camp is to be held early next month (June) and the final camp is slated for the end of August.

Sports involved include tennis, volleyball, basketball, mini basketball and gymnastics.

Sound changes

CFCW's sound will change on Thursday evening.

When the seven o'clock news has been read on Thursday evening, a plug will be pulled and broadcasting will originate from the station's new home on 48 Avenue.

And the new sound will be in stereo.

All of the equipment needed at the new site has been installed and the CFCW staff will move to the new home following completion of the business day on Thursday and will go to work at the new studio on Friday morning.

While it is expected that it will take smooth or so to iron out all the kinks from the move, little difficulty is expected in broadcasting from the new site.

CFCW will mark its 30th anniversary of broadcasting in the fall and expects to hold an open house for the city's business community to mark the occasion and the move to a new location.

VIRUS—TESTED GRAPEVINES

Agriculture Canada scientists believe enough domestic, disease-free nursery stock will be available soon to growers, allowing Canada to close the door on imported grapevines and fruit trees.

According to Agriculture Canada researchers, trade in nursery stock and fruit has spread viruses around the world.

However, federal scientists have developed strains of grapevines that are free of damaging viruses. With the help of the nursery industry, they expect to have enough virus-tested stock soon to meet the needs of Canadian growers without importing any vine stock.

Mrs. Anne Appell accompanied Mike and Margaret Sych to the 25th anniversary celebrations held for John and Joan Ponsowaik in Edmonton on May 11th. Joan is a cousin to Anne and Mike.

On May 14, Jean and John Ponsowaik had the misfortune to have their mobile home and all their possessions completely burned by fire. The family's three pets, a miniature collie and two cats, also died in the fire. A lunch has been set up by friends in Ponsowaik's name at Heritage Trust, 10108-109 St. Edmonton. Donations may also be left with immediate family members. Jean is a sister to Ignace and George Sych and Helen Blawuzuk of the Hay Lakes District.

Henry and Elsie Zacht accompanied Jack and Ann Berkholtz to Olds on Sunday where they were dinner guests at the home of Ken and Gerty Zacht for Mother's Day.

Mrs Emma Lecht returned home in time for Mother's Day, after being a patient in St Mary's Hospital for eight days.

Geraldine Young of Camrose, a recent graduate of Mount Royal College in Calgary, has commenced duties as recreation director for the Hay Lakes and Area Regional District. She will be employed here for the summer months and is working out of the Village of Hay Lakes Office where the public is welcome to contact her. Geraldine is busy planning activities for all age groups and she would be pleased to receive input from residents of the area regarding what type of programs they wish to have implemented.

The regular meeting of the Hay Lakes and District Recreation Association will be held on Monday evening at 8 p.m. in the Rec Center Area. Issues are to be discussed. A decision will be made regarding the proposed multi-purpose asphalt court, also a decision is to be reached regarding the remodelling or removal of the present stage in the recreation centre. Any organizations interested in becoming involved with activities at the Hay Lakes Fastball Tournament, which is being held June 30-July 1st, should also be present.

A very successful clean-up day was held in the village on May 12. Participating in the clean-up were members of the Fire Department, Village Council, Recreation Association, Lions Club, Curling Club and the Scout and Girl Guide groups. Following the clean-up, a supper feast was held at the playgrounds.

The Hay Lakes Municipal Library Board sponsored a tea, plant sale and bake sale in the Senior Citizen's Center on May 12th.

During the week prior to the draw, the tablecloth had been displayed in the Duggan Mall.

Weather delays seeding

Rain and cool weather has delayed seeding of the 1984 crop, according to reports received from the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Rain halted seeding operations last week in some regions although, in many instances, farmers have proceeded only with wheat seeding and were waiting for warmer conditions before planting other crops.

It has been estimated that slightly more than a week of good weather is required before seeding operations can be completed.

Reports issued late last week indicate that farmers are slightly better than one-third done with all seeding in this part of the province.

Three-quarters of all intended wheat acreage has been sown along with close to one-third of canola but, less than twenty percent of barley and oats acreage has been seeded to date.

Only two areas, New Norway and Camrose, have passed the mid-way mark.

Nearly sixty percent of all areas in the New Norway region have been seeded with all intended wheat acreage having been sown. Oats is at the half-way mark while canola and barley are at forty and thirty-five percent respectively.

Farmers around Camrose are just slightly better than one-half done with wheat acreage eighty percent seeded while canola is at sixty percent and both oats and barley are over thirty percent seeded.

Next in line are the Rosalind and Holden areas, both of which have passed the forty percent mark.

In the Rosalind region, ninety percent of wheat seeding has been completed with oats at the mid-way mark while barley and canola are just better than ten percent and around Holden, eighty percent of wheat acreage has been sown along with forty percent of canola and nearly one-quarter of other crops.

Farmers in the Round Hill area are about one-third done with wheat at the three-quarter mark while canola is thirty-five percent done and both oats and barley seeding are ten percent completed.

In the Hay Lakes and Ryley regions, just under thirty percent of all seeding has been completed while Bawlf farmers are approaching the one-quarter mark.

Farmers in the vicinity of Tofield have seeded just over twenty percent of all intended acres while Daysland is just a step behind although farmers in that area are still to make a start with the seeding of oats.

Moisture conditions throughout the region still vary from being very good around Camrose and New Norway to being poor in the vicinity of Ryley with other areas classifying their moisture conditions as being good.

Lifesaver course open to farmers

Have you heard of the lifesave course for farmers?

This two and-a-half hour St. John Ambulance course is being offered to Alberta farmers under Alberta Agriculture's Farm Safety Program and is designed to ensure that those who participate know the basic first aid skills and procedures that could save a life in an emergency.

Prior to this course, there was nothing geared to a farmer's time frame that dealt with the knowledge that is required to meet emergency situations. Breathing, bleeding, poisoning and unconsciousness are the topics that will be covered in the two and-a-half hour period.

The manager of the farm safety program, Solomon Kyeremanteng, says research studies have shown that the number of accidents in the work place are considerably reduced when people are trained in first aid skills because they then know what injuries can result from specific situations and are more careful to avoid them.

There is no charge for the livesaver course and it will be offered anywhere in the province if it is requested by a group of 15 to 20 farmers.

Further details on the course can be obtained from Solomon Kyeremanteng, Alberta Agriculture, J. G. O'Donoghue Building, 7000 - 113 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, T6H 5T6 (Telephone: 427-2081).

Firefighters out of luck

Canadian firefighters do such a wonderful job for the public that their efforts tend to be taken for granted. But when firefighters have a fire problem themselves, it is much like a safety official being caught in a traffic offence, or a tax collector being charged with evading taxes – everyone sits up and takes notice.

While we will repeat a short item from a local story, it is done with full recognition of the invaluable services provided by firefighters everywhere.

The biggest fire in years in the Village of Alfred, Ont., (near the eastern corner of the Province) happened in the Fire Hall, begun by an electrical failure. Trouble was, the electrical failure jammed the garage door, and volunteer firefighters couldn't get near their equipment to fight the flames.

Three trucks were finally driven out through the glass door, but too late to save the building which also housed municipal offices.

Report from Parliament Hill

P.C., M.P.

New Freight Rate Order to Producers

The federal government has recently announced that the freight rate for western Canadian grains and oilseeds will increase by 33% at the start of the new crop year, August 1st, 1984.

This increase is much higher than originally projected by the government last fall when it forced the Western Grain Transportation Act through Parliament. I believe that it places an inappropriate burden on producers by further increasing their costs at a time when, due to a sharp reduction in initial prices, farm income will be severely reduced.

According to the government, the new rate will be $7.76 per tonne, an increase of over $1.90 from the current rate of $5.76 per tonne. It represents a 57% increase in only 7 months from December 31/83 when the original Crow rate of $4.89 per tonne was eliminated.

The increased rates will take an additional $80 million out of the pockets of grain farmers. With farm bankruptcies on the prairies running at record high levels so far this year, and with interest rates increasing again, this additional burden may be the straw that breaks the back of many family farms.

The rapid rise in the freight rate highlights the concern that the $1.5 million tonne volume cap is a disincentive to increased grain production. This aspect of the legislation has been consistently opposed yet the government refuses to remove it.

The new rate is particularly unfair because it will result in producers paying $25 million in freight charges that should be borne by the federal government.

This amount represents the cost of shipping higher volumes of grain than forecast between August 1, 1983 and December 31, 1983. However, as the new Crow legislation did not come into effect until January 1, 1984, the shipper should only have to pay additional costs for grain shipped during the last seven months of the current crop year. Instead, producers are paying for the bigger-than-expected volumes shipped before the new rate took effect – costs which should be borne by the federal government.

The $25 million is part of the calculation of the new rate for the upcoming 1984-1985 crop year, which includes the establishment of an "interim adjustment" based on the apportionment of costs between he producers and the federal government. For a year in which actual volume shipments exceed the forecast tonnage on which the rate calculation is based, the shippers pay less than they should. The Canadian Transport Commission calculates the underpayment and adds it to the shippers' share for the next crop year.

For 1983-1984, tonnage shipped is estimated to be 34.35 million tonnes, considerably greater than forecast. As a result, the Canadian Transport Commission has calculated the underpayment to be $60.1 million, and has added this amount to the producers' share in determining the rate for 1984-1985. The government should own up to its responsibility and not charge producers for additional costs incurred for the five months prior to the new rates coming into effect by ordering a $25 million reduction in the 1984-1985 freight costs to be paid by producers.

It is also unfair that the farmers should be paying 33% more while railway investment is decreasing by 25%. Based on this and other evidence, many producers are finding their worst fears about the new legislation to be justified. If the railways continue to weasel out of their investment commitments, then producers will remain opposed to paying higher freight rates.

The Western Grain Transportation Act remains clearly deficient and will not be accepted by farmers until changes are made to provide a fair deal for the producer. We will continue our efforts to have these amendments made in order to promote the renewed development of a healthy agricultural sector in western Canada.

Spring Cleaning Tips

One of the latest issues of Canadian Living Magazine had some excellent cleaning tips, from various sources. Below are some that I thought were particularly good.

1) Clean windows with a solution of 1 tbsp. fabric softener, 1 tbsp. cornstarch, added to 1 quart of warm water.

2) Repair holes in window screens by plugging with airplane glue. If the hole is large, use a piece of discarded screen as a patch and glue it on.

3) The greasy film on painted walls that comes from burning wood in the fireplace can be cleaned with a solution of 1 tbsp. trisodium phosphate (TSP), available at paint and hardware stores, and 2 quarts water. Rinse several times with warm water a clean sponge.

4) Wood veneer panelling looks new after it's been wiped with a solution of 1 tbsp. white vinegar and 1 tbsp. olive oil in 1 quart of warm water. Wring out the cloth before wiping and buff the panelling dry with a soft cloth. When it's thoroughly dry apply a thin coat of paste wax and buff.

5) Cobwebs and dust on the ceiling (doesn't everyone have some) can be removed by attaching an old sock to a yardstick with an elastic band.

6) Cleaning lampshades with pleats can be speeded up by using a 4 inch wide paintbrush and dust them in a few easy strokes.

7) Ivory piano keys are easily cleaned by using a soft cloth dampened with rubbing alcohol. Plastic piano keys can be cleaned with a bit of toothpaste.

8) After cleaning the barbeque early in the season, spray the grill with a non-sticking cooking oil. It'll be a cinch to clean the rest of the season.

9) To remove dirty and worn decals from the floor of the bathtub, spray them with a pre-wash laundry spray such as Stain-Away. If that fails, heat them with a hair dryer and peel them off.

10) Stains left behind when the tub decals are removed can be easily cleaned by filling the tub with hot water and adding ½ cup of automatic dishwasher detergent.

PROBLEM:
Wild Oat Stragglers.
SOLUTION:
Double Strength Carbyne 2EC.

If the gods aren't with you, the stragglers are. Carbyne 2EC is the man made solution to those slip through wild oats that follow a wet spring, no matter what you used as a pre emergent. Effective and cost efficient, Carbyne 2EC is the only choice when stragglers threaten yields in wheat, barley or rape seed. Double strength Carbyne [illegible] stops wild oats early in the 2 leaf stage. In [illegible] trials with competitive wild oat herbicides such as Mataven, Hoe Grass and Avenge, the yield increase with Carbyne combined with its low cost resulted in the highest net profit return per hectare. Proven performance makes Carbyne 2EC your best value in wild oat control.

Profit from post emergent control of wild oats. Get double strength Carbyne 2EC — the wild oat solution for maximum yields at minimum costs.

Parturition (Calving) and Related Problems

As we have mentioned before, the dairymen's goal as far as reproductive performance is concerned, should be a 12 or 13 month calving interval. I'm sure that most dairymen will agree that problems resulting from calving or parturition are one of the most important factors leading to an extended calving interval. Thus it is very important that we thoroughly understand the normal calving procedure so we can recognize abnormalities and correct or prevent them where possible.

We thought it would be useful first of all to review the gestation periods of the dairy breeds.

Ayrshire — 277-278 days.
Jersey — 277-280 days.
Holstein — 278-282 days.
Guernsey — 282-285 days.
Brown Swiss — 288-291 days.

Pre-partum Changes

As parturition approaches, many hormonal changes take place in the cow and these changes in turn result in physical or structural changes in preparation for the passage of the calf through the birth canal. The most obvious of these is the relaxation of the pelvic ligaments particularly those on either side of the tail head resulting in an elevation of the tail head. This change along with the enlargement of the vulva is produced primarily by the increase in estrogen (female hormone) from the placenta.

The purpose of all these changes is of course to increase the elasticity of the birth canal in order to facilitate a normal birth. During this stage of preparation, the most important thing the diaryman can do is to provide the cow with a comfortable environment. Certainly the most desirable environment for a cow near calving is a box stall. However, if possible we should even go further than this and provide the cow with a box stall with either a dirt or sand floor. We're sure you are familiar with "downer cows" and we feel very strongly that good footing is one of the most important factors in the partial prevention and management of this problem.

Parturition

The actual process of parturition can be divided into three stages.

a) active contraction of the uterus, dilation of the cervix, and presentation of the fetus.
b) rupture of the allantoic sac (water bag) and expulsion of the fetus
c) expulsion of the placenta (after birth)

The first stage of parturition may last 12 hours or more depending on the size of the calf, the age of the cow, etc. The second stage or birth stage may vary in time from minutes to many hours if difficulty is encountered. The third stage or passage of the placenta occurs from one-half to eight hours following birth and if the placenta has not passed by eight hours post-calving, it is classified as a retained placenta.

It is generally accepted that one should allow cows to calve on their own provided no problems exist. However, we need a set of rules to evaluate when a problem is present. Usually if a cow has not delivered her calf by three hours after the rupture of the allantois (water bag) the dairyman should investigate the situation to ensure that he gets a live calf. Everything may be in order and the cow may just need a little help to expel the fetus.

However, there may also be an abnormality and if one does not investigate, it may be too late to save the calf. The most common abnormalities of this type would be a very large calf or an abnormal presentation position. It should be noted that there are only two positions in which a calf can be delivered normally. These are:

a) forewards, right way up, front legs both extended with the head between them.
b) backwards, right way up, both back legs extended.

Parturition Problems

In most cases simple malpresentations such as one leg back, or a head turned to one side can be corrected easily and the birth then proceeds normally. Occasionally, however, the malpresentations are severe enough that they require veterinary assistance to be corrected or possibly the calf may have to be taken by cesarean section. If the calf is excessively large a problem may result when the vulvar opening will not stretch sufficiently to allow passage of the calf without tearing. In this case it is necessary to do an episiotomy or to surgically cut the vulva to expand the diameter. If this is not done the vulva will almost always tear up towards the rectum and may create a permanent windsucker as we have described in previous issues. When an episiotomy is done the cut is made off to the side and then sutured following calving. Again a cesarean may be necessary if the calf is of such a size that normal delivery even with the aid of extra force or an episiotomy is not possible.

The problems we have discussed up to this point have all been those which result in a delay of the second stage of parturition. However there are a few problems we should be aware of which actually prevent the cow from ever getting past the first stage of parturition. The characteristic observations of a cow with this problem would be that of prolonged restlessness, continually getting up and laying down, carrying the tail in an elevated position, and most importantly, no progress in getting the fetus into the birth canal. The three most common causes of this type of interruption of the parturition process are 1) uterine torsion, 2) breech presentation, and 3) uterine inertia.

First of all, a uterine torsion is a situation where the uterus has twisted 180-380 degrees on its longitudinal axis thus closing the birth canal and preventing the fetus from being presented.

Secondly, a breech presentation is a situation where the calf is presented backwards with the hind legs flexed along side the body. In other words the tail and pin bones of the calf are thrust into the birth canal but become wedged and can pass no further.

Thirdly, uterine inertia refers to the condition where a cow is ready to calve but the uterus does not contract normally to bring about rupture of the water bag and presentation of the calf.

All three of these abnormalities must be recognized early or a dead calf is the inevitable end result.

The breech presentation can usually be corrected by manual manipulation and the calf then delivered in the normal backwards presentation. A uterine torsion may also be corrected by manual manipulation in some cases but, very commonly, the calf will have to be taken by cesarean. The uterine inertia problem is one which may be more complex and the cow must be examined thoroughly to determine the exact cause of the problem. It should be noted that pre-partum milk fever very often cause uterine inertia.

Olson named to board

. . . for private colleges

Dr. Chester Olson of Camrose has been appointed to serve on the Private Colleges Accreditation Board.

Olson is the acting academic dean of Camrose Lutheran College.

Members of the newly named Board were announced last week by Minister of Advanced Education, Dick Johnston.

Naming of the Board will move CLC one major step nearer to being able to reach degree granting status.

Establishment of the Board was approved last year when the Universities Act was amended and the Board's appointment became effective on Tuesday of last week.

The Board will consist of thirteen members who will include a chairman, four representatives from the general public, four academic staff members from provincial universities and four academic staff members from private colleges.

Other private college members will include Dr. Reo Ganson of Edmonton, Dr. Peter Mahaffy of Edmonton and Dr. Judith Meier, also of Edmonton.

Dr. John Peterson of the U of A will be chairman of the accreditation body whose public members are from Calgary, Edmonton, Sherwood Park and Lethbridge while the university representatives are from Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Athabasca.

The Board's duties will be to establish standards required for private colleges to follow for degree granting status, review programs offered by private colleges and conduct periodic evaluations of approved degree granting programs offered by private colleges.

If a private college meets the Board's standards, a recommendation will be forwarded to Mr. Johnston who could then recommend that an order-in-council be approved giving the degree-granting status.

ALBERTA SMALL PROJECTS

By Neil Waite

As many of our readers know how the Camrose One World Institute facilitates the funding of small ($25,000 or less) international development projects originating in Alberta. Project submissions go before the 'Project Review Committee' (PRC) of Alberta Small Projects for approval or rejection. This 5 member committee meets four times a year to determine which projects should receive matching dollars from the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA). The last meeting of the PRC was held in Emdonton on April 5, 1984 at St. John's Anglican Church and eight projects were accepted for a total of $85,600.

PROJECTS

Camrose-based "Sahakarini" will receive a total of $3,000 for two projects in India. While one project makes training in radio repairs available in both rural and urban ares, the other concentrates on training in poultry raising to students at a boarding compound in Kerala.

"Change for Children", an Edmonton-based agency was awarded two grants as well. One project being funded will assist a rural area in Bolivia to develop a comprehensive fish farming program which includes construction training, market development and breeding. The other "Change for Children" project is an integrated rural development involving 25 communities also in Bolivia.

An organization known as "World Missions for Jesus" will receive matching funds for money it has raised towards establishing a Vocational Training Centre in Bangkok, Thailand.

"Rotary District No. 536", an Alberta Branch of Rotary International will receive additional funds through "Alberta Small Projects" to drill and make operational 25 deep well pumps on the island of Java Bowat Indonesia.

Each year the Olds College Alumni Association receives an offering at an interdenominational church services and the proceeds are designated for international development. This year "Alberta Small Projects" is helping fund a goat husbandry project in Haiti.

Zonta Club of Edmonton, a professional women's organization involved in support to Third World countries received matching grant funds to implement a clean water project in Sri Lanka.

Kingman district notes

by Karen Sendy

Terry Dashcevich of Edmonton was a visitor to Kingman School on May 14 to show slides, give a talk and display various articles from Malawi and the other South African countries he had visited while teaching in Africa. A number of adults as well as the students and teachers enjoyed the program.

Joe and Rosie Kosack and Dick and Sharon Sendy were to Edmonton on May 13 for Rosalie Thomas's fourth birthday.

Mother's Day dinner guests with Gerry and Colleen Wenger were Josephine, Stanley and Michael Wenger and Billy and Mary Wenger and boys of Tofield. In the afternoon, the Wenger families went to Mundare to visit with Josephine's mother, Mrs. Wicentovich.

On May 10th, the grades 1 to 4 classes and their teachers, as well as a few parents, were to Edmonton to take in some of the events which were taking place during International Children's Week.

They visited the Edmonton Art Gallery, Edmonton Center, attended the Fotwick Concert put on by the Citadel on Wheels/Wings and visited the Muttart Conservatory.

Cynthia Clarke and Sharon Sendy were to Edmonton on Thursday along with the County Book buying tour.

Sale helps charity

by Jean Murray

On Thursday, a garage sale was held by the Mennonite Young Women's Association at the home of Betty Wiens.

It netted about $300 towards expenses to be used for the Mennonite Central Committee Relief (MCC) sale that is scheduled to take place in July in the Tofield Arena.

The proceeds from the garage sale will help pay for hall rental, postage and advertising of the MCC sale. All the help is voluntary Proceeds from the MCC sale will be used for relief projects in Third World countries.

Contributions will come from other Mennonite churches across the province. This sale is usually a biennial event hosted by Coaldale but, this year, it is being hosted by Tofield and Edmonton area. The 1983, Coaldale MCC sale had about six or seven thousand people in attendance.

It is hoped that the one held in Tofield will mark the beginning of making it an annual event.

A large crowd is expected this year and they will be able to take part in auction action, bazaar tables, ethnic food booths and bake tables.

Further information will be forthcoming as soon as plans are finalized.

My last article looked at some inexpensive play ideas. This article will continue on with ways and means of decreasing the cost of toys by looking at games, found toys, Christmas, pets and many [illegible].

Teach your child games that you like to play. Checkers and backgammon have simple rules and even quite young children can be competitive.

Many items that pass through our household can be made into good toys. Large boxes can have holes cut in them for windows and doors and then painted by the children with water base paint for their houses, forts and spaceships. Milk cartons make good blocks by inserting the top of one into the second. Use both 1 and 2 litre sizes.

Sing and read to your child. Teach them games we played as children; One-Two-Three O'Larry, Red Light — Green Light, Hopscotch, 7 Up, Spanish Dancers.

Urban living does not always lend itself to keeping traditional pets. Growing plants, keeping aquariums or raising birds can be popular activities for children who live in apartments

Garage sales and flea markets always have children's toys. Many durable toys will last through an entire family and still have play left in them. Bikes, trikes and wagons can be purchased second hand and then repainted, oiled and greased. Let the child be part of projects like this. It teaches him to be a good consumer and handyman. Let him choose colours and even help paint

Kites can be made at home, purchased inexpensively and are wonderful to fly. They also make colourful decorations for a child's room

Try choosing activities that the entire family can enjoy: cross country skiing, sailing, saddle clubs. It saves on gas and you don't feel like a slave to your child's lessons and activities.

Rodeo draws 6,500

by Jean Murray

Although the weather was quite wet, it did not dampen the spirit of rodeo fans at the Sodbuster Rodeo held in Tofield over the weekend.

Rodeo committee secretary, Belinda Jones, estimates that there were about 6,500 persons who attended this two-day event.

Top winners in the rodeo events were Don Helmig of Forestburg for high point cowboy; Bart Klein of Wetaskiwin in the bareback competition; Allan Woods in steer wrestling, Ed Masson of Cadogan in calf roping; John Walters in saddle bronc riding; Dave Bowers and Bill Ullery of Ardmore in team roping; Anne Lawes of Provost in ladies' barrel racing; Rod Baptiste Jr. of Hobbema in junior steer riding; and Tracy Crawford of Westerose in junior girls' barrel racing.

Mutton bustin' champions were Darren Hogan of Tofield for Saturday's event and Chancey Woods for the Sunday event.

[illegible] entries this year, an unscheduled third performance had to be held on Sunday morning. There were [illegible] entries in all, with a total purse of $13,000 offered.

Accidents were at a minimum with only one serious injury on Saturday when a cowboy received cuts to the head and a broken leg in the bull riding event.

The rodeo dance was a sell-out again this year.

Cathy Brown of Tofield was crowned Sodbuster Queen during intermission. Susan Beattie of Bawlf was first runner-up, Karry Krystal of Tofield was second runner-up and Terry Reum of Ryley was named Miss Congeniality.

The 1984 Sodbuster Rodeo Committee responsible for this event were chairman, Glenn Jones; co-ordinators, Earl Rose, Jim Kallal, Bruce Telford, Theone Jones, Sharon Telford, Barry Jones, Don Wood and Agnes Rose; secretary, Belinda Jones; announcer, George Hansen of Regina; timekeepers, Arla Garriock, Pauline Trach; judges, Melvin Lawes of Provost and Mel Smiger of Edmonton; bullfighter, Dean "Slippery" Hoover of Saskatoon; clown, [illegible] "Ticky" Wanchuk, Edmonton; stock contractor, Les Trach Rodeo Co. of St. Paul; pick-up men, Don Demchuk and Don Garriock of [illegible] Paul; and Rodeo Arena Secretary, [illegible] Demchuk of St. Paul.

Those attending the Rodeo were also able to enjoy the Lions Club's beef barbecue, the Legion pancake breakfast, carnival rides and games as well as food available at various concessions around the fairgrounds.

Inspection is planned

On Thursday, RCSCC Nootka is holding their annual inspection.

A number of officers from the Area Cadet Office in Edmonton will be present and the color party and band from Wainwright will also be in attendance.

The inspection and parade will start at 7:30 p.m. on the Holden High School grounds.

Following the parade through Holden to the Community Hall, displays will be set up to be viewed.

Awards are to be presented.

Lunch will be served and parents and the general public are welcome to attend.

Health centre proceeds

by Jean Murray

Phase one of the Tofield Health Centre is rapidly coming to an end. Donald Roth, hospital administrator, estimates that it should be completed by July 15th.

This [illegible] of construction mainly includes site grading, excavation, concrete foundation walls and footings, concrete slabs (except for the kitchen), foundation insulation and dampproofing and waterproofing, structural steel on main floor and mechanical room and mechanical and electrical rough-in work. Estimated value of this phase is $1,754,900.

Approximately 200 pages of drawings and 2,000 pages of specifications covering phase two of this project were submitted to the Department of Hospitals and Medical Care for review on February 3rd.

This phase has now gone to tender.

Approval to proceed to tender was received on May 4th from the Minister of Hospitals and Medical Care, [illegible]

Work will include finish grading and some excavation, concrete foundations and piles, concrete slabs and exterior concrete walls, all remaining steel structure, mechanical and electrical systems complete and all other architectural work required to complete the building, which includes roofing, masonary, drywall [illegible] equipment.

Tenders close on June 22 and will be reviewed by the architect, Roman M. Kujath and the Tofield Health Centre [illegible]

Approval is then required from the Minister of Hospitals and Medical Care, to award the contract and to proceed to the construction stage.

The finished product of this long waited for project will [illegible] ed atmosphere with the inclusion of such amenities as a private waiting room for families of the critically ill, an out-patient emergency area with lounges in all wings of the hospital.

Other new concepts such as day surgery, physiotherapy, a dining-room and an activity room for extended care patients, as well as a two-bed critical care ward will add to the comfort and care of patients in the future.

The completion of the Tofield Health Centre is expected to take place late in 1985.

Brown is rodeo queen

by [illegible]

Fifteen year-old Cathy Brown of Tofield was crowned Sodbuster Rodeo Queen for 1984 on Sunday.

Brown was sponsored by the Beaverhill Light Horse [illegible]

Last year's Rodeo Queen, Cyndie Rabby, presented her with the queen's tiara which will be retained by the new queen until she relinquishes it to the 1985 rodeo queen.

Tofield Mayor, Charlie Sears, presented her with a bouquet of red roses and carnations as he congratulated her on her victory. He also presented her with a saddle.

Her first duty as rodeo queen was to draw the winners of the queen contestant tickets. They were Thea George of Ohaton, Bryan Johnson of Camrose and Ted Shannon of Tofield.

Brown will go on to represent Tofield in the Lakeland Finals Queen Contest, held in October.

First runner-up in the competition was Susan Beattie of Bawlf, sponsored by Hastings Lake Pleasure Horse Association and eighteen year-old Karry Krystal of Tofield was second runner-up. She was sponsored by Risinghope [illegible]

Queen contest co-ordinator was Sharon Telford. Congeniality judges were Agnes Rose, Sharon Winter, Colleen Chapman and Rose Simpson. Horsemanship was judged by Gerry Mcguire.

Martial law?

Is martial law ahead? Are the unions losing their sense of reason?

We're looking at the situation in British Columbia where numbers of militant workers are holding up construction of a major project, and threatening to cut back on construction for the World's Fair rather than see jobs go outside the union.

We're looking at a situation where union leaders promised "peaceful disagreement" with authority. Yet non-union employers and workers had to resort to police protection, and had their vehicles towed away after their tires were deflated by non-peaceful union members.

We're looking at situations where vehicles being driven lawfully about their business were obstructed, halted, even damaged, when surrounded by protesting union members.

Unions? These aren't unions, they're mobs.

Sure they're unhappy. They're unemployed. They won't accept changing conditions. They don't like to see someone else take jobs and work they hoped would come to them. They're unhappy at facing the prospect of layoffs, of severe cutbacks in wages. Yet they won't accept facts. They won't agree there should be any change, that the goose with the golden eggs is dead because we can't even afford to buy feed anymore.

Nor can they see their actions are really the worst they could adopt, that they are inciting people to riot, and the only really logical end development will be the reading of the Riot Act, the imposition of Martial Law, the public's general acceptance of the imperative 'need' to break the unions, and the gradual loss of all those things they have striven for, (sometimes unfairly, sometimes unreasonably) and gained during the past third of a century, a third of a century when we have experienced almost unparallelled good times, indulgent times, times which enabled unions to wax strong.

Are they so blind they would invite martial law?

Updating

To the old saying that death and taxes are always with us these days we can add a third factor, inflation.

That fact is continually being recognized as various levels of government move to amend legislation, raising bottom limits, exemptions, ceilings, impositions, and so on, to recognize the impact of inflation over several years.

One of the latest is the Alberta Act respecting real and personal property of a debtor which is exempt from seizure under a writ of execution, with amendments introduced by Ken Kowalski, MLA for Barrhead. Mr. Kowalski is proposing that the present level of $2,000 for household furnishings and appliances be raised to $4,000, the level for an automobile be raised from $2,000 to $8,000 and so on down the line, to changing the level for a house and lot from $8,000 to $40,000.

Obviously, no kind of housing today can be obtained for $8,000, so the change makes sense. So, probably do most of the other changes.

But they'll only make sense for a few years, and then, they, too, will be just as out of date as the present figures are.

Instead of constantly tinkering with figures, instead of trying constantly to keep figures relevant with the economic times, why wouldn't it be a great deal smarter to key the whole thing to something that would be relevant at any time?

Just as an example, it might be so many hours at minimum wage rates . . . thus, today's housing exemption could be a house worth not more than 10,526 hours at minimum wage. Or it could be figured in pounds of butter. Or it could be related to something like the pay scale for a Grade 2 clerk in the government's pay scale. It could even be computed at so many bottles of rye whisky, if you want.

There are many landmarks such things could be tied to, and they could range all the way from fines for parking tickets to murder raps, from income tax to mother's allowances. Once established, the only thing that would have to be looked at would be the continued relativity of the rate, the equity of it. And just think of all the time it would free for more constructive pursuits . . . for our lawmakers, for our civil servants, for our legal forces, for all of us.

Reverse decision

21 May 1984
Ryley, Alberta

Dear Sir,

Beginning September 1984, the County of Beaver Board of Education plans to adopt certain changes to the Ryley and Holden School programs.

Initially, these changes will eliminate grades 7, 8 and 9 in Ryley and grades 10, 11 and 12 in Holden.

The consequences of this decision are frightening. Many potential ne[illegible] will be lost to these towns and through normal attrition, a downward spiral in population numbers will occur. The Board appears bent on saving millions but, at the expense of losing tens of millions of lost revenues to these two communities. This situation is intolerable and must be reversed.

The Ryley and Holden [illegible] have performed well in Na[illegible] testing programs over the past years. The proud tradi[illegible] by these two schools will be lost forever if something is not done soon.

Our School Board and its administrators have misplaced the importance of options within the context of total educational requirements. Options are for fleshing out the educational experience of our children but, in no way should they be considered of mandatory importance.

When the money is short the emphasis must be on basic education in a disciplined learning environment. Those parents that feel options are important must be willing to provide the necessary funds personally.

There is no question that Holden needs new facilities. But, these facilities will only be justified by increases in population — not by transferring students from Ryley to Holden.

Meanwhile, the citizens of Ryley and Holden will have to say "No" to these authorities that would put our communities in jeopardy. Beware of those who seek change but who have little or no commitment to your area. We have everything to lose and very little to gain by the Board's decision.

A solution that is penny wise and pound foolish is no solution and must be rejected at all cost.

Yours very truly,
David A. Wilde

Super people

May 23, 1984
Brooks, Alta.

Dear Sir,

I wish to publicly thank through your paper some people whom the area around Tofield have cause to be very proud of.

On May 21 during the rain, my wife and I were eastbound on Highway 14 returning to Brooks when we had serious car trouble.

We creeped into Len's Service and Restaurant hoping to obtain repairs. At this station we discovered they did not do servicing of cars but, when it came to customer service they are second to none.

The people on duty did everything possible to locate an open service station. When it became apparent nothing was open, I started to worry.

It was at this point that Arnold at Len's approached Gary Ferguson of Deville Rd. Gary came over to me, looked at my car and said "No problem. Follow me to my place, I'm sure I can fix you up."

Well, to make a long story short, we creeped to Gary's place, he repaired my car by replacing the broken parts, would not take any money for either the parts or help and my wife and I were on our way.

The car trouble was broken wheel bolts and it is a lot of work to replace them all of which he did. I had been driving with only one holding the wheel on, the rest either were broken off or stripped and not holding.

To Arnold and the staff at Len's Service, thank you for the super service. To Gary Ferguson, thank you for the parts, work and pleasant company.

Without people like this, the world would be a terrible place.

To the people of the Tofield area, be very proud of these people. I am sure there are more like them if they are any indication of the people living there.

Yours truly,
Carol and Bob Breakell

Zero population growth is not the rallying cry it was a few years ago but birth control methods still make news. As side-effects and complications of the pill and I.U.D.s become apparent, both to [illegible], [illegible] in[illegible]terest [illegible] newer [illegible] increases.

It seems that the woman is still expected to accept the major responsibility for contraception [illegible]. Certainly most of the available options are directed toward the female of our species.

Pregnancy control is important to two main groups. Dependable prevention is demanded by women for whom a pregnancy would be socially embarrassing: some single women, for example. Pregnancy planning is also important for spacing babies and for career reasons.

There are several newer methods. Some are more suitable for the woman whose sexual activity is infrequent and perhaps unpredictable, and who wishes to avoid hormones. Others give reliable long-term protection to sexually active women without the need to remember a daily tablet.

A spermicide-impregnated (no pun intended) vaginal sponge has been available over-the-counter in the United States for a year. It is disposable and remains effective for 24 hours even if intercourse is repeated. Similar in concept are spermicidal suppositories. A disadvantage is that they must be in place for [illegible] to 30 minutes (dispersal time) before they can be [illegible].

New ways of delivering the standard and similar contraceptive hormones have been developed. A vaginal ring dosed with hormone can give protection for a month, with a three-month model in the works. Slow-release capsules, good for five years and removable at will, are being implanted under the loose skin of the armpit.

Long-lasting injections are already available and are widely used, but have not been approved in Canada. Nasal sprays (male and female models), an ointment for men to rub into the skin daily, and vaccines to "immunize" against pregnancy may also appear in the future.

Medically Speaking is published with the cooperation of this newspaper and the Alberta Medical Association.

Ridin', Ropin' and Rodeoin'

Everyone likes a good bucking horse. If this weren't true, the Calgary Stampede would be just another carnival.

Rodeos had their beginnings back when the men on working ranches had to break horses to sell and for their own use. I don't think that even they imagined today's rodeo riders atop wild yaks, or mutton busters — small children aboard some of the ugliest, shaggiest sheep this side of a butcher block. Then again, maybe they were that farsighted.

I enjoy rodeos because the participants do things that I [illegible] buckles in Texas. I've never [illegible] of heights, so bronc busting is a no-no. Just plain fear keeps me away from bulls. Roping and bull-dogging is out because I never could aim worth a darn. Clowning around I do regularly, but not with anything that outweighs me or has horns. As for barrel racing — do you realize that if she couldn't rein in at the fence, a barrel racer could be the first cowgirl hurtled into space riding only a saddle?

I've often wondered what a rodeo clown does to psych himself up before a rodeo. Wandering around the bull pens, giving the stock tranquilizers through the fence, sounds good to me. The cowboys might not get great rides, but the clown would have less chance of becoming a tossed salad. Those clowns make it all look easy but you can't fool me. I know that it's impossible to choreograph and rehearse those steps with anything as mean, ugly and unpredictable as a bull. And the riders have no rehearsals either. Bull riding fascinates me — danger always attracts a big crowd. Every time they mount up and come clamouring out of the chutes, these men run the risk of being bent, folded or stapled.

A good friend of ours was a rodeo rider. He still is, in his soul. We asked him once why he did it and his answer was something about it being in his blood. (I think cowboys bust broncs and ride bulls for the challenge — either that, or to impress the ladies.)

We also asked our friend if there is any truth to the story that a Real Cowboy never takes off his boot[illegible] his hat? Not that it matters [illegible] if he [illegible] the rodeo circuit [illegible] he'll get tossed out [illegible]

Leaf problems develop

Some farmers in the south-central Alberta experienced a problem with their spring wheat last year. It manifested itself as the failure of wheat seedlings to emerge, or if they did emerge, their leaves were yellow and spindly.

Dr. Ronald Howard, plant pathologist at the Alberta Horticultural Research Center in Brooks, reports that samples of plants suffering from this disorder were received in several areas of Saskatchewan.

In the following excerpt from an article carried in the "Saskatchewan" Crop Protection Newsletter," Dr. Andrew Frewd, provincial plant pathology specialist, describes the disease and its symptoms.

"From several parts of the province, reports have been received of cereal seedlings in which the second leaf is folded in a zig-zag accordion-like manner, with up to 4 or 5 folds, and its tip is retained by the first leaf. Aside from frequent suggestions of herbicide damage or soil compaction as possible causes, this appears to be a peculiar physiological condition. However, each case must necessarily be considered on its merits.

"The typical sequence of events associated with the accordion-like leaf is as follows: at seeding, the seed has been placed in cool, moist soil at a greater-than-normal depth. Germination conditions have been unfavorable, and the hypocotyl has emerged slowly and then elongated slowly.

At this developmental stage, the first leaf has appeared above the soil level. At this moment, the weather turns extremely favorable to plant development, and high temperatures prevail. Elongation of the first leaf is not yet complete, when the second leaf begins to actively elongate. This occurs while the whole plant system is still positioned low in the soil and the second leaf may encounter soil particles which obstruct its normal development.

Also the plant's physiological regulatory system determines that a sufficient length of time has elapsed from initial germination to program further leaf initiation, regardless of environment conditions".

Dr. Howard says the above description appears to fit the situation in Alberta and that only time will tell whether the fields where the disorder is widespread will sustain significantly lower yields than fields which do not have it.

Importance of Agriculture Often Overlooked

Although agriculture remains one of the leading sectors of our economy, the importance of agriculture and the benefits it brings to Canadians are often overlooked, especially by the federal government.

As a consequence, federal agricultural policies have failed to properly support the continued development of a strong farm sector. In recent years farmers have faced many serious problems which have threatened the financial health of Canadian agriculture. It is a tribute to the strength and good management of this sector that, despite these difficulties, it has maintained its prominence in our economy.

Agricultural exports amounted to nearly $10 billion in 1983 and, with the proper policies, that figure should continue to grow. $6 billion of these exports were in grain, oilseeds and their products, mostly from western Canada. Overall, agriculture had a positive trade surplus of $5 billion in 1983 which helped our balance of payments and the Canadian dollar.

Total farm-gate sales of agricultural products will exceed $18 billion in 1984. The multiplier effect in agriculture is larger than average and farm production provides the basis for agrifood and service industries which make up about 40% of Canada's economy.

Although only 5% of our population is engaged in primary food production, the entire agrifood system employees 18% of the Canadian labour force.

This employment generates considerable consumer demand and purchasing power throughout the economy. Farmers themselves are major buyers of Canadian products. In 1984, our farmers will purchase $2 billion of farm machinery and repairs, $1.1 billion of fertilizer and over $1 billion worth of energy.

Western Canada remains the centre of Canadian agriculture, producing over 50% of our total agricultural sales. The prairies produce two-thirds of Canada's coarse grains, including wheat and corn. The three prairie provinces have 56% of farm cash receipts from cattle and calves, with 33% from Alberta alone. In 1981, western Canada accounted for 60% of Canada's total agricultural exports. In order for our economy to grow and prosper, particularly in the west, we need to recognize the enormous contribution made by agriculture.

Federal government policies must be shaped to encourage Canada's farmers to expand their production of foodstuffs and to capture an increasing share of world markets. While agriculture is currently facing serious difficulties, there are many steps that can and should be taken with respect to interest rates, fuel taxes stabilization programs and transportation costs that would greatly assist our producers.

Canadian agriculture is efficient, productive and highly competitive. There is no doubt that it will survive its present difficulties. We must move now to ensure that it does more than survive: that it becomes a vehicle for new and vigorous growth throughout the economy and in all regions of Canada.

Summer of Fun

If you are thinking of making this summer a little more exciting for both you and your children, read on. Below are just a few of the summer programs available for adults, teens and youngsters.

Lakeland College in Vermilion — opens its doors to the community every summer. Fun programs like painting, calligraphy, quilting, [illegible] and much more are on for one week at a time. Accommodations are available at the college or bring your camper and enjoy the campground. A children's program is available for 6-12 year olds and daycare for those under 6.

Alberta Women's Week — runs from July 23-26 in Olds. Seminars, guest speakers and fun hilite the week. Accommodations and a children's program are available.

RRBA Outdoor Camps — these programs for youths aged 13-18 years offer a chance to develop leadership, communication and interpersonal skills, as well as having fun. The setting is perfect — near Nordegg, Alberta. Sponsorships are available from farm organizations, i.e. Women of Unifarm, Co-operative Associations, etc., to cover most of the registration fee. Camps run throughout July and August.

Rural Youth Seminar — this seminar is available to youths 15-18 years old and is located in Edmonton. It is an opportunity to experience life in the city and develop skills required for successful urban living. I am a part of this program this year and I think we have planned a fun and informative week. This seminar runs from July 15-20 at Concordia College in Edmonton. A small registration fee is all that is charged — meals and accommodation are covered by program sponsors.

Most of the above programs have registration deadlines that are fast approaching. For more details and application forms give this office a call.

Plan a break this summer!

County seeks a chief

by Joan Murray

A delegation of four fire chiefs representing County of Beaver Volunteer Fire Departments were present at the County Council meeting on May 24th, to provide council with details of their needs.

The present county Chief, Laurie Weatherill, recently asked council to accept his resignation as County Fire Chief so that he could devote all his time to his duties as a full-time agricultural fieldman.

A representative from the Alberta Fire Departments Association will be invited to the next council meeting in order to obtain more information outlining what the duties of a county fire chief should be, in order to best meet the fire service needs of the county.

Council feels that the type of person they are looking for is not readily available, therefore, Weatherill will be continuing to handle the fire chief's duties until a competent replacement can be found.

Councillors received for discussion, maps from Municipal Affairs depicting proposed changes in district boundaries.

The discussion of changes will take place after a census of each district has been completed. The census is already partially completed.

Presentation of service awards honoring county employees for years of long service will be made sometime in the fall of '84.

The date of the next County Council meeting has been changed to June 8th.

Getting an insurance claim processed can be frustrating. Often problems occur that delay settlement of the claim. You can avoid many problems by learning about insurance claim policies and procedures.

To help you become more aware of the procedures involved in making and processing insurance claims, Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs has produced a booklet entitled "A Consumer's Guide to Insurance Claims". Copies of the booklet are available, free of charge, by calling our office at 340-5241. We'll look at just a few of the areas covered by the booklet here.

Ensuring you have enough insurance is the first step to avoiding insurance problems. Usually most people discover they have inadequate coverage after a loss occurs.

The insurance you purchase will usually give you one of three types of coverage:
— Actual cash value (this is the current cost of the article, less depreciation);
— replacement value (replaces your goods at today's price);
— stated value (replaces goods at the value at which they are appraised when the policy is purchased).

The second step to avoiding problems is to be familiar with your policy. Often you do not file a claim because you do not think you are covered, when in fact you are. The reverse is also true.

Also, check your policy carefully for exclusions. An exclusion means that, unless certain precautions are taken, your insurance company won't provide protection for specific types of losses. A good example of this is the following situation:

"You go away for winter holidays and are gone four days or more. During this time your furnace goes out and your pipes freeze. Unless you arranged for someone to check your house regularly while you were gone, the insurance company will not pay for the damage. Under this exclusion, you have to show that you tried to take precautions to prevent the loss."

Keeping an updated list of your belongings will also help to avoid problems. Ensure that it's kept somewhere where it will not be destroyed by fire!!

Giving truthful information and making honest claims are the last steps to remember in avoiding problems. Your claim may be invalidated by including inaccurate or untruthful information, or by adding items that don't exist to a list of actual stolen property.

The booklet "A Consumer's Guide to Insurance Claims" will help you learn more about insurance claims and settlement procedures. Don't forget to call us at 340-5241 for a copy.

For further information contact: Robert I. Pittman, Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 2nd Floor, Provincial Building, 4920-51 Street, Red Deer, Alberta, T4N 6K8. Phone: 340-5241.

BRTA tour planned

A second bus tour of this part of Alberta has been scheduled by the Bottle River Tourist Association.

That decision was reached last week when the BRTA held a regular monthly meeting in Camrose.

Members were advised that the first tour was a success and there was a demand for an encore and as a result, a second tour in the BRTA Zone has been scheduled for June 20th with tickets available at the BRTA Office in Camrose.

Members gave their approval for the 1985 operating budget which amounts to $155,000.

Members were advised that hospitality training seminars were scheduled for June.

Norman Land suggested that approximately 200,000 people could be passing through the zone on the occasion of the Pope's visit in September and a committee was named to investigate the tourism opportunities that might result.

Manager Sylvia Clemens announced that a new tourist information centre is to be located in Devon, bringing the number of such centers located in the BRTA Zone up to four-ten.

Prior to the start of the meeting, the BRTA's founding president, Dr. Si Swak of Camrose addressed the group. A dinner held in conjunction with the meeting had been hosted by the City of Camrose.

The next BRTA meeting is to be held in Consort on June 21st.

Alberta

Medically Speaking

by Dr. Bob Young

Zero population growth is not the rallying cry it was a few years ago, but birth control methods still make news. As side-effects and complications of "the pill" and I.U.D.'s become apparent (both remain amazingly safe), interest in other, newer methods increases.

It seems that the woman is still expected to accept the major responsibility for conception control. Certainly most of the available options are directed toward the female of our species.

Pregnancy interval is important to two main groups. Dependable prevention is demanded by women for whom a pregnancy would be socially embarrassing; some single women, for example. Pregnancy planning is also important for spacing babies and for career reasons.

There are several newer methods. Some are more suitable for the woman whose sexual activity is infrequent and perhaps unpredictable, and who wishes to avoid hormones. Others give reliable long-term protection to sexually active women without the need to remember a daily tablet.

A spermicide-impregnated ring (not intended) vaginal sponge has been available over-the-counter in the United States for a year. It is considered and remains effective for 24 hours, even if intercourse is repeated. Similar in concept are spermicidal suppositories. A disadvantage is that they must be in place for 10 to 30 minutes (dispersal time) before they can be relied on.

Here ways of delivering the standard (and similar) contraceptive hormones have been developed. A vaginal ring dosed with hormone can give protection for a month, with a three-month model in the works. Slow-release capsules, good for five years and removable at will, are being implanted under the bone skin of the armpit.

Long-lasting injections are already available and are widely used, but have not been approved in Canada. Nasal sprays (male and female models), an ointment for men to rub into the skin daily, and vaccines to "immunize" against pregnancy may also appear in the future.

Medically Speaking is published with the cooperation of this newspaper and the Alberta Medical Association.

Pow wow is staged

by Jean Stoney

All the students in grade two at C. W. Seary School at Tofield have been studying ancient Indian lore for the past few weeks.

On May 17th, they went on a field trip to the Tofield Museum as part of their studies.

This extensive study culminated in a pow wow on Friday when they ate some bannock bread they made as well as sampling bits of deer, moose, and elk meat and deer jerky.

They also sang songs, danced Indian dances and played some Indian games.

As I See It

by Dr. Walt Buck, M.L.A.

On a recent trip to Ontario and Quebec, I was the recipient of some valuable first-hand information about tourism and small business development. Both these provinces have made concerted efforts to advance the cause of small business and tourism in a very positive manner.

While in Montreal, I visited a ten-storey facility which offers full educational facilities for tourism personnel. This institute graduates 3,500 students per year, teaching professional conduct to everyone from busboys and waitresses to hotel managers. For some time I have advocated a similar program for Alberta. We have no co-ordinated and co-operative program now.

Certainly, when one considers that tourism is a billion dollar a year industry in our province, we should do all we can to promote it through the educational process.

Through the combined efforts of private tourism operators and government, we should be able to develop a system of first class educational opportunity for employees in the tourism industry. Anything less than that, in my opinion, is not enough!

I would be pleased to receive your comments, questions and concerns on this or any other topic. Please write to Room 314, Legislative Building in Edmonton, T5K 2B6, or telephone my office at [illegible] (collect).

Crossfire

by Rev. John Lenslyn, Camrose Mennonite Fellowship

A comment by one of the members of our church last month has stuck in my mind. We had just concluded some physical exercises as part of a study in our church entitled "A Life of Wholeness." In the discussion that followed he said, "Imagine how much better off we would be if we put as much effort into our study of the Word."

He's absolutely right, and it reminded me of the following imaginary conversation.

Counselor — "Do you talk in your sleep?"

Client — "No, I talk in other people's sleep."

Counselor — "I don't understand. How can that be?"

Client — "I'm a preacher."

A serious study of the Word of God should be a priority of all in the church — that is the ideal. But the approach of many to their spiritual life is very casual. Many approach it more casually than they do their physical needs or work. Does spiritual life not deserve as much effort and attention as do the other aspects of our being? I think it does, but I'm a pastor, and so that's what you would expect me to answer. Do YOU think it does? That is the important question for you to answer for yourself. If not, why not? Is it, despite what you may say to others or do to try to keep up an image, not a priority with you?

Spiritual muscles can get as flabby and out of shape as can our physical muscles. Our spiritual well-being requires disciplined study and effort just as surely as our physical well-being requires effort. The rewards are eternal. When it comes to spiritual life, don't walk in your sleep, or go through the motions in a daze. Give it the priority it deserves.

Handicapped are people

by [illegible]

Let's not talk about any particular group of people today, let's talk about all our children and our neighbors children. School will soon be out and hundreds of kids will be excited about their plans for the summer. That's the way it should be; recreation fills an important role in anyone's life. Quite apart from the fun and enjoyment of it, is the influence it has in developing a child into a whole person. A "whole" person is a good citizen; one who is ready to give back to his/her community what they have received.

Just saying, 'what they have received' reminds me of some children in town who don't have any plans for the summer. These are the kids whose parents don't have a cottage at the lake and can't afford to send them away to camp. These same parents can't afford the expense of figure skating, hockey or swimming. What are these kids going to do with their time this summer? Should any one of us care?

Perhaps we should, if only for self interest.

Try spending a day in court and see a procession of young people involved in petty crime. We might wonder if there was some connection between deadly boring summers and what we are seeing.

Should we be doing more policing, or should we be providing some innovative summer recreation programs that everyone can afford.

What would you do?

Open house is planned

... by Tofield firemen

In conjunction with a weekend training seminar, fire fighters from Tofield and the surrounding area are planning an open house for Sunday afternoon.

Members of the Tofield community are invited to visit the Tofield Fire Hall, meet with members of the department and take in an afternoon of fire safety information.

John Bauman, chairman of the organizing committee says this is intended to be a family affair. "Members from fire departments across the county will be in attendance. Fire apparatus will be open for inspection and we will teach people how to use home fire extinguishers."

In addition, a number of childrens activities are planned. "A fire safety robot, 'Red' from Edmonton will be in attendance to talk to the children."

A fun competition is planned as well. Firemen will demonstrate the use of fire department skills and a hose-laying competition is to be part of the afternoon. "We want the people in this community to have an opportunity to see what the fire service is doing and to meet the volunteers who provide this service" says Bauman. "We are proud of the level of service we are able to provide in this community. A recently released study done by the provincial Fire Prevention Branch showed that the fire service in this area is one of the best in province. This is only possible with a high degree of commitment by both the volunteers who provide the service and the community who support us."

The Tofield Fire Hall open house will be held between 1 and 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Games were played yesterday (Tuesday) in Armena, Ryley and Viking and will be reported next week.

Tomorrow's (Thursday) contests will see Holden at home to Bardo, Ryley is hosting Viking and Tofield travels to Camrose.

Tuesday's contests will have Tofield at home to Armena, Bardo is hosting Viking and Ryley goes to Camrose.

One week from tomorrow (Thursday) has games scheduled for Ryley, Viking and Armena.

Armena got the new season off to a great start when they trounced Holden 20-0 and blanked Viking 8-0.

Camrose made it two straight when that team whipped Viking 11-3 and edged Bardo 5-4 while the other game played saw Ryley bounce Bardo 11-3.

A game between Holden and Tofield was either not played or, was not reported to CFCW.

Spilstead news

by [illegible]

This past weekend saw the Spilstead Cub Pack packing their sleeping bags and heading for Red Deer Lake near Ferintosh for the annual Wildrose District Cubaree. All eight of our Cubs and their two leaders, Chuck McBurney and Don Osada, were joined by groups from all around the Wildrose District to take part in the various activities such as canoeing, scavenger hunts, obstacle courses and campfires. A tired, but happy group arrived home after the closing ceremonies on Sunday afternoon.

The Spilstead Community League will be holding its final meeting for the summer on Tuesday, June 5 at 8 p.m. The plans to hold its monthly dance on June 16 will be finalized at this meeting as well as any future activities for the summer. The Community League meetings will resume again in September but now is the time to get plans started for the fall season.

The Spilstead Scout Troop is preparing for their three-day Challenge Camp this weekend at Camp Woods at Sylvan Lake. The Scouts are putting together a camping kit so if anyone from the community has any cooking utensils, pots or pans that they would like to donate, please call me at 662-2732 and they will gladly be picked up.

Old organ

Harold Schultz, curator of the Tofield Museum points out the fine points of this beautiful old organ that dates back to the 1800's. The museum will be open regularly, every Sunday during the months of July and August, for anyone who wishes to delve into the extensive history of the Tofield area.

BETWEEN THE COVERS

Author Ken Follett is well-known for his suspense-filled action novels. His newest book, On Wings of Eagles, is written in the same detailed and fast-paced manner, but every word of it is true, as he recounts the exploits of a group of Texas businessmen involved in rescuing two Americans from an Iranian jail.

A similar title, but a novel this time, is Eagles, by Lewis Orde, the saga of a man whose rise to wealth and power is overshadowed by tragic family circumstances.

Catherine Cookson readers will be glad to see one of her new titles, Hamilton, on the new book table this week.

R.D Lawrence has provided us with yet another fascinating account of one of Canada's wild animals, the cougar, in The Ghost Walker

On the children's display table, look for a number of new books in the Kids and Canada Series: Hockey Showdown, Anna's Pet, Afraid of the Dark, Mike and the Bike, and Who's a Soccer Player?

Three new "concept" books include: Why Am I Going to the Hospital? by Claire Ciliotta; Sick in Bed by Anne Rockwell, and Big or Little? by Kathy Stinson, author of Red is Best.

A new kid's cookbook is Kids Cook Microwave, but it has tips any new (or seasoned) microwave owner might wish to share.

As the baseball season gets into full swing, OK OK Blue-jays should prove popular.

Remember, if you are looking for a particular new book and cannot find it on the new book table, simply ask to have your name put on the reserve list for that title. Books which this library has not (or cannot) purchase, may be borrowed from another library. If you can't find what you want, just ask, and we will do our best to get it for you!

Regular library hours are: Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-5 and 6-9, Friday and Saturday, 10-12 and 1-5.

GET CANADA THISTLE TOO!

SUPERCHARGE YOUR MIX WITH BANVEL

Add Banvel® herbicide to your mix and super charge it. Get those hard-to-kill weeds that can infest your crops, like Canada Thistle. Banvel added to your mix acts like a supercharger. Mixed with 2,4-D amine or MCPA, Banvel delivers effective in-crop top growth control of Canada Thistle. Followed-up with a post harvest application, a Banvel treatment can kill the entire Canada Thistle plant.

Spray weeds early, when they are in the seedling stage. Increase your chances for greater yields. Banvel in your mix means you'll get the really tough ones too. If you don't mix with Banvel, you've still got weeds.

Play presented

by Joan Murray

A two-act play was performed last week in the Tofield Community Hall by the Tofield Drama Club, portraying their interpretation of the classic "Alice in Wonderland", by Anne Coulter Martens.

The three-night performance on May 23-25 was not as well attended as other productions had been in past years. Director, Linda Watson attributes the smaller attendance to having three performances rather than the usual two.

She said the play was well received by the public and the actors felt a good response from the audience.

The cast consisted of the following students from grades five to twelve, although most were from the elementary and junior high grades.

Behind the scenes were director, Linda Watson; set and props, Barry Shandro and Karen Brown; costumes, Rosa Siemens; and lighting and sound, Shawn Keller.

Dust control planned

by [illegible]

At the Holden Council meeting on May 22nd, it was decided that dust control on local roadways would be achieved through the use of a calcium chloride solution, rather than oil as was used in previous years.

This method has been used successfully in Bruce. Although it does get a bit slick in wet weather, it is a very effective dust controlling agent.

Calcium chloride applications last for about two years at about the same cost as the use of oil which would only last for one year.

Council would like to have this done as soon as possible and have arranged for the street committee, village foreman and Greg Anderson, a representative from Allied Chemicals, to meet and discuss the methods of application.

Triple C Construction has been awarded the contract to refinish the Holden Community Hall dance floor at a cost of $2,850. They will fill all holes, sand the area and apply two coats of a dance floor finish.

The Holden Chamber of Commerce are decorating a float to advertise the Holden Homecoming festivities that will take place in August. The float will be entered in fairs and exhibitions throughout the county.

Because the village is now being charged a fee for NSF cheques that pass through their account, they have found it necessary to levy a five dollar charge for every NSF cheque they receive.

Council has agreed to arrange for the spraying of dandelions and other weeds on village properties to take place as soon as possible.

In response to a letter received regarding a private airstrip being constructed northwest of Holden on the Blair Nelson property, council registered no objection to the project providing it meets with the construction and operation regulations of the Department of Transport.

Town ups insurance

by [illegible]

At the Town of Tofield Council meeting on Monday night, a resolution was passed to upgrade insurance coverage for the mayor, councillors, and the Tofield Fire Brigade.

The mayor and councillors (including elected or appointed officers) will now have 24-hour coverage for accidental death or dismemberment (AD & D) in the amount of $50,000. Last year they were covered for business travel only.

Members of the Tofield Fire Department will now be covered for AD & D in the amount of $200,000 as opposed to the 1983 policy which only covered them for $75,000.

These new policies not only provide improved coverage but in most areas, rates have been reduced.

The section of Lions Park that is used for a reservoir [illegible] has a pump to pump the water out. The area around the pump has been landfilled as was necessary for proper operation. Any further improvements to this park will be the responsibility of the Lions Club Parks Committee. Any additional landfilling plans will have to be brought to council for approval, to ensure that levels be maintained to facilitate proper functioning of this new pumping system.

Council felt that in addition to a thank-you letter Bert Clark received when he retired this year, he deserved something extra special for the good work and efforts he put into his job of working for the Town of Tofield for the last 26 years. He was presented with a watch with a commemorative inscription on the back. Clark thanked each councillor personally for this gift.

The regional landfill is scheduled to go into operation the first part of October. Council agreed that it was imperative they choose one of the several sites they have been considering, as soon as possible. A committee will be inspecting sites and are expected to present a suitable location for consideration at the next council meeting.

1984 mill rates have been set at 91.33 for residential and 114.79 for non-residential. Tax notices are scheduled to go out June 29th. Payment will be due August 31st and must be received at the Town Office no later than this date to avoid penalty charges. If payments are made by mail, they must be postmarked on or before August 31st.

Firemen aid victim at an accident site

by Joan Murray

At 10:10 p.m. on Saturday, Tofield Fire Department received a call to the scene of a motor vehicle accident nine miles north and two miles west of the Town of Tofield.

Assistant Fire Chief, John Bauman, said that the department had to use a special rescue device, called a KED, to immobilize the victim in case of any back injury. Fortunately, the injured man had received only minor injuries when he was taken to the Tofield Hospital.

Apparently the car had flipped over and landed in the slough pinning the driver underneath. It was necessary to block the car up as they lifted it and with the help of bystanders, RCMP, and fire department members, they were able to lift him out of the water.

Robin Bell, of the Tofield RCMP Detachment is investigating the mishap. He said it appeared as though the driver had lost control of the vehicle when the accident occurred.

Once again people are interested in what can be planted into Treflaned soil. Sometimes a garden is accidentally Treflaned or sometimes it is done on purpose. Treflan controls wild oats, wild buckwheat, redroot pigweed, lambsquarters, Russian thistle, chickweed, purslane, millet and a few [illegible].

Direct seeded vegetables which can be seeded into Treflan land are peas, beans, carrots, turnips, cabbage and cauliflower. Potatoes should [illegible].

Transplanted vegetables which can be seeded into Treflaned land are tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage, broccoli, peppers, brussel sprouts and flowers.

When putting on Treflan, work it into the top three inches of soil within eight hours of application, and then plant your garden. Use Treflan liquid at 1/10 oz. per 100 square feet, or granular Treflan at 1/20 lb. per 100 square feet.

NOTE: Treflan should not be used on any garden crop not mentioned above.

Some Local Gardening Hints

When speaking at the Anderson School on May 11, the women shared a few gardening tips which I thought you might be interested in.

1. Use epsom salts in rows to [illegible]
2. Use a pinesol and water drench once a week to control [illegible].
3. Plant peas in hills about 8 inches apart.

If you have any gardening tips which work for you, feel free to pass them along to us and we'll circulate them if possible. Good luck with your garden this year.

Crop seeding nearly done

Continued good weather could see the completion of the 1984 crop seeding season.

Reports received from Alberta Wheat Pool indicate that, despite the poor weather conditions that have prevailed throughout the month, over two-thirds of all crops have now been sown.

Weather conditions have varied throughout the region and this is illustrated in the amount of seeding that has been completed which ranges from eighty-five percent down to about one-quarter done.

Farmers around Camrose lead the way with eighty-six percent of all crops seeded to date with wheat done and only five percent of intended canola crops still to go. About three-quarters of other crops have been seeded to date.

New Norway [illegible] are just a step behind with eighty-four percent of intended [illegible] been sown. Wheat and flax seeding has been completed. Oats has only [illegible] percent to go while sixty-[illegible] percent of barley and canola has been sown.

Holden regional farmers have also passed the eighty percent mark with wheat seeding completed. The other crops have now passed the three-quarter mark.

Hay Lakes farmers climbed to the eighty percent mark with wheat seeding completed and all other crops have reached the three-quarter mark.

Farmers around Bawlf passed the three-quarter mark with wheat just about done. Other crops to be seeded range from sixty up to eighty percent completed.

In the Round Hill area, farmers have seeded sixty-two percent of all intended acreage with wheat seeding over the ninety percent mark while others range from sixty-five down to forty percent.

Ryley farmers are about one-half done. Wheat seeding has reached three-quarters while canola is at sixty-five percent but, oats and barley are only at the one-quarter mark.

Farmers in the vicinity of Daysland are nearly sixty percent completed with canola and flax about ninety percent completed and all other [illegible] have reached the [illegible] mark.

Poor weather has held farmers around Tofield back and they are only at the one-quarter mark to date although wheat seeding is just about completed. A start has been made with barley [illegible] while oats seeding [illegible] started.

Moisture conditions in the ground now range from good up to very good.

A report from the Rosalind area was not available.

Firemen have open house

by Jean Murray

There was water everywhere on Sunday at the Tofield Fire Hall open house as firemen from Tofield, Viking, Ryley and Holden demonstrated their skills in hydrant catching, hose laying vehicle driving, water hose control and the bucket brigade.

Fire department members and their families along with local residents and a multitude of children turned out to take part in activities and view displays inside the fire hall.

The function of a small set of the Kinmen Tool, commonly known as the "jaws of life", was demonstrated by firemen as they demolished an old car by prying the doors off and cutting through sections of steel. This tool was donated to the Tofield Fire Department by Crestline Ambulance of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, last Tuesday.

Youngsters were permitted to try their hand at fire skills using the hoses and fire extinguishers under supervision.

Twenty-five firemen from Viking, Tofield, Ryley and Holden attended an all-day in-service program of seminars and training activities, on Saturday.

Stan Harbin and Shaun Hammond from the Alberta Disaster Services talked about disaster planning and the new Dangerous Goods Act. Tofield's assistant fire chief, John Bauman, spoke on the subject of the image of a fireman.

Bill MacKay, Provincial Fire Commissioner, gave a speech on how fire prevention benefits a department while Harvey Dussault of the Fire Prevention Branch, gave tips on improving knowledge of fire protection. Mark

Tofield honors grads

by Erwin Blankenau

On Friday, Tofield High School held ceremonies to honour 42 graduates.

Graduation ceremonies actually began on Thursday evening with an interdenominational church service at Tofield United Church. This service was sponsored by AADAC and the Safe Grad Committee. Carl Hansen gave the opening prayer, Dan Newell and Randy Benson led the group in singing and Bill Bast, Tofield's Future Community Youth Worker and guest speaker, talked about youth, responsibility and decision making. Dan Newell closed the service with a benediction.

The graduation ceremony continued on Friday with exercises in the Tofield School Gymnasium, which was decorated by Grade 11 students. Behind the stage was a large mural depicting this year's graduation theme, 'Take A Look At Me Now'.

Master of ceremonies for the formal exercises, Andre Nimchuk, welcomed guests and introduced the arrival of the graduands.

Jim Siler provided the invocation, and Howard Koop gave the valedictory address. Rev. Randy Benson, guest speaker, opened his address with a reminder to the students to "never give up", and reminded students that what they will reap depends on what they have sown in their younger years.

Debbie Neufeld and Sharleen Weiss, on behalf of the grads, thanked him for his efforts and presented him with a small gift.

The students "Last Will and Testament" was read by Chris Smith and Karry Krystal. This document had been prepared by Chris Smith, Karry Krystal, Kim McBurney and Debbie Neufeld.

Al Pollock, in his principal's remarks, praised the graduands as an exceptional group of students. He and Mr. Aubrey then presented diplomas to each of the graduands.

The ceremonies continued with a banquet in the Tofield Community Center. The grads, their parents and invited guests enjoyed the turkey dinner provided by the Tofield Legion Ladies.

Master of ceremonies for the banquet was Barry Shandro, who introduced the guests seated at the head table. These guests included C. Sears, Mayor of Tofield, and his wife, Ruby; J. Warner, Chairman of the Board of Education and his wife, Irene; B. Schoeman, Superintendent of Schools for the County of Beaver and his wife, Joyce; Rev. Randy Benson and his wife, Pam; Arnold Swift, County Councillor and his wife, Joyce; and Mr. Shandro's wife, Joanne.

After the banquet, Laurent Douziech thanked the Legion Ladies for the dinner.

C. McBurney toasted the graduands; and Daniel Brown, president of the Tofield Student's Union, replied to Mr. McBurney's toast.

Tina Smith proposed a toast to the parents with a reply coming from Dr. J. Neufeld.

Arthur Sutherland toasted the school, with Mrs. Anne Taylor providing the response.

Next, Mayor Sears brought greetings from the Town of Tofield and it's council. Greetings from the Superintendent's Office were then expressed by Mr. Schoeman, Superintendent of Schools.

John Warner, County Reeve and Chairman of the Board of Education, then congratulated the grads on behalf of the Board. As a parting gift from the Board, he presented Brenda Matycio with a cheque to pay for a Composite picture of the 1994 graduating class. Brenda Matycio expressed her appreciation on behalf of the graduating class.

Following the banquet, the Grads formed a receiving line, and everyone then proceeded to the school for the dance.

Bikers

Bikers ... motorcyclists ... have for years had a bad reputation.

At least in part, they have earned it by their attitudes, their antics, their behaviour. Their seeming challenge of the law, their disdain for constituted authority.

Most of us realize that most drivers are 'good guys'. That only a few are irresponsible to the point of developing a bad name. Most of us realize the majority of people who drive power tobaggans are also responsible, that any bad name comes only from a few. And so it goes.

So many people realize there are large numbers of motorbike owners who are not part of the gangs or clubs which seem to bring the bad name.

All of this being so, we were fascinated this week to learn of a Ride for Sight projected by some 4,000 bikers this coming week-end, with a goal of something in the range of a quarter of a million dollars, all of which will be devoted to research a cure for the blinding disease of Retinitis Pigmentosa. Commonly known as tunnel vision, this ailment has been adopted by bikers all across the country, and literally hundreds of them will be on the highways June 9 and 10.

Calgary's Motorcycle Club, for instance, is hoping to see greater input this year as riders will be leaving from six different locations en route to Sylvan Lake Hockey Campground. Each province seems to have a similar program mapped out.

So bikers are real people, after all. Like any other segment of society, there are the good guys and the bad guys. Let's hear it for the bikers, who seem moving to become responsible members of society.

Let's wish them luck in their Ride for Sight.

Integrity

Is it conceivable that in the race for leadership of the Liberal party we're seeing the all-too-rare in this country demonstration of integrity on which the British parliamentary system was based many years ago?

Is it possible that John Turner's resignation from the Trudeau government, when he was minister of finance, was based on the principle involved, that he could no longer serve in high office under a leader who would not back him, and for whose political machinations he had lost respect?

Turner was no neophyte in the Trudeau cabinet. He had already earned his spurs in other jobs, including that of minister of justice, where he piloted through some difficult and tricky legislation. He knew the way government operates, the way cabinet operates, the way Trudeau operates.

Yet everyone wondered why he would simply walk away eight years ago when he held so many of the good cards in his hand. Everyone wondered why there was no explanation, why there was no public argument with the Prime Minister, with the public spilling of bad blood.

Though he may have had a good hand, it seems certain he quit because he realized the Prime Minister held the trump cards.

But no public argument, no public blast, no accusations?

Just possibly it was the single really responsible type of action we have seen, either in the federal government, or that of Alberta, in many years. Just possibly, it's only now coming to light how deeply Turner prizes the tradition of personal responsibility, or personal integrity on the part of a cabinet minister. Unfortunately for us all, such action has not been forthcoming when it should have been on all too many instances, nor has it been demanded, either by Prime Minister Trudeau, or by Premier Lougheed. Or for that matter, some of our other premiers.

The last word

The following editorial was printed some time ago in CARMAG, a Canadian magazine dealing with the auto industry.

The Last Word

by Tony Lynch

Vindication and — at least for the moment — justice, seem to have prevailed. Readers may recall my tirade in the April/May issue on the Metric system and its enforcement against the wishes of most of the populace.

A couple of gas station owners, Jack Halpert and Ray Christiansen have had the courage to take the law on in court. The court, for its part, has thrown the case out, resulting in a landmark decision for Ontario in the present administration of the Metric laws.

Judge William Ross, in a bluntly worded statement, found the metric regulations abhorent and unconscionable, stating that the metric regulations were poorly drafted and also excessive in terms of what was really necessary for the government to achieve its goals.

To add insult to injury, Judge Ross ordered the Federal government to pay the legal costs of the two dealers, citing the draconian measures written into the act deserved special treatment.

Judge Ross was particularly angered by the charges, relating to seals placed on the pumps by ministry of Weights and Measures inspectors, being snipped by the defendants. This particular section of the act, stated judge Ross, is so devoid of any semblance of decency, fairness, and natural justice as to be completely abhorrent to the mind of this court.

In this context, the inspector's powers violate a citizen's right to not be deprived of life, liberty, and security of the person. The victim of such a government action is deprived of his livelihood with no opportunity to have the move reviewed by a judicial forum and no time period placed on the seal of the pumps.

Lawyer for the defence, Edward Greenspan, described the judgement as a warning to the Federal Government that it cannot treat the Charter of Rights with the arrogance and disdain that it would like. He stated that the judge had delivered an eloquent, thought-provoking judgement that every member of the House of Commons should sit down and read very carefully. He told the government in no uncertain manner that since the charter of rights had been cast in stone, "our guaranteed rights will supersede what Parliament thinks it can do in its arrogance."

The decision will no doubt be appealed by the federal government, but in the interim, Metric enforcement is temporarily in suspension in the Province of Ontario, and will most certainly give rise to further challenges of the law in other provinces.

As I said before, there is absolutely nothing wrong with the Metric system per se. It is certainly a most logical method of weighing, measuring and calculating as compared to our archaic Imperial system. No, the issue here is far more important. It is the issue of freedom of choice — something which our left-leaning liberal administration would love to encroach upon. Mercifully, the same Charter of Rights which Mr. Trudeau labored unstintingly over to entrench, also guarantees us this freedom, and to attempt to take it away with the stroke of a pen would be to make a mockery out of the charter, and also create a very dangerous precedent for the next time Ottawa wanted to have things all its way.

Report from

Parliament Hill

Farmers Should Come First- [illegible]

"The federal government should put the needs and best interests of western grain farmres ahead of the railways' interests" said Don Mazankowski, M.P., Progressive Conservative Spokesman of Transportation.

"The Minister of Transport has said that people should come first and railways second and I call on the govenrment to live up to that commitment with respect to the new Western Grain Transportation Act."

Mr Mazankowski made these comments following an exchange in Question Period in which he asked the Minister of Agriculture if he was not concerned about the heavy railway influence within the Liberal Party.

"Farmers want some assurances that their interests will be protected. How can farmers have confidence in the Liberal Party when the former Chairman of CP, Ian Sinclair, was appointed to the Senate by the Liberals, when the Minister of Transport is policy chairman to John Turner, an active member of CP's Board, and when the former Chairman of the CNR, Jack Horner, now reports to the Minister of Transport as the Grain Transportation Administrator?" asked Mr. [illegible]

In response, Mr. Whelan stated only that his entrance into the Liberal leadership race was an effort to help producers.

"The Minister gave no indication that he is contemplating recommending changes to the Western Grain Transportation legislation to protect producers from the present open-ended freight rate escalation" commented [illegible]

"How can producers believe they come first when grain freight rates are rising more dramatically than forecast under the legislation to the benefit of the railways and the government?"

"By August 1st, 1984, freight rates will have increased 58% to an average of $7.70 per tonne while, at the same time, the railways' investment plans have dropped by $4 [illegible].

"It is clear that the railays have more influence with the government than do farmers. The railways are the big winners under the new legislation" concluded Mr. Mazankowski.

Avoid additives

Never add anything to a spray mixture unless it is recommended on the herbicide label.

This advice comes from Alberta Agriculture's supervisor of communications and special projects with the weed control section, [illegible]man. He reports that Alberta farmers are being led to believe through clever wording and testimonials, that they may be able to considerably reduce the rate of [illegible] they apply to their crops by using an additive.

Because they are anxious to reduce their input costs, [illegible] of these farmers have purchased the additives [illegible] knowing the possible implications of adding them to their herbicide mixtures.

Mr Stearman stresses that a farmer who uses an additive when it is not recommended could suffer serious consequences. For example

• The additive could cause crop injury by affecting the action of the herbicide.

• The additive could react with the herbicide in such a way that the herbicide does not kill any weeds.

• The additive could react with the herbicide in such a way as to cause an unacceptable residue in the crop, which, if noted, could mean the removal of the entire crop from the market. In such cases the farmer would [illegible] no compensation for [illegible]

• The manufacturer's guarantee will be void if the user of its products deviates in any way from the label directions.

• According to Mr Stearman, experiments on the effects that additives have on the action of herbicides are presently underway. When definite results have been obtained, the appropriate instructions will be included on the product labels. In the meantime, farmers who experiment with additives should realize that they are putting their crops at risk, Mrs. Stearman says.

Priced too high

Funny how suddenly, fuel alternatives are unimportant. People perceive the current price of fuel as bearable, even though it's over $2 per gallon at the pumps.

Those who talk about steady prices at the pumps and more confidence in the market are really not thinking. Two-dollar fuel is still one hell of a lot more than the 50c per gallon we used to pay up to some five or six years ago. Fuel is not cheap at $2 per gallon. That cost for a commodity that comes out of the ground with only the cost of retrieving it is plain, unadulterated gouging that's sanctioned by the various levels of government who slap all kinds of taxes on the stuff to help defray their stupidly incurred deficits. We'd still have 50c per gallon fuel if the governments got [illegible]

They've been escalating taxes until people have either stopped driving or limited their trips to the local milk store and back. That's what the recent fuel glut was all about. It had very little to do with more fuel efficient cars. It had everything to do with people finding transit cheaper than the cost of fuel and doing a lot of walking instead. The fuel taxes are like the provincial and federal government's booze tax — another perennial favorite. They kept escalating that until the brewers and distillers found that their sales have dropped off. Our government's yardstick as to when to stop taxing is when people stop buying. If they're still buying, it's taken as a clear in- [illegible] tle left in the old economy, so let's give 'er another shot.

On the other end of the spectrum, many people are not buying new cars because of the rate of interest. Few people are prepared to pay half again the cost of a car on a four-year loan, and who's to blame for the high cost of borrowing? Why, the governments, again. You're competing with governments borrowing hundreds of billions of dollars annually to finance their deficits. No wonder the cost of borrowing is so high. You've got a lot of competition [illegible]

Other direct taxes that might make you think twice before buying your next car are the sales tax you pay (7%) when you're buying, the flat $100 air conditioner penalty for comfort tax imposed by Trudeau when people were nattering about energy conservation and he saw his opportunity, and so on. Then there were all the taxes the manufacturer was obliged to pay to produce the vehicle in the first place. These were [illegible] the vehicle and the rest of the [illegible] cost plus tax. When you borrow money to pay for your new car, you are paying interest on the cost plus taxes which are probably more than half the cost of the vehicle to begin [illegible]

Now, there is considerable speculation to the effect that our federal government has been cooking the books to make it look as though our deficits are not really as high as they are and it is hinted that the actual figures, if the government were not concealing them from us, would make our hair stand on end. Can you [illegible] this is actually go[illegible]?

World Series planned

It is now less than two months until the World Series of Fastball is played.

A number of major decisions about this senior men's fastball tournament will be made this week in the Tofield Hotel.

Merchants are currently on a road trip that will see them play in a three-day tournament in Bakersfield (California) as well as compete in exhibition games in different American cities.

Team officials expect to be negotiating with a number of teams while they are in the U.S. and as a result, should finalize which American teams will be coming to Tofield next month (July).

Seven of the twelve teams entered in the senior portion of the World Series of Fastball have been confirmed.

Bakersfield will be returning to Camrose to defend the championship they won last summer. That was agreed to when the Merchants made the trip to California.

Other prospective U.S.A. entries are all from the Midwest Fastball League and that includes Calgary Alberta Brake and Clutch, Saskatoon Rempel, Saskatoon Meisner's, Regina Molsons, Winnipeg Internationals and the host Merchants.

Applications have been received from other top senior teams in Western Canada and just who will be admitted will be decided after the Merchants return home from the U.S.A.

Umpires from California officiated at last summer's tournament and were a hit with the fans and as a result, negotiations will be conducted to see if they are available to return this year.

Windsor Hotel will host an intermediate [illegible] as part of the World Series of Fastball program.

This section of the tournament will consist of eight teams and the majority are expected to come from the Central Alberta region.

In conjunction with the tournament, a beer garden will operate and a dance has been scheduled.

This year's World Series of Fastball will open on July 26th and end on the Monday evening.

O'Flanagan from Rescue Canada gave an introduction to vehicle rescue.

The Tofield Fire Department (TFD) took part in a simulated fire situation involving a smoke filled trailer. They used a self-contained breathing apparatus to enter the structure to practice rescue procedures while using this device.

The Tofield Fire Department, with a membership of twenty volunteers, provides fire service to the Town of Tofield and the County of Beaver surrounding the Town. In addition they provide rescue service throughout a 2000 square mile area extending as far east as Holden.

Additional members are needed from both Town and County. Those who feel they are too old to fight fires can assist in communications. The prime requisite to becoming a member of this organization is a commitment to co-operate with fellow members and to come to the aid of one's neighbours.

Training includes fire prevention, first-aid, emergency response, fire suppression, fire inspection, search and rescue, vehicle rescue and communications.

To find out more about joining, contact any member of the department or join them Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the fire hall for their regular practice time.

Managing orphan pigs

Since orphan pigs account for a large percentage of Alberta's average baby pig death loss of 25 per cent, it is worthwhile taking a little time and trouble to save them.

According to Alberta Agriculture's swine nutritionist, Sam Jaikaran, most orphan pigs can be saved by following a few simple management techniques. One of these is to divide them into three groups: those that are less than 24 hours old, those that are one to seven days old, and those that are more than seven days old.

Pigs that are less than 24 hours old should be placed on a foster sow that has just farrowed so that they will get that all important colostrum or first milk. If it is not possible [illegible] them on the foster sow until they are weaned, they [illegible] put on a milk replacer after they have had their colostrum.

Mr. Jaikaran recommends keeping some frozen colostrum (taken from an older dairy cow when she freshens) on hand in case it is not possible to put orphan pigs on a [illegible] mother. The frozen colostrum can be warmed up and fed whenever it is needed. However, it should always be warmed up slowly because too rapid heating will destroy its disease-fighting properties.

Pigs that are one to seven days old can be either placed on a foster sow or they can be started on a milk replacer and introduced to a dry pre-starter when they are three to four days old. The pre-starter should be high in milk products (20 per cent or higher) and it should be very palatable. Only a small amount of the pre-starter should be added to the milk replacer when the baby pigs are introduced to it. The amount should be gradually increased until the pigs are on dry feed by the [illegible] two weeks old. And the switching from one feed to another should always be done very slowly so that the change will not be too much of a shock to the digestive systems of the young pigs.

Pigs that are more than seven days old should be started on a milk replacer and a dry pre-starter. Again, the starter should be introduced gradually with the quantity being increased until the pigs are completely on dry feed by the time they are two to three weeks old. Because feed that is left in a feeder overnight absorbs odors from the barn, and may be rejected by the young pigs, it should be replaced by fresh feed every day.

Mr. Jaikaran says sow milk replacers can be obtained from feed mills and other farm supply centres. A good one should contain from 20 to 30 per cent fat, and it should be mixed and fed strictly according to the manufacturer's directions. Mr. Jaikaran also says that a fresh mixture should be prepared for each feeding, and that feeding troughs should be thoroughly cleaned after each feeding. If [illegible] possible to prepare a fresh mixture for each feeding, the excess mixture should be stored in a sterile container in the refrigerator. In other words, it should be treated in the same way as human baby food.

According to Mr. Jaikaran, a four-day old pig must be fed at least six times a day, but a 10-day old pig can be fed only three times a day. He stresses the importance of not overfeeding baby pigs, and he points out that they can be taught to take their milk from a trough when they are only two days old. They should be given water at this age through water nipples rather than in a trough because the nipples are more sanitary.

Finally, Mr. Jaikaran points out that a congenial environment will go a long way towards encouraging the survival of orphan pigs. Those that could not be put on a foster sow should either be [illegible] or in as small a group as possible in a "nursery" where the temperature is about 30°C. The nursery should be well ventilated, draft-free, dry and clean and there should be enough trough and feeder space to allow all the baby pigs to drink or eat at the same time.

Pesticides and our pet

by Dr. B.T. Burns

Many common house and garden pesticides do not have adequate precautionary advice on their labels and some of these products are toxic for [illegible] children and pets in particular can easily be poisoned. As this is a veterinary column, I will confine my remarks to the effects of poisoning in pets.

The active ingredient in many slug baits is called "metaldehyde". Animal poisoning from this highly toxic chemical (also found in some rat poisons), usually occurs by ingesting garden slug bait. Metaldehyde is combined with meal or formed into pellets which are spread to lure and kill slugs and snails. [illegible] attractive to pets and after eating it, symptoms generally occur within an hour.

Early symptoms include uneasiness, salivation and muscle tremors. As time passes these symptoms worsen until the animal begins [illegible] to increase with the final result ending in respiratory collapse and death.

Obviously, treatment must be rapid and intensive to be [illegible] presented to a veterinarian in a seizure state and must therefore have the stomach emptied of metaldehyde with sedation or anaesthetic administered to control the seizures.

The anaesthetic may have to be maintained for several hours until the liver has metabolized and excreted all of the toxic chemical. Intravenous fluids may be necessary to support the animal until recovery is assured and following the intensive therapy, the animal must be fed lightly and frequently for a few days.

Prevention of this poisoning should be aimed at keeping your pet from having access to the metaldehyde. Small amounts of slug bait should be spread over many areas of the garden to prevent the pet from ingesting large quantities. Covering the bait area with a rock, board or roofing shingle should make access more difficult. The slug bait can also be worked into the soil so that piles are not left to attract pets.

Metaldehyde is very soluble in water, therefore, when slugs are controlled, excess bait may be hosed down and raked into the garden beds.

Read the labels of pesticides carefully and know what chemicals you are using. If you are in doubt as to toxicity, call your local poison control centre. Be prepared to give the brand name, manufacturer and strength of the pesticide. It is also worthwhile to weigh the advantages of using some pesticides against the possibility of dangerous side effects on ourselves and our pets. Remember that a manufacturer trys to sell his product and may naturally not emphasize the possibility of harmful effects. It's up to us to choose wisely.

Tea is a success

by Jean Murray

Tofield Lodge had a successful turnout at their annual strawberry tea held on Thursday afternoon.

Entertainment was provided by two lodge residents, Mary Stinson on the piano and Wilf Ladroute on the violin. They played several toe-tapping selections throughout the afternoon while guests enjoyed a generous portion of strawberry shortcake with their tea or coffee.

The baby quilt raffle winner was lodge resident, Matilda Eggen. Proceeds from the raffle and tea will go into a general fund to be used for the residents, as is necessary.

The next large function for the Lodge will be the bazaar and auction that is held every year, in the fall.

Can you recognize it?

The deadline is approaching for nominations in the 1984 Junior Citizens of the Year program

This program recognizes young people between the ages of six and 16 who have achieved excellence. Their achievements can be in any field: community service — school activities — family life — personal courage and commitment

The main criteria for receiving the award are that the recipients have tried harder and done more on behalf of people around them than we would ordinarily expect of someone their age

Over the past 23 years, more than 200 individuals and 25 groups of young Albertans have been recognized through the program. So look around you. Surely you know of an individual or a group in your community who deserve recognition

Then let us know. Fill in the nomination form below and send it to this newspaper, or to Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Awards, (Public Affairs) Box 1900, Calgary, Alberta T2P 2M1

All nominees will receive certificates to recognize their achievements. Those nominees elected as the 1984 Junior Citizens of the Year will be specially honored with a citation presented by the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta

Excellence This is one way you can recognize it when you see it

Small town

Children were fascinated by this electronic model of a miniature town that was on display inside the Tofield Fire Hall on Sunday. They would push a numbered button corresponding to a hazardous scene in the town, then identify the safety error by locating the correct answer on the keyboard. If the answer was right, a red light lit up.

Agaware — The Agricultural Awareness Institute

Remember our annual Agriculture Week pancake breakfast in March? Have you ever thought that all the promotion and publicity associated with Agriculture Week, especially in the rural and farming communities, is very much like "preaching to the converted?" You're probably right. With the trend to larger and fewer farms comes the drawback of an increasingly smaller number of people truly knowledgeable of the agricultural industry; its status, importance and its pro[illegible]

On Thursday, May 24, at a meeting of the Alberta Institute of Agrologists, I had the opportunity of listening to Mr Reuben Hamm, the president of a new organization called Agaware — the Agricultural Awareness Institute. His enthusiasm in promoting this new organization has prompted me to write this article and describe what Agaware is all about.

In March of 1983, the Alberta Agriculture Week Committee received a request to "explore public information strategies and possible directions in the context of a year round approach" in promoting general public awareness of the agricultural industry. Forty-two private industry and government representatives met and formulated the structure, guidelines and goals of Agaware — the Agricultural Awareness Institute. Some of these goals are: to build a better communication bridge between the agricultural industry and the general public; to provide relevant information on agriculture and agri-business to school classrooms, to develop a contact network for media regarding credible information sources on agricultural topics.

As with any organization, Agaware is in need of funds and is campaigning for membership. At this point, I can hear the response. Everyone needs money! Another membership!" This may be true, as memberships, both social and business, can amount to a considerable sum of money. However, if you are interested in seeing more promotion of the positive aspects of our industry, please call our office for a membership brochure. If you really think about it, you will realize that many other industries have recognized the need to promote the positive benefits and spinoffs from their operation. Agaware is hoping to do just that, and, at the same time, make the general public aware of what is involved in food production.

REMINDER: Lakeland College Forage Equipment Field Day on June 13, 1983 in Vermilion. Jerome is looking for a car-load to go with him to Vermilion. Please call if you are interested.

Ryley fetes graduates

The 1984 graduating class of Ryley School was honoured on Saturday.

Festivities began with a banquet in the Ryley Community Hall. The graduands and their escorts entered to the theme song "Farther and Higher" played by Joyce Lutz.

An excellent meal, catered to by the United Church Women was then enjoyed by all.

Following a toast to the Queen by Christopher Clarke, the Graduating Class was introduced by Bradley Johnson.

This year's graduating class consists of Cheryl Andrukow, Darren Bratrud, Peggy Bratrud, Murray Gara, Kathy Goubault, Christopher Clarke, Colleen Halverson, Brian Helleksen, Rhonda Knudslien, Lance Knudson, Larry Knudson, Lonnie Lauber, Steven Staal, Sandra Tiedemann, Loretta Warkentin, Tracy Wickstrom, Charlie Young, David McKeen, Sharon Good and Rosy Wong.

The graduands, parents, staff, community and the Board of [illegible] were then honoured by toasts, which were given replies by a member from each respective group.

The [illegible] commenced with the processional of the graduates. Following welcome to all by Mrs. Ethel Pepper, master of ceremonies for the evening, several humorous stories about the graduates were read by [illegible].

The theme song "Farther and Higher" by Steve Camp, was then played as a musical interlude.

The graduating class had asked Henry Knitter, a former math teacher, to return to Ryley for the evening as guest speaker.

Following his humorous memories of Ryley, along with some advice to the grads, an address was given by the class valedictorian, Loretta Warkentin. Then William Sheeman made a few comments, diplomas and pins were presented by Jim Clarke, principal of Ryley School, and Bradley Johnson.

An award for highest academic standing was presented to Loretta Warkentin, with second highest standing being presented to Cheryl Andrukow.

Trophies for outstanding athletic participation went to Cheryl Andrukow and Lonnie Lauber.

Lonnie Lauber was also presented with the J.D. MacDonald Citizenship Award.

Jim Clarke then gave a few comments, mentioning the future plans of each graduate.

The evening ended with a dance during which the graduating class presented each other with yellow roses, symbols of their friendship.

PTA holds meeting

by Joan Murray

About 45 persons attended the PTA meeting held in C.W. Sears School in Tofield on May 22nd. Dr Walter Lazaruk, from the second languages department of the Alberta Education, was on hand to enlighten the crowd about the availability of languages offered to students in Alberta.

A second language committee consisting of Ted Laidlaw, Debra Foster and Dave Smith has been set up to study the information provided by Dr. Lazaruk. They will be conducting a parent survey to see how much interest there would be in having a second language program offered in Tofield's elementary grades.

Qualified second language teachers at the elementary school level are hard to come by, but if enough interest were to be shown, then it would be given serious consideration in Tofield. A program in this area would probably be run on a five-day, 30-minute period basis.

Organization of classes in C.W. Sears School for the 84-85 term will be three classes of kindergarten, four of grade one, two of grade two, one split class of grades two and three and two of just grade three.

After a short discussion of what opening exercises for each day should be, it was decided that reciting the Lord's Prayer or singing O'Canada would be left up to the discretion of the teacher in charge of each class.

The next C.W. Sears PTA meeting will be held in October and the installation of new officers will take place in March of 1985.

Cavalcade is a hit!

The 1984 edition of the Battle River Tourist Association Cavalcade was the largest ever since the tour first began nine years ago.

This year's tour was held on the final weekend of last month (May).

A total of seventy-three recreational vehicles involving nearly two hundred people participating in the tour and BRTA officials estimated that the vehicles involved were worth in excess of two and one-half million dollars.

The tour opened from Camrose after being escorted to the city limits by Camrose City Police, headed for a stop at Miquelon Funland before going to Hastings Lake.

A tour of Elk Island National Park followed and the first day ended at Lucky Lake Trout Farm.

The second day started with a visit to Fort Saskatchewan and after a three-hour stay, moved Strathcona Science Centre and Park for a final stop following which the cavalcade disbanded and participants headed for the respective homes.

Arlen Adams of Bashaw was chairman of this year's cavalcade committee whose other members included John Gust of Bashaw and Sylvia Clemens of Camrose.

Seeding is done

Seeding operations in this part of the province have dragged on for more than a month due to poor weather conditions.

However, most farmers can now breath a sigh of relief and the others should be able to do the same either today (Tuesday) or tomorrow as all seeding operations should be completed.

According to reports received from the Alberta Wheat Pool, seeding in this region, as of Friday, had only about six percent of all fields still to be sown.

Farmers around Camrose and Rosalind have finished all seeding.

In the Daysland, Bawlf, Holden, New Norway and Round Hill areas, farmers were on their last fields while farmers around Ryley still had about eight percent to go.

In the Tofield area, wheat seeding had been completed with canola still having about five percent to go. The big push still to come was with oats and barley with only ten percent of oats having been seeded while thirty percent of intended barley acreage had been sown.

All areas report good moisture conditions.

Keep Canada Beautiful

BETWEEN THE COVERS

Not everyone using the library is reading books in English. Did you know that books are available, on request, in 29 different languages? We presently have a number of books in Ukrainian and Welsh, and are expecting more.

If your mother tongue is German, French, Vietnamese, or Ukrainian, ask for a selection of books, available through Alberta Culture Library Services. Pick up a brochure describing this service, and the list of languages next time you visit the library.

On the new book table, Erma Bombeck's Motherhood The Second-Oldest Profession, is sure to provide many a smile. For readers of biography, Candice Bergen shares her childhood memories of life with her father's ventriloquist's dummy in Knock Wood.

Alberta author Myrna Kostash tells the story of the Sixties generation in the book Long Way From Home. This is an important study of a recent period of Canadian social history.

On the shelf reserved for new books for young readers, look for Billy and The Bubbleship, or Slaves of Spiegel, both science fiction selections. A sequel to That Scatterbrain Booky is now in, called With Love From Booky. Two other stories sure to be popular are The Toothpaste Genie and The Three and Many Wishes of Jason Reid.

In young people's nonfiction, there are a number of new science books appropriate to the summer season. Owl's Question and Answer Book No. 2 is full of miscellaneous information about animals and nature in general. The Young Astronomer and The Mysterious Universe give a good introduction to stargazing. Interesting at any time are Lasers and Holograms and The Album of Spaceflight.

Regular library hours until June 30 are Tuesday 1-5, Thursday 3-5 and 6-9; Friday and Saturday 10-12 and 1-5. For information on memberships, foreign language books, etc., please call 662-3656.

Pesticide-Contaminated Clothing

Special care must be taken when handling and washing pesticide-contaminated clothes to protect both the person doing the handling and washing and the person who will be wearing them again.

Bertha Eggertson, Alberta Agriculture's provincial clothing and textile specialist, points out that the chemicals may stay in the clothes, and be absorbed by the wearer's skin, if they are not properly laundered.

She recommends the following washing procedure.

— Wear rubber gloves when handling pesticide contaminated clothing.
— Discard any items that have been saturated with a [illegible] concentrate.
— Store [illegible] in a disposable plastic garbage bag until they are washed.
— Wash the clothes after spraying has been completed for the day.
— Wash them separately from other clothing.
— Do no overcrowd the washing machine.
— Pre-rinse contaminated clothing by using the pre-soak cycle on an automatic washing machine.
— Use the hot water setting.
— Use the full water level.
— Use a normal cycle.
— Use a heavy duty detergent.
— Repeat the wash two or three times if the clothes are badly contaminated.
— Dry the clothes on a line to avoid the possibility of contaminating the dryer.
— Rinse the washing machine when the wash is finished by running hot water and a detergent through its full cycle.

The above information plus information on the type of protective clothing that should be worn when using pesticides and the type of protection that is [illegible] is contained in a publication entitled "Protective Clothing For Use With Pesticides".

Beaver athletes win medals

Athletes from the County of Beaver had a strong showing during the zone track and field championship meet, which was held in Leduc.

The top two competitors from each event earned the right to go on to St. Albert for the provincial championship meet which was held on Saturday.

Beaver competitors earned a total of thirty-nine medals, set one zone record and had nineteen athletes gain the right to compete in St. Albert.

The record-setting performance came from Sheila Winter of Viking who set a new mark for senior girls in the 200 metre race. She also won the 400 metre race and as well, finished on top in the 100 metre dash.

Brad Johnson of Ryley was a double winner when he took top honours in the long jump and triple jump for junior boys.

Lana Gibson of Holden led the junior girls in the discus while Marilyn Ludwig, also of Holden, led the intermediate girls high jump.

Jody Lutz of Holden was first in the 200 metre run for intermediate girls and was third in the 100 metre dash while Jason Clamsey of Viking topped the intermediate boys in the 400 metre run.

Gary Vitek of Viking won the intermediate boys triple jump and was second in the long jump and the 100 metre dash.

Sifton students are tops

Students from Sifton School have obtained honours in a national competition.

Each year, the Women's Christian Temperance Union sponsors a health scrapbook contest which attracts a considerable number of entries.

Students from three grades in Sifton School had earlier taken top honours at the local and provincial levels with the result that their entries were forwarded for the national competition.

Sifton's grade one students took first prize in their category while students in grades two and three each earned third place honours.

The students are taught by Ruth Grue and Elaine Myers.

July 1 plans announced

Tofields 1984 July 1st Committee has received a Canada Day Grant to financially assist with the 1984 July 1st celebrations.

1984 is also the Town of Tofields 75th anniversary year since incorporation as a town.

The July 1st parade will be held on July 2nd. This year's parade theme will be the Town of Tofields 75th anniversary. All parade entries should contact M. Adams at 662-3473. The July 1st Committee is asking that all Tofield residents who will be 75 years of age during 1984 contact the committee at 662-3599.

To add to the usual display of events and entertainment during July 1st, this year's new additions include outdoors entertainment at the Fairgrounds festering the Fuzzy Mountain River Boys sponsored by Tofield Lions Club.

The Funky Chicken and Harlequin Clowns from Northern Light Theatre are planned to make their debut in Tofield at the parade.

The committee decided that this celebration, being a two-day event, will go rain or shine. In case of bad weather, on either day, all events will go in Tofield Arena. However, there will be no gate admission if the ball games are cancelled.

In conjunction with Tofield's 75th anniversary, three draws for silver dollars will be made.

Tickets for the silver dollar draws can be purchased from any members of Tofield [illegible] Club.

A strong effort has been made by the July 1st committee to make this double celebration of 1984 the best ever.

Holden Homecoming planned

Holden Homecoming '84 has been planned for August 4, 5 and 6 to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Village of Holden which was on April 14 of this year.

The Holden and District Chamber of Commerce is the group who has undertaken spearheading of Homecoming '84.

In 1983, letters were sent to all churches and community organizations in Holden and District, inviting them to name one or two representative to the Holden Homecoming '84 committee.

At a result of this, the committee was formed with representatives from 20 churches and community groups.

The Holden and District Chamber of Commerce named Ken Sharpe, Bill Dary and Christine Mackay as co-ordinators of the committee. The organizational meeting was held on April 21, 1983 and monthly meetings have been held since that time.

At that meeting the following committees were formed: Accommodation — Wm. Ogrodnick, John Semotiuk; promotion and publicity — Ken Sharpe (chairman), Helen Zwierschke, Bruce Budd, Ethel Brekstad; planning and program — Mary Hallett (chairman), Adelle Story, Joan Grinde, Helene Hrabec, Doris Ogrodnick, Helen Stacyk; fund raising and finance — Christine Mackay (chairman), Bruce Budd, Eugene Yarema, Peter Kupka, Ann Scherger, Mary Semotiuk.

Initial planning by all committees began with reports being given at the monthly meetings. The accommodation committee is compiling a list of areas that will be available for camping and making the local hotel and food outlets aware of the homecoming.

Publicity has been in the form of newspaper advertising, a brochure mailed out in conjunction with the Holden Historical Society, the banner on Main Street that the Village of Holden had painted and the signs on the highway that were painted by the Art 10 Class of Holden School.

The program and planning committee prepared a tentative program which was presented for discussion to the group. Over the past year, program plans have been formulated.

Registration will start on August 3 while August 4th activities will see registration continue, the official opening and launching of the history book, sale of history book, activities at the Sports Grounds, a barbecue supper and a dance in the Hall and one at Holden Complex. August 5th will start with services at all Churches followed by a potluck brunch, visit to Holden School, tours of the Village, activities at the Sports Grounds, a variety program in the Arts Centre and a pot-luck wiener roast.

August 6th, Heritage Day, will start with a pancake breakfast followed by a parade and street activities such as square dancing and a flea market. Antiques will be displayed at various locations. Local businesses will feature bargain days. Each of these activities is being looked after by a church or community group.

The fund-raising and finance committee has been responsible for finding sources of funding for the activities. Local churches and community organizations have contributed $1,200 towards Homecoming '84 expenses. The Village of Holden will contribute the $1,000 municipal anniversary recognition grant and has agreed to provide all necessary photocopying at no charge.

Souvenir items have been ordered and will be sold at the homecoming. Pins, spoons, mugs, T-shirts, key chains and caps commemorating Holdens 75th anniversary and Holden Homecoming '84 will be available.

Caps should be ready for sale soon and orders will be taken for nylon jackets. The fund-raising and finance committee will also be responsible for pre-sale of tickets for the weekends activities.

Writer published

by Joan Murray

A Tofield writer has had one of her works printed in an American based publication.

Carol Livingstone wrote a feature on thunderstorms which was printed in the Canadian edition of Farm Women News, a publication whose home base is in Milwaukee.

All of the magazine's contents are written especially for rural women with nearly all of the writing being contributed by readers.

Farm Woman News is a monthly publication (except for a combined July-August edition) with the Canadian portion of the publishing firm being based in Winnipeg.

Livingstone's ability to write is well known to readers of The Mercury as her column "Loose Ends" is a regular feature on the paper's editorial page.

A copy of the publication is available in The Mercury's office for anyone wishing to glance through the edition which contains Livingstone's most recent writing effort.

Voice of Ryley

The People of Ryley last week took one more step in trying to persuade the Minister of the Environment, Hon. Fred Bradley, that he has been wrong in denying an Alberta company the opportunity of constructing a special waste treatment facility in their community.

They're putting the message in front of the other Members of the Legislature, and indeed, of all the citizens of the province. And urging that another look be taken at the whole picture.

The government itself, points out Ryley, looked very seriously at Ryley, and indeed, found it highly suitable for such a treatment plant, to the point it was in the finals for siting the project, which went, eventually, to Swan Hills. Probably this was a smart political move, for no one could object to the siting of such a plant there, nobody could call their MLA or cabinet minister and complain, as might have happened in Ryley. Indeed, only months earlier, the government felt the wrath of neighbours of Ryley.

Yet the people of Ryley want such a plant, developed completely free of government, by a proven Alberta firm, with no government funds involved, and operating under the same rules as the government is imposing on its own plant, operated by a non-Canadian firm. The people of Ryley want the employment that comes with such a plant. The economic development that will follow it. The greater stability in their economy that will follow the introduction of yet another avenue of employment.

We're convinced they're right. We're convinced the government, and the people, would be better served with the operation of two plants. Indeed, either would provide some alternative to the other should one not fully meet requirements and specifications, instead of leaving us with no alternative if only one were built, but failed to live up to commitments. Or expectations.

It may be that there is justification for the government being in the liquor business, just as we have on occasion advocated it get into the business of providing cheap drugs to known junkies, thereby taking out the profit that keeps that miserable business, that wretched traffic, going. But we can think of no reason why the government should monopolize the business of special waste treatment, why it should refuse to allow private enterprise to get into the act. Indeed, it seems there is every reason to let private enterprise, under quality control, take over the whole package. Government should do for us only those things we cannot reasonably do for ourselves.

And, if Ryley is willing, it should let Ryley show the way.

Donations

Donations of a different type, those contributions to a political party, came under fire a couple of weeks ago in the closing hours of the Alberta legislature.

Opposition member Ray Speaker urged Premier Lougheed to prevent Crown corporations from making donations to political parties. MLA for Little Bow, the independent member was for several years a Cabinet minister in the governments of Premiers Ernest Manning and Harry Strom.

Mr. Speaker earlier has said that the partly government-owned Alberta Energy Co., with $76 million of government investment (the rest owned by shareholders among the public) has made "numerous" contributions to the Tory party through subsidiaries.

According to reports, Mr. Lougheed hedged on making any commitment, saying the matter was under review, so no conclusions had been reached yet, but that a report is expected for the fall sitting from the minister responsible for public affairs, Bill Payne.

In this instance, we thoroughly agree with Mr. Speaker. We can't for the line of us see what the premier is hesitating about. He has been known to come down hard, and immediately, on any of his members who seem to question party position or party doctrine. We can't see for the life of us why he wouldn't come down just as hard and just as rapidly in declaring no contributions from any Crown corporation, or any subsidiary, are acceptable.

Does anyone think for a moment that AGT, Alberta Energy, Pacific Western Airlines, or any other crown corporation would be as generous in contributing to the Liberals, the NDP, the WCC, or whatever, as they would be to the Conservatives? Does anyone think they would match contributions to the percentages of votes in recent elections?

If memory serves correctly, the Conservatives gained barely half the votes cast in the last election . . . it is unthinkable that people whose sympathies lie elsewhere should be forced to pay tribute to the Tory bagman through Crown corporations.

If Mr. Payne is really responsible in presenting the interests of his charge, public affairs, he will come out on the side of no political involvement, no political contributions, from Crown corporations.

Loose Ends

It seems to me that Mothers are not fully appreciated. A much bigger fuss is made over mothers on their special day than over dad on his, and I don't think it's because dads so would tarnish his 'image'. Men need coddling occasionally; just ask any woman who is married to one. We say that Father's Day is just like Mother's Day, but is it really? When was the last time you served dad breakfast in bed? Treated him to supper out? Brought him his pipe and slippers? Gave him roses? When he says he wants 'nothing' for Father's Day, he doesn't really mean it, you know.

Everyone has a father; it's a biological fact, whether we like it or not. Generally, he is head of the household (despite what mom might tell the census taker), breadwinner (if not baker) and provider (providing he isn't laid off). More than that, he is someone to wrestle with on the living room rug. Yet from the day the 'event' is announced, it is the female parent who gets all the attention. Who thinks about the one who is working hard to feed, clothe and educate the offspring? Who stops to remember that it is dad who pays the dental bills, repairs bikes, teaches about mechanics, carpentry and respect for other people?

Admittedly, there are some slackers, but we find those in every job; people who want the title and advantages but none of the responsibilities. But the majority of fathers are someone you can look up to, at least until you are 16 and standing several inches taller than he does.

It's time for equal rights for fathers. We seem to forget that fathers are half of a matched set, like pillow cases, salt and pepper or Laurel and Hardy.

Fathers come in all shapes and sizes, colors and dispositions. Some are large and loud; some small and soft-spoken. Some have hair on their faces but none on their heads. Some always have their heads stuck under the hood of a car; some are stuck in a book. Some never take off their hats; others don't wear them at all. Some drink; some are dry. Some travel through life in a straight line; others are night-owls.

Whatever style your dad comes in, remember this: some dads need more love and understanding than others and all of them need to hear "I love you" once in awhile.

Tell yours today.

Education needed

May 31, 1984.

Dear Sir:

Your editorial of May 30 was interesting (Martial Law?) but somewhat arrogantly worded.

The big problem with those who do not experience some of the degredation and loss of self-respect that serious unemployment causes is that they can coldly and clinically analyze the situation, but without true compassion and understanding.

What is needed, long before we resort to Martial Law, is education. The following is a true story about a union situation.

A road miner was the scene of discontent where, following talk about striking, the miner's leader said: "Before you vote, listen to me — you want more money for your work, and I wish to me you get it for you deserve it. May I not tell you how to get more money and still retain the good-will of the owner of this mine? We can call a strike and probably force them to pay more money, but we cannot force them to do this and like it." He then went on to explain a plan whereby they would work harder than ever without asking anything. However, any profits from such extra work were to be shared with the men. Each month thereafter, in addition to the regular pay envelope, each man received his share of the extra earnings, with a little note in it — "Your part of the profits from the work which you did that you were not paid to do".

Would it not be wonderful to experience such co-operation, harmony and togetherness instead of so much talk and action about toughness, negotiations, strikes, lock-outs?

Yours truly,
J. Michael Drummond

Stamp out erosion of our downtown

One day last week, we opened our mailbox to discover twelve items of mail inside. Of the three were addressed to us; the rest arrived unsolicited in our box by way of an agreement between the sender and the post office. The Post Office is selling access to our box, for which we pay $30.00 annually to rent.

Dropping unsolicited mail on the floor gives little satisfaction; and only makes life a littler harder for someone who really has no authority to do anything about it.

With 75 per cent of the contents unrequested, put there by agreement with the renter, isn't it time we asked for a rebate on our box rental? Supposing we arrived at the office to discover the landlord had filled three quarters of the space with his junk — we would object forcefully. We would demand a rebate on that space or move to another building.

The problem with a crown corporation, operating a monopoly is that this is no longer possible.

Last week local businessmen were up in arms over outside traders coming to this community and cressuing off some of their anticipated purchasing power.

They are small fry wher, compared to the marketing of merchandise through the mails. In the U.S. 35 cents in every dollar spent on goods goes into mail order purchases, in five years this will reach 50-per cent.

Fifteen years ago, it cost local merchants 6 cents to mail their letters, today it is between 32 and 37 cents. Yet, direct mailers, with whom we are in competition, get a rate comparable with that 6-cent rate. We are, in effect, subsidizing our competition.

If this continues it will ensure the demise of every downtown retailer in small Government in Canada.

Yet this intrusion into the core of our community is regarded as only a minor irritation.

Perhaps it is time for the local and provincial chambers of commerce and the independent businessmen's association to review this whole process, before it is too late.

Report from Parliament Hill

VIA Rail Says No To Edmonton - Vancouver

VIA Rail President, Pierre Franche, has told Progressive Conservative M.P. Don Mazankowski that VIA Rail definitely has no plans to reinstate rail passenger service between Vancouver and Edmonton.

In an exchange during his appearance before the Transport Committee on May 29th, Mr. Mazankowski said VIA Rail has made no commitment to this route, or Calgary.

"Are you committed to reinstating the service between Vancouver and Edmonton?" asked Mr. Mazankowski. "No, we are not at this stage. We are looking at it", replied Mr. Franche.

"We can only judge from [illegible]" touched Mr. Mazankowski.

Mr. Franche's response that VIA Rail is making no realistic plans to reinstate the Vancouver-Jasper-Edmonton route, and Mr. Mazankowski's Mr. Franche admitted that this route is being examined as part of VIA Rail's transcontinental study — a study which is not due to be completed for another twelve months.

"Many consumers and rail passengers have had their expectations increased by the Minister of Transport's statements with respect to VIA. It would appear that once more the Minister is raising false hopes in the minds of western Canadians and that, regretably, he is more interested in using VIA Rail for political purposes than in providing real improvements in the rail passenger system", concluded Mr. Mazankowski.

Tofield okays landfill site

by Joan Murray

At their regular meeting on Tuesday night, the Town of Tofield Council agreed that a transfer site for the Regional Landfill operation be located north and west of town, near the raw water reservoir.

Vegreville Health Unit has approved the preliminary testing done on this site and once they have officially approved the location, the Regional Landfill Authority will get involved in the actual planning of the transfer site.

Henry Nachtigal was present on behalf of the Gospel Church to discuss an outstanding bill of $2,922.30 for pavement repair done in 198[illegible]. He felt this repair was not done properly originally and did not see why the church had to pay for damage done by trucks during construction of their church building.

Council pointed out that there was a truck route by-law in force at that time but, did recognize the fact that there was no other route open for trucks to enter the site.

Both parties agreed that this bill had been on the books long enough and wished to settle this matter as soon as possible.

A recommendation was made to send a letter to the Gospel Church with a proposal of a 50-50 split of the outstanding sum.

Mark Lawrence and Stan Verbitsky of Municipal Planning were on hand to discuss with council the overall plan for the Schlender parcel of land.

Schlender had previously approached council about constructing an apartment building on his piece of property. Council is now working with Municipal Planning to see how this project could be effectively worked in with the General Municipal Plan for the Town of Tofield.

A letter was received from the Alberta Urban Municipalities Union (AUMA) regarding the Alberta Union of Provincial Employee's (AUPE) recent attempt to organize and gain collective bargaining rights for employees in the municipal sector.

Council responded with support and passed the following resolution suggested by AUMA:

Whereas the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees has enjoyed an exclusive franchise to bargain collectively for Provincial employees and whereas this union is now seeking bargaining rights within the municipal sector, now therefore, be it resolved that the scope of any bargaining agent given exclusive jurisdictional rights by Government, be restricted from organizing employees outside of their exclusive franchise, or in the alternative that no union be given exclusive jurisdictional franchises, and that any employees, including Provincial Government employees, be given the freedom to be represented by any union of their choice.

Students who have applied to the Recreation Department for summer employment positions and were not accepted are still eligible to apply for positions that will be advertised by the Public Works Department. However, they will have to re-apply at the Town Office if they wish to be considered for these position.

BETWEEN THE COVERS

The Provincial Government Summer Temporary Employment Program has enabled the Town to hire three library clerks for twelve weeks this summer.

Monica Taylor will be working on summer programming for children, such as films, reading club, special crafts, etc.

Carol Lyn Mackay and Betty Haugen will be assisting the librarian in such areas as typing, filing, looking after the circulation desk, and some special administrative projects.

All are local university students. This is a period when the valuable volunteer help is less available to the library, so the grant is very useful.

With this extra full-time help, the library hours will be expanding for the summer months. Effective Tuesday July 3 through Saturday September 1, inclusive, the hours will be: Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from 10 to 5, and Thursday from 3 to 9.

On the new book table this week, look for Life Extension: A Practical Scientific Approach. This book, on the best-seller list for weeks, claims to give the secrets for adding years to your life and life to your years.

County studies chief's post

by Joan Murray

The issue of replacing the county fire chief was again brought up at the County of Beaver Council meeting, held in Ryley on Thursday.

Wayne Stanyer, fire chief for the County of Strathcona and president of the Alberta Fire Chief's Association, was present to give an overview of how the fire departments in his county are set up as well as the duties of their fire chief.

Stanyer said it was the perogative of local councils to determine what they required of a fire chief.

Chairman Warner expressed the council's appreciation to Stanyer for coming to this meeting and added that they were always happy to co-operate with the County of Strathcona.

County Administrator, Garth [illegible], will now prepare a list of duties expected of a fire chief as well as compile an overview of the fire departments in the County.

This information will be brought to the July 5th meeting when the provincial fire commissioner is expected to be in attendance.

A letter is being sent to the Village of Donalda, supporting their recent quest to have VIA Rail service re-installed and maintain continuous rail service along that line. At present, Donalda has neither bus nor rail service for the community.

The Viking Fire Department's request for assistance in constructing a garage to house their recently acquired emergency vehicle was accepted. The county will contribute the $1000 needed for materials if the Town of Viking will pay for the labour required. If the volunteers donate their services, then the county will pay half the amount required for materials and the Town of Viking would then be responsible for the remainder of these costs.

A letter of appeal from Anne Komarnisky of the Holden area was discussed at length. It concerned a private airstrip that required a development permit to be constructed on the Blair Nelson property adjacent to the Village of Holden. She and her husband felt that their home was directly in the flight path which would prove to be hazardous should an emergency landing situation occur. They also felt that the noise factor would contribute to the devaluation of their property.

Mr. Komarnisky attended this meeting and was shown an aerial view of the proposed airstrip location. It was pointed out to him that there was sufficient distance from his property to the flight path to ensure a reasonable level of safety. He was also informed that the noise level would be minimal because planes idle when they land and would be taking off in the opposite direction to his home.

The Department of Transportation has approved the plans for this project and council felt that there was not sufficient reason to stop progress of this sort. The Komarnisky appeal to have the application for a development permit turned down was [illegible].

It has been concluded that weed control by spraying has not been adquate in controlling brush. An alternate method of using rotary mowers to remove second growth poplars from well back sloped roadways will be considered after a thorough investigation of this method on a cost per mile basis is carried out.

The County of Strathcona will be requested to erect a County of Strathcona sign on their side of the boundary on Highway 14. This request came about because there is a half mile section belonging to the County of Strathcona that is not being maintained.

The public works foreman informed council that the cost of oiling and graveling 8¾ miles of Dodds road (including hauling and laying) will be $115,682 and that a lesser distance on the Y road will cost about $82,677 for the same operation.

He indicated that gravelling on county roads would begin at the east end of the county as soon as weather permits.

A motion was passed to tender an addition to the grader shed in Bruce which would be used to house the fire truck.

Agricultural Fieldman, Laurie Weatherill, reported that only ten miles of brush spraying had been accomplished before this last bad bout of wind and rain conditions occured. He said that it had been too windy to do much grass seeding, although rentals of grass seeders from the county office had been going quite steady.

He is using the poor weather conditions to catch up on equipment repair and maintenance. Weed inspectors started their duties on May 14th and are monitoring fields not worked and will notify landowners of their findings when necessary.

The proliferous beaver population in this county was discussed and Weatherill mentioned that Fish and Wildlife had approached the Provincial Government about transfering the beaver from a "fur-bearing" to a "pest-control" category which would then enable the farmers to take care of the problems themselves.

Council passed a motion seeking to restrict the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees (AUPE) to it's primary position of including only provincial employees and not be allowed to cross over into the area of Municipal Employees.

Kingman district notes

by Sharon Soady

A miscellaneous shower will be held at the Kingman Hall on June 21 at 7:30 for Nola Felmming and Allan Sherbaniuk, who are getting married in July.

Grade 1 winner was Dorinda Antoshkiw, Grade 2 winner was Andrew Hodgetts, Grade 3 winners were Cory Krezanoski and Nicole Wiig, and grade 4 winners were Becky Christenson and Frances Wiig. Balloons were given to all the school children by postmistress Sharon Krezanoski.

Mrs. Madelon Bronaum returned to Kingman on May 30 to spend the summer months. Since leaving her home in Alameda, Calif., she has been visiting with various relatives on the west coast. She was met at the airport by Sharon Krezanoski.

June 3rd, visitors at the Dick Soady home were Nellie and John Kozack, Ann and Larry Kozack of Duffield, Ron and Lynda Caron of Prince Albert, Sask., and Wayne Caron, Brenda and Kevin of Surrey, B.C.

Sharon and Cory Krezanoski and Gladys Johanson were to Legal on May 27 for Adrian Landry's birthday party. Adrian is the son of Wanda and Bob Landry and a great grandson to Gladys Johanson.

Tofield School news

On June 1st, a bus accident occured on route nine. The heavy rain and winds gusting to over 100 kilometers per hour were contributing factors along with slippery roads, to a school bus, driven by Ben Thiessen, sliding off the road and slipping into the ditch where it then flipped on it's side. There were 13 students on the bus. Five were taken to hospital with minor injuries and were released later the same day. The driver received minor injuries to his neck. No one was seriously injured.

All students will be writing their exams prior to school closing day on June 27th. Grades 7-9 will begin on June 20th and grades 10-12 will start on June 22nd.

Track and field competitions began with the county meet held in Tofield on May 15th. Tofield School was victorious with a total of 286 points compared to 133 for their nearest rival, Ryley. The area track meet held on May 18th in Tofield matched the County of Beaver against the County of Flagstaff. The County of Beaver won the meet.

The top two competitors in each event advanced to the zone meet in Leduc on May 26th. Four athletes, Rob Karobko, Helen Webb, Susan Danielson and Suzi Gomez travelled to St. Albert on June 2nd to compete in the Northern Alberta regional meet. None were successful in advancing to provincials but, all put in a good showing. The relay teams that these students were on placed third.

Ministik and district news

by Catherine Radick

It was like "old home week" in Ministik on June 2nd. Erika (Witschi) Radke of Vancouver flew here to be at the Ladies Club annual strawberry tea to greet old schoolmates and friends of the district and to surprise Jean Kleinschroth on her birthday on Sunday afternoon.

She stayed with Margaret Paterson Sunday evening, leaving Monday evening for home. Erika left the area in March, 1941 but, has kept in contact with several old chums.

Alice Whitford of Edmonton and one of the original members of the Ladies Club when it formed in 1948, was also at the tea, despite failing health and celebrated her 81st birthday at the same time.

Cheryl (Swabey) Johnston, husband Gary and family of Airdrie were also at the tea and spent the weekend with Cheryl's parents, Ron and Laurie Swabey.

The annual strawberry tea was held on Saturday as aforementioned and patrons came from as far away as Vancouver, Airdrie, Edmonton, Leduc, tofield and the local area.

A bake sale was held and proved most profitable, as was the raffle on a wishing well planter of plants and a second draw of a cedar planter. The wishing well was won by Barbara Horricks, while the planter went to Isabel Bell of Edmonton.

Jean Ferguson was convalescing from her bed at Tofield Hospital with president Gladys Swabey acting as hostess in her place. Clare MacLean was in charge of the door, Margaret Paterson and Vi Roddick at the bake table, Betty Williams in charge of raffle tickets, Lil Leach in the kitchen, Joyce Bowerman and Barbara Horricks were tea hostesses and Edna Ferguson and Dolly Roddick took care of the strawberry shortcake and ice cream. The weatherman cooperated making the affair a most successful one.

Jean and George Kleinschroth and John and Sylvia Kleinschroth of Hastings Lake were recent visitors to several parts of B.C. for two weeks. In Vancouver, they visited Erika and Irwin Radke; in Surrey, David and Lorelie Kleinschroth, on the Island they motored to Duncan to pay a visit to [illegible] who lived in Ministik and her daughter, Jean Galpin.

Brian and Peg Perusini were winners of the car raffled by the Tofield Legion recently. Lorne Farmer was a $500 winner in the same raffle.

Jim Pot of the Niagara Peninsula in Ontario has come to give his cousin, Bill Vandermeer, a helping hand for the summer months.

Pearl Griffith of Military Point on Cooking Lake was a recent visitor with Theresa Regier.

Alice and Ewald Klatt of Edmonton spent the weekend with Shirley and Clifford Herricks and family, also attending the strawberry tea.

Many of the men of the area attended the auction on Saturday of Gloria Kortman of Lindbrook.

Medically Speaking

by Dr. Bob Young

A laser beam, because it can deliver energy to a [illegible] point, is capable of cooking an egg from across the room. This property of the single wavelength, in-phase pulse of light is being utilized in an increasing number of medical applications.

The beam, when it strikes tissue, has the capability of either cutting, coagulating or destroying it. Which it does depends upon the energy level of the beam, its color (wavelength), and other factors. In medicine energy levels from .001 to 100 watts are used.

Most well-known, perhaps, is the use of laser energy in eye surgery. Here a coagulating laser is used for "spot welding" a detached retina back in place — a quick, effective method that replaces the previously excessive blood-vessels and small hemorrhages in the eye (often found in diabetics) can be treated.

Internally, lasers are used for destroying cancers and other growths. A tumor of the vocal cord was previously very difficult to remove without damaging the cord and altering the voice. Now, using a fine laser and controlling it with a microdissector while visualizing the tumor with an operating microscope, the tumor can be destroyed without harming the vocal cord.

The new technology is also used to stop bleeding in the lower esophagus and stomach. Care must be taken to prevent a hole being burned through the wall of either organ, and a surgeon is usually standing by in case this should inadvertently occur. If successful, the laser technique makes open heart surgery unnecessary.

In a similar manner laser instruments are being used to destroy tumors in the lung and in the bladder. As research continues and new sources of laser light are found, other beneficial uses are sure to be discovered. Each will become increasingly common as the equipment is manufactured and physicians become trained in its use.

Medically Speaking is published in cooperation with this newspaper and the Alberta Medical Association.

Spilstead district news items

The inclement weather caused the cancellation of the Wildrose District Camporee, so our Scouts are now looking forward to the new date in the fall.

The weather also caused problems with the Pathfinders cycling camp as they went out on Friday and returned home Saturday without unloading their bikes.

A donation of pots and pans and cooking utensils was made by Stan Dammers to the camp box for the Cubs, Scouts and Pathfinders.

The Spilstead Community League will be holding its monthly dance on Saturday in Spilstead Hall. Tickets are available from any member or at Ed's Store.

There will be a church service at Spilstead Hall on Sunday at 11 a.m. The Cubs, Scouts and Pathfinders will be entering with a candlelight parade. Anyone who plans to stay afterwards is asked to bring something for the pot-luck lunch which follows the service.

Do you have any overdue bills arriving on your doorstep? If you are receiving notices or phone calls from collectors telling you that they are considering legal action against you, you're likely wondering what that would involve.

Suing a borrower for the amount owing is a method creditors use to collect on overdue credit contracts (charge cards, loans, etc.). This legal procedure takes place through the Court of Queen's Bench or, if the claim is for $2,000 or less, it is usually handled by the Provincial Court, Small Claims Division.

In either case, the creditor files a Statement of Claim. The debtor is notified and given the opportunity to file a defence. At a court hearing a judge makes the final judgement. If the debtor does not file a written defence, or if he does not appear in court, a default judgement may be made against him. A default judgement shows that the debtor has not objected to the creditor's claim.

If the creditor is granted a judgement in his favour, he uses seizure and/or garnishment procedures to collect the debt. In the case of seizure, the creditor, acting through the Sheriff, seizes goods to the value of the judgement given by the court. Garnishment is a court order that the creditor presents to the debtor's employer. This allows part of the debtor's wages to be paid to the court. The money is then disbursed to the registered creditors.

Under the Alberta Supreme Court Rules, creditors using garnishment are limited as to how much of a debtor's salary or wages can be claimed each month. A debtor can claim the following exemptions from garnishment:

1. A married person can keep $700 a month.
2. A married person with dependents can keep $700 plus $140 for each dependent each month.
3. A widow, widower, unmarried mother, or divorced person with dependents can keep $525 plus $140 for each dependent each month.
4. An unmarried person can keep $525 a month.

A garnishee summons is legally valid for only one pay period. If the amount of the wages or salary available for garnishment in one pay period is not sufficient to satisfy the debt, the creditor must apply to the court for another garnishee summons for each and every pay period until the debt is paid off. The costs associated with garnishment are quite high and are charged back to the debtor. It is in the debtor's best interest to pay the debt off as quickly as possible.

In addition, garnishments are expensive for the employer to process. They may be the cause of poor employer/employee relations. Section 102 of the Employment Standards Act states that:

No Employer shall dismiss, terminate, lay off or suspend an employee for the sole reason that garnishment proceedings are being or may be taken against the employee.

While this protection exists, it is difficult to enforce. If a person has had a legal judgement made against him for an overdue credit commitment, it would be in his best interest to avoid causing the creditor to use garnishment as a method of debt collection.

You might try negotiating a repayment plan with your creditor. If that is not possible, you should contact Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs for information on the debt repayment programs they administer — Debtor's Assistance Board, or Orderly Payment of Debts.

If you would like more information on credit, or on debt repayment programs, contact our office at: Alberta Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Crossfire

by Rev. John Lemaigre
Camrose Mennonite Fellowship

There have always been, and I expect there always will be, people in our world who feel burdened and are weary. Sadly, there are people in our churches too, whose Christianity makes them feel the same way, the exact opposite of the freedom it should give

Jesus has said in Mat. 11: 28—30, "Come to me, all you who are weary, and burdened, and I will give you a rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

What a wonderful promise Jesus has made, that He would replace those heavy yokes with yokes that are easy to live with, and burdens that are light to carry. He could, and can, do that because of who He is. He is the Son of God who is gentle and humble in heart, and who will never burden down those who come to Him. He came to carry crosses, to remove unmanageable burdens, and to offer hope to the oppressed and to the crushed in spirit.

Our relationship with Jesus, and what it offers us, is precious. It is meant to produce rest in the souls of those who listen to His offer — "come to me", "learn from me", "take from me". Take Him at His word. Throw off your burdens and pick up the yoke He gives. You will find the Divine, Strong, Loving hands and arms of Jesus helping you to carry your burdens, and you will, as He has promised, find rest for your souls.

ZAMBIA GIVES AGRICULTURE HIGH PRIORITY

Canadians are helping the African country of Zambia develop an economically-viable agriculture industry.

In 1979, four agricultural economists from Agriculture Canada began a five-year program concentrating on training Zambians in highly-technical areas. Currently there is a shortage of such experts in the country.

The training includes at least one year of on-the-job training under a Canadian economist, university training in Canada to at least the Master's degree level in some field of agricultural economics, followed by more on-the-job training. These experts will then take over the agricultural development in the country.

Glean

"Saskatchewan is really just Alberta on its way to Manitoba!" These words, from Dick Evans, a Glean representative from Saskatoon, opened up a meeting I was at last Thursday night. The meeting was held to further inform one on the properties of Glean.

Glean is a chemical which holds much promise for broadleaf weed control in Alberta. It controls most of the standard broadleaf weeds, even Canada Thistle. However, its action on buckwheats is not as strong as some other broadleaf herbicides.

Generally farmers have been very enthused about the weed control they have achieved with Glean. However, they have been worried about the residue left in the soil. Current label directions restrict the growth of oilseeds such as canola on land which had Glean sprayed on it three years previously. For example, if one used Glean on wheat, then they would grow two more crops of cereals before canola.

Some new information has come out on Glean residues. This information states that Glean residues are a problem only when the soil pH is higher than 7.0 and organic matter is less than 3.5 — 5%. Since our area generally has lower pH's than 7.0 and a fairly high organic matter, Glean residues are generally not a serious problem in our area. As such, canola can then be seeded within two years instead of the current three year restriction.

As such, possible new label registrations for Glean may state that Canola can be grown within two years of Glean application if your soil pH is less than 7.0 and if the organic matter is higher than 3.5%. This means you will have to soil sample to find out your soil's pH and organic matter.

Glean is one of the many new chemicals which is currently on the market. To choose between the various chemicals you need to know all you can about each. If you have any questions on Glean or other chemicals, feel free to call us at Ryley for further information. Good luck with your spraying and bye for now.

Note to All Seed Growers:

Agriculture Canada will no longer accept late applications for inspection of pedigreed seed crops. They are short of staff and can no longer do this due to time constraints. The deadline date for rapeseed is June 10 and for most other crops, including cereals, is June 25. In addition, inspectors will no longer be able to accept applications from growers for additional fields when they arrive to inspect fields from which there are applications.

Reminder of Dairy Field Day at Colin Lang Farm at Viking

Mexican Vanilla

Although gourmet cooks may lick their lips and swear by Mexican vanilla, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warns that it might contain a toxic substance. Arizona authorities recently found 8 out of 19 samples of the vanilla contained coumarin, a poisonous food additive banned in the United States 30 years ago.

Coumarin comes from a bean pod called the tonka bean that smells and tastes like vanilla and costs much less than real vanilla extract. Used in drugs as a blood thinner and in rat poison (it causes the rodents to hemorrhage to death), coumarin is only detectable through chemical analysis. The FDA warns that it can cause liver damage and that "the person who takes a little gamble that the amount of coumarin in the bottle isn't enough to be toxic is playing with loaded dice."

Corrections

There were two errors in last week's issue of The Mercury.

One was concerning the Sea Cadet annual inspection held in Holden on May 31st. The cadets donated $50 to the Ryley Legion building fund, not the over $700 figure that was reported.

The other was contained in the Tofield Fire Department open house article. The "jaws of life" device was donated by Crestline Ambulance for the weekend only, not permanently as this article had indicated. It is exactly like the one for which they are now raising funds. It will cost approximately $6,000.

The Mercury is sorry for any inconvenience that may have been caused by these errors.
